So you were hated by your fellow University Students as well. I'm hardly surprised.

I on the other hand remember the classes in quantum mechanics, Linear Algebra, Geology, Waves, computer science, and AstroPhysics and Calculus.

No, I advocate the continued Extermination of the AmeriKKKan state.

If I were an AlQueda operative then AmeriKKKa would be suffering from a very odd series of disasters, fires, power outages, train derailments, bridges and buildings that just fall down all by themselves, food contamination, cattle illnesses, mysterious crop failures, etc.

The only good Libertarian is a dead Libertarian.

I am not a Liberal, but an independent, and yes all moral people raise a glass and a smile with every AmeriKKKan death in Iraq and Afghanistan. The more AmeriKKKan death in those nations the better.

Haven't I made myself clear enough on this matter?

I also give my permision to any Iraqi or Afghan person or party to kill 100,000 AmeriKKKan civilians in retribution for the 100,000 Iraqi civilians that AmeriKKKa has murdered in Iraq.

Don't you consider that reasonable Justice?

The only good KKKonservative is a Dead KKKonservative.

Atmospheric Noise {Global Noise} -vice- Man-Made {Local} Noise
-and- Shortwave Radio Signals
- - - What a Shortwave Radio Listener (SWL) Should Know About Them All . . .

1 - Atmospheric Noise {Global Noise} and Radio Signals
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Atmospheric_noise
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Noise_floor
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Noise_level
In general a larger {longer} Antenna Wire will gather more of whatever is out there -and- You will hear more {Louder} Radio Signal Sound plus the Atmospheric Noise {in the Background}
- - - Yes - Everything is Louder.
* This is why many Shortwave Listeners (SWLs) keep their Shortwave Listening Antennas about to 35 Feet : So they do not Overload their Radios with Signal and more Noise.

2 - Man-Made {Local} Noise and Radio Signals
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Man-made_noise
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Noise_%28radio%29
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Electronic_noise
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Electromagnetic_radiation
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Signal_noise
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Noise
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Radio_noise_source
In general a properly designed larger {longer} Antenna Wire will gather more of whatever is out there and you will hear more {Louder} Radio Signal Sound -but- The Local Noise

pick-up will be less
- - - Yes - The Signal-ot-Noise will Improve and You will Hear More Radio Stations over the Local Noise
{in the Background}
* This is why many Shortwave Listeners (SWLs) using
"Low Noise" Design Concept Shortwave Listening Antennas
can have longer Antennas beyond 50 and 100 Feet : So they can fill their Radios with Strong Radio Signals and less {Lower} Noise.
OK - So What Is The Answer To : Building a Better
"Low Noise" Shortwave Listening (SWL) Antenna ? ? ?

I don't really know which is the best indoor antenna. The Sony ANLP1 sells for around $100.00 and has been used successfully by several SWL's. But if the best is what you have in mind there is a german company that makes one for several hundred dollars.

I've had very good results with a window antenna. It's A simple wire around the inner perimeter of a large window held in place with cup holder suction cups. Another inexpensive and good performing antenna is to run wire around the baseboards of your listening room. Just tuck it behind the carpet.

I'm thinking electroluminescent lights may end up taking over for home lighting, though it'll look different from what we're used to.

But for now, it's still a little expensive.

A problem with LEDs is they project light on a relatively narrow beam.
A normal light bulb is omni-directional.

One way of dealing with the color balance of LEDs is you can mix in some red ones with the white ones, but again, the narrow beam from an LED makes it tougher to get even light with even color balance.

I've done some LED lighting at my observatory, and at home. At the observatory, we put a recessed red LED every 4" in the molding for the dome trim ring so they tend to light the walls and floor. We also made an LED lectern light for star charts.

At home, I've got white ones that illuminate a stairwell, and I've got some mounted on the top of a beam that are aimed at the cathedral ceiling in my kitchen for background lighting.

I use regulated DC power supplies so they can dim quietly, though with my antenna a couple hundred feet away, I doubt it would matter.

Greetings:

I am in the midst of a project involving the Grundig YB 400 and hope to find alignment details and component placement information from the service manual (which seems to be very hard to locate). Does anyone have access to this manual? I have scanned images of that manual's fold-out schematics (found in a Web forum) and have located many components by tracing but many are hard to find (many are under shields) and alignment info is lacking.

Thanks much,

Michael

Drudge Report has moved on and I couldn't find the reference to G.Bush, but I do recall that his father or grandfather was jailed for helping finance the Nazis in 1940 (?)
However, I did come across an interesting reference to his relations with European royalty. This article claims that the Republics of Europe (France, Germany, Russia) are against the invasion of Iran, wile the countries headed by Royalty (Britain, Holland, Spain,Bulgaria) want an invasion of Iran because the Royal familes own a big portion of the oil business and they want the oil.
I remember years ago when I was working on a subcontract for Shell, a problem came up with a British supplier who decided to renage on his contract after we had finished the design. "What do we do now?", I asked the boss. He replied , "Don't worry, we'll have it straightened out in a week" Sure enough, in a few days, a quite elegant phd from The Hague (the site of government and Royal Dutch Shell in holland) arrived by air, looked over our designs was happy, and flew back to the Hague.
"What happens now?" I asked. He replied, " He will go back and tell the directors of the company that if they don't fulfill their contract he will destroy the company, their personal assets, their wives and family, and the ass that is ouside their gate"
"Holly Mackerel," I said, "Who are these people?"
" Don't you know?" he said. "He's dealing with the Rothschilds."
" Well I'll be....," I said.
" Oh yes," he said, "All the big banks are hooked up with the oil companies. Shell with Rothschild, Esso with Rockefeller....."
He mentioned a few others but that was 30 years ago and I don't recall them all.
But I digress. The link is:

As others have pointed out, the 31 meter band is 9 MHz. 14.9 is too low in the 19 meter band. There's usually nothing there below WWV.

How poor is the image rejection of your receiver? You may be picking up some sort of digital utility or CODAR wave radar as an image from 2*IF above the V. of Russia signal, or you may be tuned to the image of VOR.
I have that problem on my $40 Grundig FR-200 on signals in the 6 MHz band.
Sometimes, the image at the frequency .9 MHz lower gets a cleaner copy than the direct frequency. Fun with cheap receivers...

Try tuning .9 MHz higher and see if either you 1) get a better copy on
V. of Russia, or 2) a louder version of the interference.

So. are we going to get to hear John "records" Landecker, Larry Lujack, Fred Winston?? And will Brandt Miller take time off from weather over at NBC to do a gig for LS again. Funny -- I can still remember their line up -- but I'm missing one other jock, I think he did mid-day early afternoon?? Does anyone remember the line up from the 70's??

Trying to keep up with the British news about the ex-operative they have now arrested for the poisening of Litvinenko -- It appears he had ties to the Russian media as well. Wondered what everyone was thinking about this?? The handling of the accused could start quite a fire storm and set world wide precedences.

5. How much does our understanding of global warming depend on the hockey stick graph?

The short answer is "very little." The hockey stick graph constitutes only one among literally thousands of pieces of evidence that have contributed to the present scientific consensus on the human influence on global warming. In 2001, the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) concluded in its authoritative third assessment report that "there is new and stronger evidence that most of the warming observed over the last 50 years is attributable to human activities." As one climate expert observed: The IPCC report Climate Change 2001: The Scientific Basis is 881 pages in length. It weighs 5.5 pounds and contains over 200 figures and 80 tables. It would be absurd to think that the weight of its conclusions rests on any one figure or table; rather it paints a convincing picture in the totality of its science, as noted succinctly in its title."[1]

We are now observing real changes due to higher temperatures. Here are some examples:

* The Mt. Kilimanjaro glacier, which has survived the past 11,000 years, is currently at risk of disappearing by 2020 if present rates of melting continue;

* Enormous tracts of Siberian peatlands, with vast stores of carbon, are beginning to thaw and release carbon dioxide and methane into the atmosphere;

* The Larsen B ice shelf in Antarctica has lost volume as large chunks (some as large as the state of Rhode Island) have recently broken free and melted;

* The annual surface area of Arctic sea ice has declined eight percent over the past several decades;

* Large-scale increases in ocean temperatures have been detected over the past 45 years; and

* Plants and animals are changing their habitation ranges, sometimes dramatically, such as robins and mosquitoes in the Arctic that were previously unknown there.

V of Russia has a transmission on 13635 that opens at 7pm Pacific Daylight Time. Reception is usually quite decent although it tends to weaken after 8.30 PM PDT.
I have not heard the chirping although there is a constant chirping from 12075 to about 12200. Russia used to have a transmission at around 12000 but I haven't heard it for a few years.
An alternate freq. is 9435 but there is a noise band in my condo wiping out that one.
I really doubt that anyone is trying to jam VOR.

Dear Mr. Shank,

No one is intentionally jamming the Voice of Russia World Service, at least in the United States, and certainly at your location. Have you been listening to shortwave for a long time? Your comments, regarding Coordinated Universal Time and the Meter Band/Frequency readout on your radio indicate to me that you may be new to the hobby.

The Voice of Russia World Service transmits to the United States starting at 0100 UTC (which corresponds to 9:00 PM EDT and 7:00 PM MDT). Their broadcasts continue until 0500 UTC and they use a few frequencies in the 31-meter band and the 22-meter band. Please note that there are no world band transmissions at all between 14900 kHz (14.9 MHz or mc/s) and 14995 kHz and, of course, none by the Voice of Russia. WWV (Time Signal) broadcasts on 15000 kHz and is, of course, instantly recognizable.

VOR's signal quality is variable. Some nights the transmissions are of "local" quality but other nights they are weak, often with extreme fades. Some frequencies come in better than others. But, at least at my location in southern New Jersey, the signals are always "in the clear."

If, in fact, you are actually hearing something around 14.9 MHz, it may be some sort of "image," in which case you may be hearing this image at or near a utility transmission. This might explain the "chirping" sound you note.

Have you had your radio for a long time? Was it purchased new at the time? It is possible that the radio, especially if bought "used," may be in need of some service.

Check < http://www.primetimeshortwave.com > and < http://www.wrth.com > for the latest English-language broadcast schedules. VOR's schedules can be found here: < http://www.ruvr.ru/main.php?lng=eng&w=129&p= >.

With all due respect, if you are interested in the shortwave hobby (for news, political commentary, entertainment, or whatever), I STRONGLY suggest that you purchase a few books on the subject. PASSPORT TO WORLD BAND RADIO, and the WORLD RADIO-TV HANDBOOK (WRTH) are two yearly publications which will give you a very good overview and extremely useful information regarding listening to world band transmissions. There are a number of other books on the varying aspects of the subject as well, many good ones of which are available at Universal Radio < http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/book1.html >.

I like listening to the Voice of Russia too. Their "Jazz Show," Fridays at 0230 (Thursday evenings at 10:30 PM EDT - 8:30 PM MDT) is a particular favorite of mine, as are their various classical music shows. "Moscow Mailbag" is just about everyone's favorite!

I hope the above was of some use to you.

Best,

Joe

Dear Bruce (any everyone else here),

Within the last two months General Electric and Konica Minolta have signed a strategic alliance agreement to develop and commercialize Organic-Light-Emitting-Diode (OLED) devices for home and industrial lighting applications. It is their intent to have these devices on the market within three years! OLEDs can be fabricated in sheet form which is flexible (imagine THAT!), thin, and lightweight. This form of lighting may eventually be incorporated into walls or ceilings, eliminating the need for separate light fixtures (table lamps, and so forth). Color temperature can be anything desired! They've got it NOW; they must develop inexpensive manufacturing techniques for it to become commercially viable.

Obviously those two companies are quite confident in their ability to do so.

And of course the OLED's energy usage is but a small fraction of what is used in todays bulbs.

Best,

Joe

Last I knew, a problem with OLEDs was a limited lifespan compared with regular LEDs.

Yeah...wall panels would light uniformly. No hot spots, no attenuation with distance.

There was a lot of talk about electroluminescent plates when I was in high school. Not heard much since. But it makes far more sense for room lighting than anything else.

Also has the benefit of allowing redecorating with the toss of a switch.

I have one of these on a 20' pole and it works like an old car radio antenna, i.e. really good on MW at night. I use it with an R-75 and can get George Noory on at least 10 dial positions.

The response was too excessive. A little flowers of sulfur would have readily taken care of the mercury. Or a commercial preparation such as Mercsorb would have worked quite well. Both would have been much cheaper then bringing in a Hazmat team.

MOSCOW, Aug. 25, 2006 (UPI) -- Russian scientists predicts a period of global cooling in coming decades, followed by a warmer interval. Khabibullo Abdusamatov expects a repeat of the period known as the Little Ice Age. During the 16th century, the Baltic Sea froze so hard that hotels were built on the ice for people crossing the sea in coaches.

The Little Ice Age is believed to have contributed to the end of the Norse colony in Greenland, which was founded during an interval of much warmer weather.

Abdusamatov and his colleagues at the Russian Academy of Sciences astronomical observatory said the prediction is based on measurement of solar emissions, Novosti reported. They expect the cooling to begin within a few years and to reach its peak between 2055 and 2060.

"The Kyoto initiatives to save the planet from the greenhouse effect should be put off until better times," he said. "The global temperature maximum has been reached on Earth, and Earth's global temperature will decline to a climatic minimum even without the Kyoto protocol."

He said that on Aug. 19, he was riding in a Humvee with a group of soldiers from the 400th Military Police Battalion when a soldier accidentally fired his weapon. He said the bullet ricocheted inside the vehicle and hit him on the side of his helmet.

"It felt like a big hammer had hit me on the head," Nashi said.

Another bullet punctured the Humvee's gas tank, and everyone began a mad the confusion, he was hit with the butt of a rifle and knocked unconscious.

The New Jersey Air National Guard already does that for us.

Recent CO2 rises exceed worst-case scenarios

- Catherine Brahic - 22:00 21 May 2007 - NewScientist.com news service

The world's recent carbon dioxide emissions are growing more rapidly than even the worst-case climate scenario used by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, say researchers.

The team, led by Michael Raupach of the Australian Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organisation, looked at the growth of CO2 emissions and found that emissions growth suddenly accelerated in 2000. During the 1990s, emissions grew by 1.1% per year on average, but the number shot up to 3.3% between 2000 and 2004, when the study ended.

When they compared the recent emissions trend to those the UN-backed IPCC drew up as its "worst case scenario", the team found the reality was at least as bad, if not worse.

The team then examined the changes between 1980 and 2004 in factors such as population, economic growth, energy efficiency and carbon efficiency (the amount used per unit of GDP). From this, they were able to determine why CO2 emissions accelerated after 2000.

They concluded that the rise in CO2 emissions is not due to a growth in global population, but a reduction in global efficiency. "We are not getting more efficient at using CO2 in the way we projected," explains co-author Corinne Le Qu&#65533;r&#65533; from the University of East Anglia in the UK.

I wouldn't use a match. I would use capsules of glycol and the delayed reaction of glycol and potassium permanginate as the trigger. No mechanical hastles, just launch one of these into a forest or a wheat field, and in a minute or two depending on how much permanginate you add, the mixture will burst into flame.

How many thousands of square miles of fire do you think one determined person could start over a long weekend?

It's an interesting question isn't it?

No problem, I'm just trying to maintain at least one level of

If you are too stupid to use a match then I don't think that you are smart enough to get any farther with anything else. I think that your best bet would be to drink glycol....Ethylene glycol.

You see, fool. A match would go out and wouldn't survive the fall from the aircraft. So you drop something that will catch fire after it hits the ground.

How many thousands of square miles of fire do you think one determined person could start over a long weekend?

It's an interesting question isn't it?

Hi Mike: Ya, I picked that up as well at the same time. But I didn't make a note of it. I should have. For some reason, I seem to remember it being 6885 khz and not 6855khz. But you're probably right and I'm probably wrong since I made no note, and I am sorry to say, my memory is not quite as sharp as it used to be years ago.
Used my Kaito KA1102. Here in southern Ontario, near Niagara Falls, where I live it seemed to come through pretty loud and clear. My Sony ICF 7600D heard it nice and clear too. And even my cheap, tiny Degen DE11 also picked it up really well right off the whip.
First time I'd heard a numbers station in a while.
Regards, Cato

Only 1, but you would have to find that head among 300 million others, and then manage to get close enough to take a swing - and survive.

Another interesting question. How many oil refinery fires do you think could be cuased by flying a radio controlled aircraft into the sides of refinery oil tanks?

Doesn't matter.

But a more interesting question is how many trains could be derailed by a simple track riding device that stops every 10 miles and uses an oxygen lance to burn through the tracks.

Not quite completely of course. We don't want to loose electrical continuity and set off any alarms.

Now a more interesting idea is pondering how the simple act of lifting via, helium filled baloon, an electic cable on either side of some power distribution lines to short them out, could produce large power grid disruptions.

I wonder how many contaminated fruit flies would have to be released while driving around Florida in order to devistate the fruit industry there.

Any ideas KE4ODD? They are fun little creatures, I kept a batch of them flying around my kitchen fed on used tea bags of all things, and the occasional bit of orange peel and for a treat a full half an orange. They are very prolific and no doubt could be easily raised by the tens of billions.

Load up the trunk of your car, start a small 12 volt van and blow them into the air from a 2 inch hole in the back of your car.

Drive around, the orange producing region, touring the area, taking in a little sun, smile at the pretty girls.

Smuts, Rusts and other fungal spores are pretty easy to culture as well, but a little more difficult to distribute since they don't have wings. An aircraft would be particularly effective.

Don't you agree?

1520. A different way to reduce common mode noise,

A "new" idea for RFI reduction:

Since we are getting a new roof installed I removed all of my antennas. There has been a slight delay, so I installed a temporary antenna and was disappointed
at the high level of RF noise.

"Common mode" RF noise is my biggest noise issue.
W1HIS's ground breaking "Common Mode Chokes" goes a long way toward getting rid of this noise.

At my location there are two stage RFI filters on all the
"in house" low current RF noise sources. The higher current RF noise sources have single stage RFI filters.

The incoming AC mains power is bypassed with parallel 0.01uF and 0.001uF(1000pF) 2KV low inductance capacitor. We also have a "whole house" over voltage clamp at the breaker panel.

Every light switch has a 0.001uF cap across the contacts.

For the most part devices in our home have been chosen for minimum RF noise generation.

The telephone line, non DSL, has a common mode and differential filter and over voltage protection immediately after the NID. NID "Network Interface Device", AKA "Demarcation Point".

My ground is much better then the typical ham or SWL.
I have a 3/8" copper tubing buried ~2' and bonded to the utility (AC mains and telephone) ground. All of the antenna masts have their individual ground rod and are bonded to the utility ground.

In spite of all of these steps, I still have residual common mode noise. This is made much worse by the temporary antenna I amusing. To verify the noise was in fact common mode, I turned off the AC at the meter base and disconnected
the telephone line at the NID.

I removed every battery from every smoke alarm, alarm clock backup. So my home was "disconnected" from the world. And my noise level was much lower.

My test receiver was a R2000 with a gel-cell providing operating power. There were no other devices in the home powered up.

I did this on an afternoon when the power company was scheduled to change our power transformer.

I was monitoring when they disconnected the transformer.
And other then a short nasty "buzz", there was almost no effect on my received noise level.

So most of my noise was still self generated.

Bummer!

Will gave me a 250W Topaz "Ultra-Isolation" AC transformer that has less then 0.005pF capacitive coupling between the AC mains input output. I can not verify this because I can not measure capacitor values below 1pF.

At 30 MHz the 0.005pF has a capacitive reactance of 1061033 Ohms.
This is over 1 million ohms. At lower frequencies this values increases.
Any common mode noise coming through the transformer will have a 1M resistor in series.

Since my entire SWL setup draws less then 250W, more like 10W,
I decided to try the Topaz and lift the ground.

The NEC treats transformer as separately derived power. This means
I could lift the common ground and connect the neutral and ground at the output of the transformer. And connect the new "ground" with my house ground.

The house ground was not continued through to my room ground.

I retested after the power and telephone connections were restored and was surprised to find the RF back ground noise was almost as low as when the power was disconnected.

I intend to do some additional tests when the roofers are done and I am using my normal SW antennas.

This week end I will be testing this at a friend's house who has a more
"standard" ground situation. He has a modern home, 2005, with 2 ground rods, per NEC requirments , DSL, Cable TV and isn't the slightest interested in SWL. I know from prior experience his home is a common mode RFI noise hell hole. It will be interesting to see what, if any, change
the Topaz will make.

Please note that Topaz Ultra Isolation transformers are expensive.
Standard isolation transformer will not provide this level of RF
common
mode noise isolation.

These are actually good words of advice. If it's off-topic, don't post it. If it's off-topic, then don't reply. ANd then any cross-posting doesn't matter because you won't be replying since it's off-topic.

The more you continue with junk threads like this, the more you damage the newsgroup.

And at this point, you don't really seem to be participating in rec.radio.shortwave, just using it to post off topic stuff.

Find somewhere else to do it.

The burried 5/8' copper tubing circles our entire home.
The 4 corners all have 8' grounding rods.

All connections to the ground ring are Calwelded.

This is a suplamental to the required NEC ground.

The utility has the required 28' grounding rods.

The entry point for antennas and the mast for VHF/UHF disk cone has a 8' ground rod and this is bonded to the ground ring and the utility grounding rods per the NEC.

The Dallas Lankford "15' Relay Switched antenna"s each have their own 8' grounding rod, but becuase
there is no direct connection to the house ground system. By "no direct connection", I mean the secondary of the transformer is isolated with no connection to the primary.

I changed "ground rods" to "grounding rods" at the request of our commercial electrician.

You can't afford a real host? Here are a couple reasonable ones that I've worked with. You can also have a chat room and you get an e-mail server with your domain name.

http://www.startlogic.com/gives you 300 GB server space and 3000 GB transfer per month without any popup or banner ads. $6 a month

http://ipowerweb.com/products/index.html gives you 300 GB server 1526. Magnavox D2935- need repair!

I've got a magnavox D2935 that, admittedly is in rough shape. Despite that it is a great radio, I really like the audio quality and it can resolve a lot of stations my 7600gr misses. So I want to keep using it. But there is a problem. Suddenly, after listening to the radio for a couple of minutes the tuner pops back to 520 khz. I change it back, it's good for a few minutes, then wham, right back to 520. This just came on all of a sudden last night while enjoying a musical respite from the usual Radio Habana Cuba blather.

Any ideas what might be happening, or better yet, anyone feel comfortable enough with this model to attempt a repair?

Thanks.

I have one in paper form, plus access to a scanner.

Alignment is only one b/w page per language, but the PCB drawings are 6 pages using color which won't be too easy to compress. I may need to resort to DjVu format (no experience with creation so far). It's likely to take a few days in any case.

Wow!, Thanks for your reply!

I am very pleased with the program called 'IrfanView' (freeware but well engineered) for scanning and image processing in Win32; it has most every compression format imaginable and also a large library of image processing plugins and yet its footprint is quite small. I have scanned many color manual pages and compressed to jpeg (or compressed TIFF) in IrfanView with good reduction in file size (typical 20MB TIFF down to 500-900KB jpeg) without loss of fidelity (to the eye). Irfanview is at http://www.irfanview.com.

If you would like, you can upload scans to our incoming ftp area (or email is ok too as there is no size restriction on message length); please email me at 'msg _at_ cybertheque _dot_ org'.

I inquired from 'Eton' in Palo Alto (current owner of the Grundig radio line) for a service manual for the YB400 or G4000A (the relabeled name) and received a reply that 'we do not have the manual, it is unavailable'. I wonder what this could mean ;-)

Thanks so much again,

Michael

Aside from all of that...

I can almost see abortion in cases of rape or if the mother's life is in danger. BUT...

The way I see it, if you don't want to have a kid, don't have the sex. For those who can or will use such things, there are contraceptives to keep you from becoming pregnant. For a woman to just have an abortion because she doesn't want the child, or just because a child would be inconvenient is wrong. People (ALL PEOPLE) need to take responsibility for their actions, and deal with the consequences thereof. Life is not a free ride devoid of responsibility, and I hope it never becomes one.

Sure it is. Its humen Life. The DNA is INDEPENDENT of that of the mother.
The child has its OWN DNA. And Id like to see your data that includes "most obstetricians". Most obstetricians try to DELIVER babies, not kill them.

If you look at the H500 dial it is an "airplane" dial. He is looking at the wrong end of the pointer. When one end is pointing to 14.9-15 the other end is pointing to 9.4-9.5. VOR definitely transmits in that band at the time mentioned.

The H500 dial is not the most clearly marked.

Jesus H. Christ Terry, if I had to do all of this to keep my noise low I'd probably give up radio! I used to work with the guy who originally designed the Topaz high isolation xfmr. He's older then I am (ancient!) but an expert on this stuff. I t doesn't surprise me because I think most of the noise that gets to the radio is carried on the AC line, either as common mode or in some cases differential mode.

I have a Sony ICF7600GR world band radio and was wondering what portable antenna I could use that has good reception on all of HF and uses the 1/8 External Jack plug on the receiver, but isn't like $50+.

I have been playing with a homemade dipole antenna with a mono 1/8 plug and two wires going in either direction, but even though I know people put shortwave antennas up in trees, I learned one good thing, and that is make sure the tree(s) that you use, are defiantly trees you can easily climb, if your wire gets stuck up in the tree, LoL. I had that issue the first time I used my dipole, with the one tree, not wanting to give the antenna wire back.

Unless something is an active antenna, or a tuned loop, basically any expense is going to go for cosmetics. Because you can't really come up with anything that isn't just a piece of wire.

So you'll pay for some neat little gadget that lets you wind up the wire.

But it won't work any better than some wire.

Most people do get by with a "random length of wire" (which mostly ends up being a relatively short piece of wire for most of the frequencies in the shortwave range). In the old days, they'd actually string it up out the back window and to the tree in the backyard, something that may not be available to many nowadays, living in apartments and such. So you just let the long piece of wire hang out the window, or lie on the floor. To the tree has the advantage that it's outside and away from the house, but there isn't anything really better about the antenna compared with a similar length of wire lying on the floor.

Keep in mind that many portable receivers are intended for use with the built in whip, and if you start adding too long a length of wire it will start overloading (because they put in lots of amplification to make up for the lack of antenna length on the whip).

Few will bother with actual dipoles, since they are frequency selective and they will start getting long the lower in frequency you go.

Does anybody know of a cheap shortwave radio that tunes from 3Mhz to 30Mhz or a fixed frequency radio. Thanks

Hello all,

Why does SW radio comes up with noise the moment I dial beyond AM. I have tried tuning with several radios (including Sony 2010) and for some reason noise level seems to increase around that band. I tried with both AC adapter and plain old battery.

Any ideas?

TIA

EVERY MAN"S {SIMPLE} WINDOM ANTENNA FOR SHORTWAVE {RADIO} LISTENING (SWL)
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Shortwave-SWL-Antenna/message/13342
Make a simple Windom Antenna out of a 50 Foot piece of common of Two (2) Wire "Speaker Wire"
* 1/8" Mono-Phone-Plug
* Solder one end of the Speaker Wires to the Plug Leads
* Measure out 18 Feet from the Plug and Tye an Overhand Knot in the Speaker Wire.
* Starting at the Far-Unsoldered-Ends of the Speaker
Wire - Split the Two (2) Wires apart dow to the Knot.
* Leave the One {Long} Wire measured from End-to-Knot at 32 Feet. Tye a small 1" Bowline Knot at the End for Rigging.
* Trim {Cut} the other {Shorter} Wire measured from End-to-Knot at 25 Feet.
* Tye a small 1" Loop Bowline Knot at each of the Ends for Rigging
* Rig with some #18 (1/16") Nylon Braided Mason Cord
"Chalk Line" comes in ~ 250 Feet Spools.

The-Bottom-Line for this Windom Antenna is :
* 18 Feet Vertical Legs for the 22 Meter Band
* 25 Feet Long Horizontal Arm for the 31 Meter Band
* 32 Feet Long Horizontal Arm for the 41 Meter Band
* 57 Feet Tip-to-Tip for the 75 Meter Band
NOTE - Put the 'cheap' #18 (1/16") Nylon Braided Mason
Cord in the Trees and around things and not the Wire.
TIP - Instead of using a 1/8" Mono-Phone-Plug -use-

Hey, if I had any sense I wouldn't be listening to SW in the first place!

I got the idea to use the Topaz as an "ultra-isolation" transformer from an experiment here atr work. In carpet land, where the suits work, they had noise in the video from their projection system on some lap tops.
I thought it was comon mode noise leaking through the switch mode PS. Sure enough the Topaz got rid of all the video "fuzz"/noise. When I quoted them the price for a new Topaz they chokec. HEy their video, their problem.

A life time ago I installed a Topaz in a audio recording studio that had a lot of common mode and differential noise that standard EMI filters only reduced. This was out in the country and there was a welding shop about 1/2 mile away upstream on the RECC power line. The studio owner had deep pockets, so in desperation I advised him to buy one.

William Fieldstone found two NOS at a flea market/junk store and paid $10 each.

Our friend the radio astronomer used low capacitance/shielded RF isolation transformers to decouple/isolate her receiver from her antenna.
I have asked her for the design of her transformers. She had to wind them herself as nothing "off the shelf" worked.

The ground perimeter started as a joke. A friend's brother runs a salvage operation. Several years ago I helped him recover his tax data from a crashed hard drive. When he asked how mcuh, I said something like;
"If youever come up with several hundred feet of 1/2 or 5/8 copper tubing
keep me in mind." He tore down a school and found 3 100' rolls of 5/8 copper. Another friend is an electrician and had rented a ditch witch, but his customer had to delay the work. Since the witch was already paid for, he came by and we trenched around the home.

Insane?

Yea.

But it didn't cost me anything except some labor.

The ground ring improved my MW reception to the point where a 10W TIS station 25 miles away popped up out of the noise.
And the RF levels increased to the point where my MiniCircuits 9:1 transformer, power divider and the input RF transformer in my R2000 all produced IMD.

Many multiband radios (at least the better than bottom quality ones) use higher gain stages above the AMBCB. This can either be an extra stage of RF amplification, or a separate one, or an attenuator for frequencies below 1.7 MHz. More gain usually equals more noise (from outside sources).

A small portable reasonably priced antenna would be a simple length of wire attached to a 1/8 plug. Radio Shack sells a wire antenna on a small reel for about $10.00.

My suggestion would be to stay away from amplified antennas mostly because they take up more room in luggage.

I think that this part of the spectrum, due to proximity to and being a second harmonic of, the AM MW band, is prone to quite a bit of noise from AM MW sources, both receiver-generated and radio station-generated. The combination of transmitter splatter, station harmonic radiation and receiver mixing products gives you a mess to deal with. Here in the SF Bay area, the bands are about useless for all the junk that comes in.

David could well be right by suggesting that you cut back on sensitivity, either using the controls on the radio or using a "weaker" antenna; however, this area is one where sensitivity is useful for heairng the weaker stations that inhabit these bands, so you may just need to choose the cheap method of moving your receiver to a remote location far from AM transmitters.

I have received a complaint from one Michael Black , a self-appointed policeman of the net, stating that I was bad to reply to your off-topic post about Bush.
I have reviewed Black's web activities and he is a prolific poster, averaging about 30 a day on a variety of websites. He has recently got his jollies from telling people bon various sites to either post on topic or go away.
Before I compose a reply, I would like to find out if his post is going to make you change your posting practices in any way and if you have any thoughts on the matter.

Here is a song by the German group Birth Control called "The Work Is Done".

It's a typical anti Vietnam war song, but at 2m11s in there is a piano piece whch I am convinced was the callsign of a radio station.

http://www.swldxer.co.uk/theworkisdone.wma

Can anyone confirm which callsign it was?

The Work Is Done, The Work Is Done
The Work Is Done I Have Just Killed A Child
You Know Down In Vietnam
It Needs No Father, It Needs No Mother
It Needs No Parents Anymore, Cause You Know, Cause You Know The Work Is Done

So Gimme Shelter, So Gimme Shelter
So Gimme Shelter Uncle Sam, I'm A Lonely Boy
I Have Just Killed Someone
So Gimme Shelter Uncle Sam, I'm A Lonely Boy
I Have Just Killed Someone

I Love The Peace, I Love The Peace
I Love The Peace And If I Killed The Enemy They Said
I Have Done Nothing Wrong
Do Me A Favour, Do Me A Favour
Do Me A Favour Just Believe That I Feel What I Say
Life Is Hard Enough

So Gimme Shelter, So Gimme Shelter
So Gimme Shelter Uncle Sam, I'm A Lonely Boy
I Have Just Killed Someone
So Gimme Shelter Uncle Sam, I'm A Lonely Boy
I Have Just Killed Someone

PIANO CALLSIGN?

So Gimme Shelter, So Gimme Shelter
So Uncle Sam Look What I Have Done
I'm On My Way
I'm Going Home

Eco-friendly lighting company EcoLEDs.com
http://www.ecoleds.com/Index.html
http://www.energy-daily.com/reports/EcoLEDs_Announces_Brightest_Commercial_LED_Light_Bulb_Yet_999.html
Has launched the "Brightest" LED Light Bulb ever made available to Consumers in the United States. Using just 10 Watts and a single LED Component made in the USA, the LED Light uses just 1/10th the Electricity of an Incandescent Light Bulb and reduces CO2 Emissions by 9,070 Pounds over its life.
- - - IIRC the Mercury 'content' to CO2 Output is about 0.01% for Coal : So 9070 Pounds of CO2 Emmission would be about a Pound of Mercury in the Air and much more in any Solid Waste from the Burnt Fuel.

EcoLEDs 10-Watt LED Light
* Fits a 'standard' USA AC Light Socket [E27]
* Replaces a 'standard' 100 Watt Incandescent Light Bulb
= = = 1/10th of the Power Usage
http://www.ecoleds.com/CAT21417.html
* Lasts 50,000 hours -vice- 1500 Hours for the newer typer of 'standard' 100 Watt Incandescent Light Bulb = = = 33 Times the Life
CBA # = 330

The Price is high at an MSRP of $129 -but- at $1 per 'standard' 100 Watt Incandescent Light Bulb : The CBA # of 330 would roughly indicate a Cost of $330 and a resulting Savings of at least $200 over a the 10 Year expected Life of the LED Light Bulb.

True, so do monkeys, lizards, toads, worms and pigs have dna. Big deal. DNA is not life either...it is only the coding if applied properly to cells that will result in a living individual.

Do you even read messages before responding? I said a pregnancy was a state for a woman. The woman is pregnant as in carrying an unborn fetus. She is not life, nor is the state of pregnancy life. The fetus does have the potential to become an independently living individual. At many of it's earlier stages it does not have the ability to become an independently living individual. You said a pregnancy was human life, which is of course completely wrong - it is only a state of carrying an unborn fetus for a woman.

By golly, I think you are right... before, I was running on batteries.
I plugged in a cord and, so far today, no tuning problems.
I will take a look at the the voltage, as it would be nice to run this radio from batteries. At least I know where to start. Thanks!

I was suggesting perhaps that the front end of the radio has so much signal in the MWBC band that the AGC was maybe kicking-in and quieting the radio.

So instead of finding a place to discuss the weather (such
local newsgroups), finding a place to discuss politics (such as a political newsgroup), and finding a place to ask about their computer problem (such as a computer newsgroup) they post away.

>From all this you seem to say that the internet is evolving to sites where people know each other quite well and are leaving the specialist sites, and you don't like it. I only post on this one site and it is quite enough for me. There are reasons why rec.radio.shortwave is evolving (it has over 1000 registered) because it is a hangout based on some original common interest. The topics are those of people who are interested in shortwave but like to talk about other things. You intrude with your uninvited hectoring but to no avail.
One definition of insanity is to do the same thing over and over and expect a different outcome. Keep it up and you will drive yourself nuts. The times, they are a-changing. Remember King Canute.

Thanks for all your inputs so far. Actually what surprises me is there is not a whole lot to hear around that frequency band, at least using my gear. I suppose if I use a professional gear with a decent antenna, I could probably pull out some DX stations.

Same holds true around 7 MHz during early afternoons; noise is simply annoying. When it gets dark, though, band becomes relatively quiet.
In contrast, 15 MHz band and 21 MHz band are free from noise. And of course when I move around 100 MHz, audio fidelity is superb. :-)

TIA.

I don't have a soundcard Simon. Is this a callsign sent in morse using the piano or is it an interval signal played on the piano?

A friend dropped some items by yesterday afternoon. He is an electrician who is retiring and will be moving south this fall to to avoid the snow. Among the stuff was a box of 12 TDK ANF-106U RFI filters.

TDK makes a RFI filter that plugs into a standard USA duplex power outlet and has single AC recepticle for the device to be fitlered. The unit is rated at 6A and it has a built in breaker.

I did a quick net search and found them at several surplus sources, <http://www.sphere.bc.ca/test/acfilters.html#catalog>

A quick test shows them to be pretty effective.

Not as good as the 2 stage Curtis filters I have mentioned, but the ease of use makes them attractive.

These fitlers can be stacked. That is one plugged into to another for twice the RFI supression.

The song has a piano piece at 2m11s which is the Chopin "Revolutionary Etude" that was the interval signal for Radio Warsaw.

There was no Morse involved.

Most portables switch from a ferrite antenna for MW-LW reception to a whip antenna for SW. The whip antenna is more sensitive to electrical noise.

It's also possible you have a local noisemaker which starts up around 2 Mhz. In my case, I have several radios which work with wire antennas only and I don't have any such sharp peaks in the noise.

Wasa Up !

For Shortwave Radio Listening (SWL) the Sony AN-LP1 Active {Shortwave Only} Antenna works very well with the Sony ICF-SW7600GR AM/FM Shortwave Radio as a "Travel Kit" for the Hotel Room, RV'ing or Camping
when you are On-the-Road :

there's very little info on the net about the Panasonic 5410. How well does it receive?

My first SWR was a Wards Airline multiband, awarded to me by my dad on my 12th birthday. It was pretty deaf. I got very familiar with WWV.

My next multiband was a dog too, but it had good FM and some VHF. Managed to hear a few security companies and, if memory serves, the wx voice repeater at the local airport. Much more fun that just WWV.

Ah yes, sci-fi and shortwave... that is a natural combo.

RedPenguin,

I have a 7600GR and what I use is either the AN-LP1 or a random wire.
I picked up a small spool of 100 ft of stranded hookup wire from Radio Shack and attached an alligator clip at one end. At first I just stretched it across the length of the house and that worked okay. Next I took the other end of the wire and looped it around the windows on the back porch- three large rectangles- then fed it to the radio and was suprised to hear it actually did better. Shortly after I set that up I copied CHU 3333 more clearly than I ever had on that radio. it is isn't measured precisely and I am not using a balun (though Random Wire Antenna II will have one), i was hoping for a little quarter wave action, I guess it worked out okay.

I'm also interested in a slinky antenna, since at that level of complexity a wire is just a wire and portability and ease of storage is almost more important to me. (Although I have read something about it functioning as a 1/10th-wave antenna?)

I've had two of them, one died, the other one I sold. I thought the first one had a problem, so I stupidly bought another one. It wasn't any better.

Not much good except as a noise magnet, picked up every light switch, dimmer, transformer, furnace igniter and A/C compressor relay on the block. The neighbor's furnace igniter made all kinds of racket on the AN-LP1, but was barely audible on any of my other antennas. The other neighbor's family room and kitchen lights made a huge SNAP as they were turned on and off(They were right below the LP1). The slinky dipole, that blew the Sony out of the water, in both lack of noise, and with much better signal strength just heard a moderate "click". That slinky was the best antenna I ever had, I hope the new one is half as good. from 14MHZ on down, it was amazingly good, it was much better than my Alpha Delta Sloper.

I used the AN-LP1 as a backup antenna at first, and later on, as an antenna for one of my 5 SW desktops I had at the time. Out of a Slinky dipole, a sloping Windom Dipole, both outside and high up in the air, a dipole in my attic about 10' off the ground, and a CB antenna with the shield pulled off at the receiver, the AN-LP1 at 40', was a distant fifth place. I'm back to 5 desktop receivers, and I'm not messing with another active antenna this time. Especially for 105 bucks. That will buy a LOT of coax and wire for making my own antennas. I bought a metal CB antenna for the higher freqs. A CB antenna is very useful for Utes above 15MHZ or so. With the shield pulled, it's not bad anywhere.

Not much left to hear there anymore. Back 40 years or so ago, there was a lot of short range use for maritime traffic on 2-3 MHz, along with the 1.8 MHz LORAN signals. But LORAN moved down to 100 kHz.

the local maritime stuff went to VHF FM 156-159 MHz, (and to cell phones since then). There used to be full duplex (two frequencies) marine to landline telephone stations that were almost constantly busy. They went to VHF, and I think have since been discontiued, as they needed a live operator to take the number and dial it, and that costs way too much these days.

All that's left seems to be some point to point utilites, and the hams in 160 meters (who are only there when conditions are good).

I don't totaly agree with you about this... OK, a good external antenna will (can) be much better than the ANLP1. BUT, as a traveling antenna it is a fair buy ! You cannot always strung an external wire in an hotel ;-).

At home I'm using an external wire antenna with both a Sangean 909 and a Sony SW100 (no tabletop...). This antenna usualy gives better results than the AN-LP1... but sometime I uses the Sony antenna to get read of the noise. It really depends on your local conditions.

My 2 cents...

Charly

Damn...that goes back some. My first radio was a Remco crystal set.

From there it was a crystal radio made by Bell Manufacturing in St Louis under the Futura brand.

Then a Trancel 8 transistor. Followed by an onslaught of AM transistor radios.

The first shortwave was a Hallicrafters S-53A. Followed in short order by my grandfather's Hammarlund BC-794 (Super Pro).

The Halli, I gave to a kid who's father I worked with to start his own swl hobby.

The Super Pro got a recapping, and sits on the desk next to my RX-350, and an assortment of hundreds of others.

It got out of control pretty fast. And thank God, stayed out of control.

Yep, the AN-LP1 is a good match for a wide range of portables, offering a noteworthy improvement over the internal whip.

And I agree, the AN-LP1 is very convenient for travel.

Quite a pity that Sony discontinued that one.

I love my AN-1. I have used it for years, on my motor home, trailer that was parked, and I have it up here in the Philippines and it has worked great for me and my Grundigs (Sat 650,800 & YB400).

Thanks, all.

I decided to go ahead and got a Sony Loop AN LP1 from buyfromjapan. Seems like some of you are recommending Sony ICF7600GR as a good matching portable, I don't have a small SW rig as of yet.

My favorite rig is a six tube 25 pound G500 -=Trans-Oceanic=- suitcase. Which is theoretically portable as it runs on AA and D dry cells and has its humongous WaveRod whip for an indoor antenna. But imagine trying to keep it from being dinged up while carried on a crowded city bus! I don't believe the old Zenith adds 'its a boon when traveling'.

Anybody think a Grundig G5 is as good/better/not as good portable as Sony ICF7600GR? The G5 has lots of alpha memory slots!

While I've heard that the G5 is a good radio, I've not used it firsthand. I do have the '7600G and '7600GR, however. For its class, this is a highly distinguished and capable series of radios, and I would recommend the '7600GR wholeheartedly. The synchronous detection circuitry of the '7600GR really provides a distinct performance edge over many other portables in this price range. Synchronous detection can often prove invaluable in the rejection of adjacent channel interference in crowded bands.

You'll likely find satisfaction with either the G5 or the '7600GR.
Overall, though, I'd recommend the '7600GR over the G5.

Way back in 2000, Bush and his secret aide George H. Scherff Jr. were together on election night using a giant Tesla Coil to pull the chads off of ballots in a key precinct in Broward country, Florida. Somehow this story got convoluted, resulting in an identity crisis surrounding Bush.

Well, glad that it's workin' well for you. I'm sure there can be instances where the AN-1 might come in useful; that's why I've held on to mine. In my listening, though, I've found that the AN-1's gain is a bit lacking. In a parked RV (when there's no time to string up a wire antenna), I've generally found better options. Rigging up something from various bits and pieces can also provide desirable results: compared to the AN-1, I can get far more kick by rigging up something like an MFJ-1956 12-foot whip on 3/8" x 24 magnet mount fed into an MFJ-1045C amplified preselector. Works fine with the portables, too, since you can reduce (or turn off) the gain on the '1045C as necessary to prevent overloading.

http://www.mfjenterprises.com/products.php?prodid=MFJ-1956
http://www.new-tronics.com/main/html/mobile_accessories_page_3.html
http://www.mfjenterprises.com/products.php?prodid=MFJ-1045C

The H-800 is a nice option, as well, if one isn't in for the constant tuning of a preselector. While RVing, there are various options for a getting a bit of height to the antenna when you're in a temporary location. I've used the TS-88B tripod in conjunction with a telepole from the Mast Company.

http://www.ultimatesupport.com/s.nl/it.A/id.899/.f?sc=8&category=28
http://www.tmastco.com/TelepolePage.htm

After removing the upper adjustment clamp on the TS-88B, the bottom segment of the 32 foot telepole can be fitted over the TS-88B. The telepole can thereby sit extended upon the TS-88B, with the tripod providing the required support for the pole. I've utilized this configuration a number of times with pleasing results. When using this set up with the H-800, I clamp the H-800 to the telepole on either the third or fourth to highest segment (forget exactly which) using the adjustable clamp provided with the H-800. Once an unexpected storm came on at night, but this set up weathered it well, and even in the winds that followed the storms departure, there was no toppling over or any other unfortunate event, despite the fact that the arrangement was not supported by any guy wires. I believe the antenna was about 25 feet or so up from the ground using this arrangement.

I've also used this tripod + telepole configuration to support light wire antennas, like the Par EF-SWL. Again, with RV-listening, the antenna can, for the sake of convenience, simply be put up by hooking the Par transformer to a magnet mount atop the vehicle. This would require an adapter or two: when I set up in this way, I use a 3/8"x24 male to SO-239 and a male-male PL-259 connector. The tripod-telepole then provide height to the antenna from the outer end.

In any case, just some antenna stuff to throw out there for everyone. I play around with these things from time to time, and although I'm certainly no expert on antenna theory and that sort of thing, I generally end up with something rigged up that can pull in some interesting and unexpected stuff.

Best of listening to you out there, Burr.

I guess my real point was any antenna of any size will be better than an active one, at least the 3 or so I have had over the years. I know someone who lives in a condo, and they have 2 outside antennas that are nearly invisible. They have to be replaced every two years or so, but it takes 15 minutes to do it. A neighbor allows him to put the other end of some very thin wires to his chimney, and the condo assoc. never saw them until last year. They actually were sane and said they didn't care!

Before those outside antennas were put up, he used a hunk of wire out on his porch, and some active antenna, can't remember what the brand was, that he bought in the UK on vacation about 15 years ago.

Thanks, yes I am starting to think you are correct in that synchronous detection is probably more important than labled memories. The little Sony is probably the best match.

I do wish the cable on the AN-LP1 was a bit longer than 12 feet, because its probably not possible to lengthen it without messing up some operating parameter of the antenna.

Was a "foxhole" radio, like this http://members.aol.com/djadamson7/articles/foxhole.html I wound the coil on a toilet paper cardboard tube and used a safety pin/pencil lead and razor blade as the diode detector. It amazed me! I can still remember the first thing I heard, using a window screen as the antenna. That was over 50 years ago. Thanks for the reminder!

Mine is National Panasonic 5410. Actually it is a MW & 3 SW band cassette recorder. Found a site that has little info about this radio:

Still working great!!!! What about you?

Yea, some very nice pictures. A good linnk

The microphones are nice, but I bet a lot of money. Too much for the budget operation I run. A guy I know turned me on to a $3 element that they sell over at rad shack. I took all the guts out of my Turner +2 cb radio and stuck one of those rad shack elements in. I stuck a pair of 3904 transistors in for an amplifier. I run that into an alesis nano compresser and a very small (3 frequency) equalizer. I have been accused of broadcast quality audio.

microphone $5.00 used (came with cb radio but I scrapped it out)
nano-compressor 35.00 used Rad Shak element 3.00 graphic eq 0.00 Free (had to solder in a new 12v regulator)
misc stuff 5.00 Foam in a can that Tim-Tron sold me on

So for less than 50bucks I got some real nice audio. Of course I run a NEO-later modulator. It's a high frequency phase shift full bridge zero voltage switched resonant modulator. Followed by a push-pull resonant inverse class F rf deck.

thanks for link Cuhulin

Regards,
NEO

BDK - That was the impression that I got
when you wrote " the AN-LP1 at 40' " ~ RHF

Using a 102" CB Whip Antenna with the Sony AN-1 instead of the 59" Telescopic Whip Antenna can improve it some what.

Better is using a Pair of Diamond Loops made of Wire that are 24" on the Side. The Diamonds are set perpendicular to each other in an "X".
All the Wire Ends come together at the Whip Mounting Stud. Wood or Plastic is used as the Cross-Arms (24") of trhe Loops. And the Loops are suspended from the Top-Apex with the AN-1's Head Unit hanging at the bottom.
The two same size Diamond Loops can be scaled down or scaled up by simply keeping the Sides and the Cross-Arms the same length :
12" Sides by 12" Cross-Arms = 21" High Diamond
18" Sides by 18" Cross-Arms = 31" High Diamond
24" Sides by 24" Cross-Arms = 42" High Diamond
30" Sides by 30" Cross-Arms = 52" High Diamond
36" Sides by 36" Cross-Arms = 63" High Diamond
Some use a bare solid Aluminum Ground Wire for the smaller Diamonds; and others use Insulated Stranded Hoop-Up Wire for the Larger Diamonds.

IMAGE - Look at the Top of the RF Systems DX-One Professional Mk II Omni-Directional Active Vertical Receiving Antenna for an Idea what the 'shape' of the Two Diamond Loops looks like.
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/sw_ant/1246.html

FWIW - There are Theories about "The Why" of using the Two "X"ed Diamond Loop Elements
-vice- The Single Vertical Whip Element
-but- These Theories are beyond me.
And- The Reason for the use of a Whip Element is that it is simple, practical, durable and best value.

as always more than you wanted to know ~ RHF

Wasa,

The Sony AN-LP1 Shortwave Active Loop Antenna
is designed to be used 'indoors' usually laying flat against an 'outside' looking Window with the Radio nearby on a Table or Nightstand. Twelve Feet (12') should get you from here-to-there in most rooms.

Michael S.,

Never heard of a Slinky being consider as a 1/10th-Wave-Lenght Antenna before.

FWIW - Here are Two Low Cost "Portable" [Do-It-Yourself]
Slinky Shortwave Listener (SWL) Antenna Ideas :
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Shortwave-SWL-Antenna/message/13366

1 - Basic "Slinky" Great-Out-Doors {Camping}
Horizotial Shortwave Listening (SWL) Antenna

For an "Out-Side" Shortwave Listening (SWL) Antenna the Full Size Slinky can be Stretched-Out like a the typical Horizontal Wire Antenna -and- Fed with an Insulated Wire or Coax Cable. Rig with Nylon-Poly Mason Line.
TIP - Run the Nylon-Poly Mason Line through the Center of the Slinky's Coils and use the Line to Support the Slinky. Measure this Center-Line to 20~22 Feet to 'optimize' the Length of the Antenna.

NOTE - The standard Full Size Slinky has about 100 Turns with a Diameter of 2.75 Inches and a Circumference of 8.64 Inches for a Total Wire Length of about 72 Feet.

How Long Does a standard Full Size Slinky Get ?
I Calculate that the Optimum "Stretched-Out" Length
of a standard Slinky would be about 22.7 Feet.
- - - Coil Spacing = Diameter of 2.75 Inches [1:1]
- - - 100 Turns = 99 Spaces between the Turns
= = = 2.75 Inches X 99 Spaces = 272.3 Inches = 22.7 Feet
TIP - A Full Size {Standard} "Slinky" Dipole would measure about 45.4 Feet Tip-to-Tip.

2 - Basic "Slinky Jr." In-the-Room {Travelers}
Vertical Shortwave Listening (SWL) Antenna

For an "In-Door" Shortwave Listening (SWL) Antenna the Smaller-Shorter Slinky Jr. {Junor} can be Stretched-Out like a the typical Vertical Wire Antenna from Floor-to-Ceiling
-and- Fed with an a short Insulated Wire or a short piece of Coax Cable. Rig with Cup Hooks, etc.

NOTE - The Slinky Jr. {Junor} has about 85 Turns with a Diameter of 1.875 Inches and a Circumference of 5.89 Inches for a Total Wire Length of about 41.7 Feet.

How Long Does a Slinky Jr. {Junor} Get ?
I Calculate that the Optimum "Stretched-Out" Length of a Slinky Jr. {Junor} would be about 22.7 Feet.
- - - Coil Spacing = Diameter of 1.875 Inches [1:1]
- - - 85 Turns = 84 Spaces between the Turns
= = = 1.875 Inches X 84 Spaces = 157.5 Inches = 13.1 Feet
TIP - A Smaller Size {Junor} "Slinky Jr." Dipole would measure about 26.2 Feet Tip-to-Tip and could 'fit' under the Eaves of many Houses and be {Out-of-Sight}.

Yes, we all know that YOU are using a crappy HTML interface to access usenet, which is NOT part of the World Wide Web. It is an older, text only system, but no one expects YOU to understand. This is not a website, it is a world wide network of news servers, but you can't be bothered to learn the right way to use it. Rage on, moron!

Interesting poll. Replace Air Band with DRM capability. Add PBT, definitely.

It's a pity that when Eton went on to the E1 that it wasn't made DRM capable. Or that a DRM-capable version wasn't made available...

Yeah, the Satellit 800 is essentially a Chinese-made budget-version of the Drake SW-8, albeit with a speaker and tone controls that provide much more pleasing audio than that of the SW-8.

Surprisingly nice radio, the Satellit 800, provided one gets ahold of a good unit (preferably one that has been refurbished by Drake). I bought one used for $200 a few years after production stopped. I never considered buying one new, given the various stories abounding regarding various quality control issues (and anyway, I already had an SW-8, so...).

It was the noise it picked up, the signal strength wasn't bad, just the snapping, popping, and buzzing. I actually stuck a hunk of wire on it after the whip disappeared and it made little difference. I wish I had the ambition to build a TFD antenna, a friend had one for several years, and it was great, very quiet, and in the winter, was almost spooky with the lack of background noise. Amazingly weak SSB and RTTY signals could be copied 100% on it. The one B&W or whoever it is that makes one is just too expensive and needs some upgrading to last.

You should only use specially rated capacitors for this type of application. You understand that a capacitor on the mains supply draws current to heat the dielectric as a consequence right?

You should also have a fuse of circuit breaker between it and the mains supply in case it shorts. The lamp cord is not rated to what the house circuit breaker rated at of course.

Here is the skinny on the subject.
<http://my.execpc.com/~endlr/line-filter.html>

He also describes a snubber network, a series resistor and capacitor that is a good way of suppressing switch noise from rectifying diodes in power supplies. The diode switch noise on power supply DC outputs causes the hum on portable radios.

I've used them for low noise Faraday cage work. You have to filter all lines in and out of the cage.

I got the 1107- it's a great little radio and has quite excellent sound coming through the front speaker. It's a nice change up from digital push buttons. It's not as sensitive as the 1102 or the 1102, but it does sound a hell of a lot better.

Me too. Mine was a blue color not black but otherwise looked just like this one.
<http://www.peeblesoriginals.com/vintage/Remco-crystal-radio.jpg>

My Dad made a sloping wire antenna out the back window. I could pick up a number of stations very well with it.

Later on I bought a radio kit with a crystal mounted in a piece of lead for one contact and it had a Cat's whisker contact for the other side.
You had to find a "hot spot" on the crystal for the radio to work, which was a spot were the crystal operated as a diode. That made it a challenge to get it working at first because you had to have the radio tuned to a station and find the crystal "hot spot" to get anything.

That's because it is a utility coming into the house. If power supply outputs are connected to earth ground you need to pay attention to all other DC supplies connected to the system in other equipment. They no longer "float" relative to each other but have a specific relationship to earth ground.

I have new in box the following:

Pro 94 scanner Dual Trunking

Pro 97 Scanner Triple Trunking

Pro 528 Scanner Triple Trunking

These scanners have never been out of the box. I would like to trade for analog SW receivers. All offers will be considered.

Looking for Yaesu FRG 7, any Hallicrafters, Allied, Lafayette, Realistic 160's, Zenith Transoceanics, etc. Let me know what you have to offer and we can talk. If you have any sitting around and they are in good working condition contact me. Not looking for any fixer uppers.

Will sell these scanners if I have to, but I love to trade and would like this to be first option.

Thanks,
Tom

The caps in the breaker box have 1A fuses in series for protection.

The caps in the light switches have 10 ohm, 1/10W, metal film resistors.

And yea I used the correct caps, I would hate to burn our home down.
My wife would be mildly miffed.

I am writing up a piece discribing my experiences at home and at another house detailing the positive effects the Topaz ultra-isolation. It is too bad there is no simple way to build broad band RF isolation transformers with less then .5pF capacitance between the primary and secondary.

Isolation of at least 10K is needed to knock common mode RFI down low enough to not be a problem. The trouble wil going with series inductance on the shield, or even harder, balanced feedline is the interwinding capactance allows the noise to sneak past.

Yep, that was it. Mine was blue, too. Still have it somewhere.

I made some minor mods to it to sharpen up selectivity. I was kind of surrounded by 50k blowtorches, so it was easy to be overwhelmed by a single signal. My grandfather showed me how to pad the input to bring some of that overload under control.

I built one of those in the Cub Scouts. Got tired of it pretty fast, and went straight to the two tube set in the Lions (or was it Webelos) handbook. That didn't last too long after my mother ran over it with the Kirby. I was listening to it at the time. She did a lot of shit like that, too. She killed more model airplanes than Von Richtofen's.
Average life of a modelling project at my house from the time I opened the box, was about as long as it would take her to go to the closet and get out the vacuum cleaner.

The S-53A was too big to get into the beater bar. That's when it finally ended.

1708. Looking for RS DX 440 or Sony 2010

I have new in box the following:

Pro 94 scanner Dual Trunking

Pro 97 Scanner Triple Trunking

Pro 528 Scanner Triple Trunking

Would consider trading the one of these for DX 440 or all 3 for a Sony 2010

These scanners have never been out of the box.

Thanks,

Tom Montgomery

Technically, its NOT a utility, because they are not regulated by the PUCO.

Thanks, but I've worked with switchers in radio design for over a decade. The quoted article referred to a cable modem, which is bonded to earth ground at the ground block. That means that the power supply is also bonded, and any RF noise generated by the switcher will be radiated by the shield, on its way to ground. The higher the frequency, the worse the problem is.

BTW, Vicor sucks! We were using them in the Microdyne receivers, till their quality fell through the floor. I tested a half dozen other brands before we settled on another supplier that was low noise, acceptable build quality, the switching frequency not near one of the multiple IF frequencies, and that shut down properly on overload or short circuit. One defective Vicor supply set a $20,000 radio on fire and did over $10,000 damage.

Oh, BTW, I worked on the 48 volt powered telemetry radio that's aboard the ISS.

OK, then it is because it is a service coming into the house.

That would be tough as the switching frequency is not that well controlled and since they are usually PWM then harmonics would change depending on the load presented to the supply output.

Well, that would make it a floating supply alright.

Sounds like you had a rough childhood.

When I was a kid I used to hook up a high fidelity amplifier and speakers to a crystal set. With no limit on the bandwidth local stations sounded great.

Greetings,

I have a Grundig Satellit 800 and have fun with it. Not knowing a lot about SW Radios, I am curious about how my radio compares to other high quality, modern radios. So here is my question, what are the top, modern, currently available radios? I understand that there is no black and white answer, and it depends on X, Y, Z. If money is not an object and portability is not desired, what are the generally accepted best radios? I am interested in your subjective opinions.

Thanks.

RHF, Actually I may have found the culprit. I had my 2010's antenna alligator-clipped with about 30 ft. long wire made from 300 ohm surplus TV twin lead. Once I removed the clip and just used the built-in whip, much of the noise is gone; at least not terrible noise anymore. The effect of removing the external wire is a drop of 2 LED in the signal strength meter with slight drop in reception quality.

In my location, below BCB, there are two stations. One is 231 kHz and other is 318 kHz. There is a giant 100 kW transmitter on 792 kHz nearby. And next local station is at 5005 kHz. So, not a whole lot to hear in tropical band except few from China & India.

By the way my location is Kathmandu, Nepal.

TIA

I tried that, as well. I didn't have a standalone stereo, or high fidelity mono, system. But I did have a portable phonograph by Travler.
I put the headphone output of the crystal set into the top of the volume pot on the phonograph. The impedances were close enough that it worked pretty well.

Of course that was when stations were required to maintain a pretty high standard of performance, and bandwith was 50-15k. That made a huge difference.

I made a high fidelity tuner out of a table radio a few years later.
Took the audio directly out of the detector of an AA5, and ran it into the Aux input of an amp out of a Philco hi-fi set. The speaker was a 12" 2 way from Radio Shack in 27cu.ft box I'd built in the basement.

Now THAT was some fine listening.

She wasn't allowed to drive, after she t-boned a squad car in front of the library. She was in an eggshell white '58 Impala convertible with red leather interior, running a Corvette drive train with 2 4bbl Carter WCFB's.

"He was in the way," she explained to the judge.

I had done some work on the Delco in-dash. And put a better speaker in the rear panel of the back seat. As well as the twin rear deck antennae.

We could listen to WLS at the Lake of the Ozarks.

I discovered the same thing when I was restoring a loose coupler crystal set from the early teens.

Even using some hi-Z magnetic headphones, I was startled by how "transparent" the sound was.

I guess this is why Heathkit offered a "hi-fi" AM tuner that was a crystal set (albeit a crystal set with a bit of selectivity).

If you can keep the batteries up, or power from one of the fairly readily avialable battery recharger/replacement supplies, you can get the benefits of wideband with selectivity using a TRF like an Atwater-Kent, Freshman, Sun or similar. Takes come careful matching, and you have to keep the tubes fresh, but it sounds REAL good into a decent amp.

There is a chip...I forget the designator...but it replaces the ZN414 family....an AM TRF on a single chip, running off a single AA cell. It will run a month, non stop, on a single cell.

A GREAT tuner for AM listening. If you can find an AM station that's not covered up with digital hash these days.

In my opinion the most underestimated receiver out there is the Ten Tec RX320D. It's a PC-based receiver, which may turn you off, but when paired with the right software it works wonders. I use mine with RX Plus software, which is pretty nice. I'm no longer restricted to four or five filters, but have 30+ filters to choose from...a huge advantage. You get the very best DSP filtering out there, along with a variety of extremely effective noise reduction capabilities. You get digital modes like psk, rtty, hf fax, SSTV and DRM (if you're into that sort of thing). The software includes useful databases, spectrum display, four VFOs (yes, I said FOUR), S-meter, tons of memories, scanning capability, the ability to record and save audio files, etc. Build quality is superb. The exterior is METAL, not plastic.

So far as bang for the buck is concerned, nothing can touch it. Nothing else even comes close. And despite all the bitching and moaning you hear about PC-based receivers, the real beauty of them is that the software is constantly improving and each major software upgrade is sort of like getting a new, better receiver. I find it fascinating.

Dear Blake,

Virtually any modern receiver will "run rings" around what we had back in the "old days" regarding performance, versatility, and reliability. To answer your question, just about all the radios priced at or above $500.00 (which would include the Eton E1, the radio most comparable to the Satellit 800) would be an excellent performer. Someone here has already listed most of them.

But in my (admittedly subjective) opinion, and also being an owner of a Satellit 800, the very best performers are tabletops and the best performing of the tabletop communications receivers for both DXing and program listening is, without doubt on my part, the AOR AR7030 Plus, suitably configured by the factory. The sound quality from this radio is nothing short of superb (and can be sent to an audio system), its performance on weak signals is as good as any, and its reliability is superb, at least in my (three year) experience. This radio can also be operated via a computer if the user desires. Jan Arkesteijn has written a great (free!) operating program called "RxWings" and this makes operating the radio a snap. It even adds some facilities, such as scanning (with parameters the user chooses), that are not available on the receiver itself.

There are other radios (Watkins-Johnson, Ten-tec) that are certainly as good in performance (though not necessarily in sound quality) but they are far more costly. Software-defined radios are also great performers but note that, as Windows (or Mac) operating systems change, it is possible that some year down the road, unless you keep a "legacy" computer, your SDR may not function.

The Satellit 800, though certainly not constructed to anywhere near the standard of the AOR or most other tabletops mentioned on this thread, and, consequently, probably not having the service life of those sets, nonetheless is a very fine performer and its operating design is second-to-none. Some people have wished the set had a few more facilities, such as passband tuning, a notch filter, and an RF control, but really this radio has all the functions necessary to achieve good reception on the overwhelming majority of shortwave broadcasts (and its MW, LW, Air band, and FM sections are excellent also). Adding more functions would serve only to increase the price. Should those facilities be truly desired, they are available on other radios.

In other words, in my opinion, the Satellit 800, except for its construction quality, is as good as any, and far less costly than most.

Note too that the ICOM IC-R75, though it has some design shortcomings and its sound quality is definitely not as good as the AOR or some others, is still a fine receiver at a very good price. And, should the owner desire to improve its performance, there are many options and modifications available for this radio, a good number of which can be effected by the owner.

As someone else posted here, ALL of these receivers (including the Satellit 800) deserve only the finest antenna that can be had. This can't be stressed too much. Obviously antennas will differ depending upon the circumstances of the owner, but you want the absolute best you can get.

Your Satellit 800, with a great antenna, will easily outperform even the most expensive and best-performing tabletop if the latter is fitted with an inferior antenna. Over the years, this has been demonstrated time and time again.

Your question was of great interest to me and, I'm sure, many others, and I thank you for it. I hope my answer was of some interest to you.

Best,

Joe

There was Olsen electronics stores in the area at the time. I bought a nice mono solid state amplifier and power supply to drive it along with speakers. I build the cases for the amplifier and speakers.

I just purchased a Eton E5 radio with SSB. When I switch to SSB mode, I can never hear anything. What am I doing wrong? Should I be listening only to specific frequencies?
Any help would be much appreciated.

try the amateur frequencies for starters

in daylight try 7125-7300 or 14150-14350
at nightime try 3600-4000

there are other frequencies for sideband transmissions, but this should give you a good start.

In my case computer noise has not been a problem. When it is a problem, the best thing to do would be to figure out where the noise is coming from and attack it direclty. The way I look at it, DSP is for kinds of noise that you can't simply get rid of. Ditto for the ANC-4 phasing unit that I sometimes use. They're like a last line of defense.

If you "turn on" SSB, you should be hearing something. Because any signal will still be receivable. The difference is that straight AM signals will have a beat note. CW signals will not be an on/off thumping, they will have a tone to them.

From the other side, you will hear SSB signals even when you've not got things turned on for SSB. You won't be able to understand them, but you should be able to make out that someone is speaking. One way to describe SSB signals with no BFO turned on is that they are overmodulated, too much modulation and not enough carrier, which is indeed what is happening. When you switch on the SSB mode, it introduces a local signal to beat against the incoming signal, and thus translate it down to audio.

SSB is not a different band. It is a form of modulation, and sprinkled throughout the shortwave bands. It is rarely used for SW broadcasting, so you aren't likely to find such signals there. As someone pointed out, it is the dominant voice modulation used by hams. And it is used by military, and other two-way communcation. But you have to look beyond the SW broadcast bands to find them.

The good news is that, while operating systems are changing, so is receiver control software. If it turned out that RX Plus, for example, couldn't function with Windows Vista or some other operating system, I'm sure that some other program could and in fact I'm sure that the creator of RX Plus would act quickly to release an upgraded version of his software that would work with the new operating system.

I also recommend the 20M amateur phone band (14.150 - 14.350 MHz) during the daytime as a good place to practice receiving SSB. First leave SSB off and tune in a station transmitting voice. You won't be able to understand it if it's SSB. Then when you have it tuned in AM, turn on the SSB. You still won't be able to understand it. Now with SSB on move the - Fine + wheel around. You want to approach the signal from one side or the other with this wheel and slowly tune toward the middle. As you come in from the correct side, the signal will be high pitched but you will start to understand the speech.
Continue turing the wheel slowly until the pitch becomes normal. If it doesn't work, move the wheel all the way to the other side and slowly go back toward the middle again. If still no luck, try tuning the main tuning dial up or down 1 kHz and try again. It takes some practice but if you have a strong signal you can play around until you tune it in.

I have the 320 model and computer noise has never been a problem. In my humble opinion, it's the best radio available in the under 800-1000 dollar range. The frequency database lets you save all the settings in use at the time of reception of a particular station, making re-tuning easier.

The old 50%, 20% and 10% are obsolete tolerances.

Since almost everything made today uses surface mount, 5% is the worst tolerance you'll see. 1% is common, .1% and .01% are seeing more use in critical circuits. We were using 1% resistors and capacitors in 95% of the locations, and 1% capacitors in critical RF, IF and Video circuits.
(Audio was treated as narrow band video).

In fact, the 1% resistors were cheaper in 2000 than the 5% they replaced.

Where is YOUR "working" station, Mark? All we have is your word that you have worked EME, but even that is in question.
We have yet to hear you on HF.

I loved going to Olson. Never knew what was on the floor. And you could buy a box of crap for a few sheckles, and build amazing things with it.

I don't know how old you are, but since you father is in poor health, you probably will be too at that age and before me. My parents are both alive and have no health problems whatsoever. Furthermore, I don't have a large legion of "victums" as you say. There are no "victurms", only Kooks who think they can shit on everyone's posts without getting a response from the group, and when the response comes, they cry "I am a VICTUM, the eternal VICTUM". Nevertheless, there you go again bringing up that you are a HOMO. No one gives a shit about you abnormal lifestyle, why don't you shut the hell up already about the subject. They are already having to replace LED traffic lights that are barely a year old. One of the Red LED lights near my house started failing at six months, and continued till only about 10$ of it still worked. Some whole strings were out, while others had LEDs that were so dim you could barely see them. One hot summer was all it took to start the failures.
I see quite a few green LED lights with several dead LEDs, as well.

Yeah, I asked one of the workers at the local highway department about that. He says that QC is inconsistent between suppliers. They had similar problems in some suburbs around Chicago, though I've never seen it. Attributed to consequences of buying from the wrong vendors. Locally, that kind of failure is not an issue. Two villages over...more than a few headaches.

I asked if the issue was related to poor voltage/current regulation, or just poor construction. The guy I talked to said he had no idea.

Again I would like to thank everyone for their reply to the question. So it seems, that very cheap identical radios have a good chance of having variations in performance, because of cheap, low quality components. Components can vary greatly in quality just by chance. One cheap inexpensive radio might be a relatively great performer, and a second of the same radio might be very poor in performance. Luck of the draw.
And very expensive, very complicated radios (like the ICOM R9000) might also have some minor differences in performance between two or more of them, because of their complexity. As Bob stated, " I believe Rob Sherwood once said that the Icom R9000 was so complex, that most samples he saw had at least some minor issue or other. "
And radios somewhere in the middle in price and complexity would have on the whole less variation, and perform much more the same.
All under identical testing conditions of course.

Thanks again everyone, but as before, if anyone has more to add to this thread, feel free,

Cato

It might not be the very best one out there, but I think the Satellit 800 would make most "top ten" lists of modern receivers. Excellent design (basically the same as a Drake SW8) and if you get a later model - serial number starting with S82 or later - it's built very well and has a much quieter power supply. Only the earlier "first generations" had the quality problems and noisy power supply that people complain about. Second generation Satellit 800s have great sound, one of the best sync detectors out there, very sensitive and selective, lots of memories, plus you can put batteries in it and use it anywhere. Damn fine radio. (Scanning would be a nice feature, but I guess you can't have everything.)

At the top levels of receivers, the difference between what you hear on your Sat800 and someone else's high-end radio will depend more on the antenna, than the radio itself.

I used to work with someone who now works for the county technical department. I'm going to see if I can get my hands on some bad LED traffic light assemblies to do failure analysis.

No problem. I'm mainly interested in the power supply, since strings of about 12 go out at a time. I want to find out if its a crappy SMPS, ar maybe a couple to reduce the chance of catastrophic failures. Now, all I have to do is get my hands on some samples. I may try contacting Florida DOT. If they are rebuildable, I am looking for a few projects to create part time jobs for local Disabled Veterans. I'll bet that they can replace bad capacitors and LEDS after they are troubleshot.

You didn't say if you were wanting to record an AM, FM or shortwave program.
But an easy way to do this would be use a $6.00 light timer (turns lights on and off in your house at times you set) and attach it to your radio & a cassette recorder.
Put the tape in and press record, with the timer in the off position. When the timer turns 'ON'
the radio (already tuned to the frequency you want) will turn on and so will the recorder,
and turn off in an hour or what ever you select.

If you want to get fancy, put the radio on a timer and attach to the sound card of your computer and use a VOX sound recorder program (there are several available) from there you can listen directly from your system or make a CD of the program
and listen to on any CD player or share it with anyone you want.

I'm pretty sure it's the MK484, though I can't remember who makes it, and I've enver seen a good explantion of how it differs from the ZN414 (I assume there must be some slight difference, or else the company might as well have just second sourced the '414).

It works so well by having good AGC action, so you get lots of gain between stations, and then when you're tuned to a station the AGC kicks in and makes the single coil appear to have far better selectivity.

THe ZN414 came out in the early seventies, and obviously someone decided there was enough demand to bring out the MK484. Yet in all this time, I've never seen them actually used in a commercial device. Lots of hobby circuits, and someone must be using them, but I've never seen them.

When tracking down the IC used in those $1.00 FM radios with the "scan"
and "reset" buttons, one schematic showed an AM section, using the MK484.
ANd that would make sense since it makes an AM receiver comparable with the FM section, yet all I see are cheap FM only receivers.

Cassette recorders are getting scarce. Even in their prime, it was rare to find a good shortwave receiver with a built in cassette recorder (in case that is your question). But now few are interested in cassettes, so they are disappearing.

You get more luck if you don't need a single unit. You can always get a cassette deck at a garage sale for a few dollars, and hook that up (if some garage sale boombox doesn't suffice). Of course, the timer complicates things.

You should maybe widen your search. People have had success using VCRs to record audio (they obviously give hours and hours of recording time, if set right). So long as the radio doesn't have to change frequency, you can just leave it on, and with the audio feeding the VCR's audio input jacks (some VCRs require a video signal, that you'll have to do something about, in order to record audio), and set the VCR's timer to go off at the right time.

Except that it doesn't have a line-in, lots of MP3 players now have some sort of recording ability, off the built in microphone. Again, that doesn't deal with the timer, but that sort of thing seems to be taking over when recording is needed.

I suspect many at this point use their computers to record audio. Again, if the radio is being left on a single frequency, just leave it on and feed the audio into the computer's soundcard. Then get the computer to start recording at the specified time. At least some operating systems have that capability.

The first generation of LED traffic lights in my area started to fail in about a year. It looked like there were random failures of each LED element. I didn't notice if they were part of a string. The newer LED traffic lights are lasting much longer. I've also wondered why the new sodium street lights seem to have a shorter life than the mercury vapor ones they replaced. The opposite is supposed to be true. The sodium lights can be a serious source of RFI when they start to cycle on and off at the end of their life. Some people think they have the ability to make the sodium lights go out when they're near them. It's really just a coincidence but you can't convince them of that. If you do a Google search for 'street lights turning off' you'll find all kinds of testimonials, including paranormal explanations.

I don't have it, but many people tell me that Total Recorder is a wonderful piece of software for this. I think it costs under $20 for the basic version which is more than most people will ever need.

For me, I keep the radio in on position tuned to frequency I want. My digital timer turns the radio on/off when I want it to. Program is recorded onto a Sharp mini-disc recorder which is sitting in stand-by mode waiting for input from the radio. You need a radio with an old-fashioned mechanical on/off switch to work for this. Radio timer can also work, but I find many of them limited....only leaving the radio on for 60 mins when you may want more time to record.

A truly top notch receiver is superior for program listening as well.
An external speaker is required to best appreciate that fact.

Check the offerings at the CCRadio website. They have a number of radios, some with built-in recorders, also, a-la-carte recorders that will hook up to radios.

I use Total Recorder. It works very well; can be linked to a .mp3 or .ogg encoder (to compress the files so you don't use all your hard disk space! - also, you can copy the files to a MP3 player so you don't have to have a computer to listen to them) and contains a scheduler built-in. I use it to record across the top of the hour to (hopefully) catch station IDs on distant AM BCB stations.

Don't remember the price offhand (I bought it a long time ago) but it's indeed pretty inexpensive and would not at all doubt <$20.

One that was replaced last week already has a dead red LED. I saw it

Most dyslexics overcome, your are the exception, not the rule. But since you have "other issues", they may be more of a contributing factor than just being dyslexic.

I wonder for $4300, do you get a 3 month warranty or a whole year. Most likely that does not include parts and labor. Warranty is probably voided if you had a cigarette or cigar within 10 feet of it. If you want you probably can buy the extended warranty for a mere $500. Isn't that about how those things go? Oh, one more thing, if you radio is over five years old, and the $3.00 on/off switch broke, you can't get a spare part and you are just advised to junk it and buy a new one. Ric in Wisconsin.

Warranty on Ten-Tec equipment, all except Europe: New and demo Ten-Tec equipment purchased directly from Ten-Tec in the U.S. is warrantied parts and labor for 12 months from date of purchase.
Purchaser pays inbound shipping to us for warranty repair, we pay shipping to return the repaired equipment to you by UPS ground service or equivalent to the continental USA and Canada. Alaska, Hawaii and outside U.S. and Canada actual return shipping cost paid by owner. The only warranty exception is for the model 238B antenna tuner and the 417A Titan III linear amplifier, which are warrantied for three years parts and labor, under these same terms. Used equipment sold by Ten-Tec is warrantied for 30 days, parts and labor, under these same terms.

Off topic, but does anybody know if Poland is still on the air, and if so if they broadcast in English or anything besides Polish and Russian and maybe a few other languages of Eastern Europe? I remember seeing an entry in Passport a few years ago for a "Radio Polonia" that had a little bit of English. It was to Europe IIRC, and like other former Soviet Bloc stations it was hard to hear outside of the target area due to deteriorating equipment and electricity shortages. I suspect that the old Soviet built transmitters used by Eastern European stations are getting pretty rickety by now, over 15 years after the fall of the USSR, and when they quit for good there's usually no money to replace them, so the countries usually go silent key permanently. Then again, the old Russian tx's at Sam Neua in Laos were still limping along a couple years ago as per an article in Passport, so I guess anything is possible, but those were very weak. One report at the time of the Passport article had Sam Neua barely audible in the South Pacific.

1839. BBCWS Africa freqs?

I'm just getting back into news hunting on shortwave after a couple years away. For a while after the Beeb canned their Americas services I was using the Africa streams. Now that I'm back, I'd like to pick up The World Today, which I understand is on at 0300 and 0500 UTC in Africa. I went to the BBCWS website but their frequency guide is very difficult to use, you have to enter a specific city and then you get a program guide with programming listed by local time, then the freqs after the pgm descriptions. I entered the first city in West Africa that came to mind, namely Lagos, Nigeria, and got freqs of 6005 and 7160. 6005 is heavily dominated by Cuba on 6000 here in California, and 7160 is in the middle of the infamous 41m band-the one that is hams in North America but international broadcast everywhere else. On May 28 (May 29 in the target area) 7160 was dogged by local hams, and when it wasn't the BBC was weak at best. Anybody have freqs for any other African streams, such as Central? I can't use Asian streams since they're dominated by daylight in the local evenings.

Check the battery connections. You may have leakage problems. If it hasn't crystallized yet you're in luck, since crystallized corrosion is very difficult to remove. A standard corrosion remover should do the trick, ask here for what people use-as long as there's no crystallization. If you're starting to see crystals and "rust" you're in deep doo doo. I doubt that is the case though, that usually happens after batteries have been installed for years on end without use.

Come on guys, I was just joking with ya. Years ago my brother in law bought a million dollar printing press for his business. It came with a one year warranty. Why is it that if you buy a $200 TV or a $4300 radio, or a million dollar machine, you get a one year warranty? For that price they should say "if your great great great grandkid brings it in for repairs, we will stand behind it". Ric.

Oh, here you go again, Dloyd. You made mention of a banana. That is an unspoken Markie Morgan no-no! Mark will, in his twisted mind, predictably view this as a reference to a phallic symbol and will yet again accuse you of being a homophobe.

it certainly could but simply policing the sign up and lsitening to complaints about posters would solve much of the problem for example now that the backlog in adding shortwave has cleared I can pioint that if Google stop being a psoting point then I will be at worst mildly in convenaced funy I gues you have not been reading the NG closely if gogole were to shut down then it at worst only in venances me

There is no such thing as "gogole". You yet again show us why you have so many intellectual superiors in these groups.

I did say that but what is your point? why did wismen need yet another sock puppet to harrass the NG?

it is a valid question

sure I can I can even win the problem is not that finding a target that also pay the judgement

but is it stiring the things to go around calling your foes child molestors and rapists and such . I don't do that indeed I am brave to sign my name to stuff you are not nobody deserves to be called a child molestor not even a real child molestor (those sick folks deserve a long quiet rest and such peace

as
their misdeeds allow them)

not even you Tom deserve being called a child molestor

Mark, Just ignore them.

They only tease you because of the stupid things you say when you follow up. Just ignore them and they'll give up.

Stop giving them reasons to tease you. It only makes you look more stupid.

Take a break from the radio groups for a while, Maybe work on your moon bounce some more.

If that's what you want a radio for. Since there is a rapidly declining number of HFBC stations available I judge radios by their utilitiy utility.

You know those flourescent camp lanterns that use batteries and they put out a lot of light? I own five of them.I would like to have several LED light camp lanterns that put out a lot of light because they last so much longer on batteries.That would be good to have for when stormy weather knocks out the electric power.I think they would sell like hotcakes in the stores.

They also have transmitter schedules by region. Below the box where you enter the city (in the middle of <http://www.bbc.co.uk/worldservice/>), there is a link "Short Wave Changes". Take that link and you get to a page with a list of links to the regional schedules. Click on a link and you get a text listing of transmissions, sorted by time, for that region. In addition, there's a link on each of the text schedule pages ("Frequency Chart with transmitter details...) that gives you a graphical version of the schedule with a bar chart showing the tranmission times by hour and the location of the transmitters.

I don't know if they have any transmitters still working, but they're on two hours a day on the North American English schedule for World Radio Network. (Probably one hour a day, duplicated). External Service of Radio Poland, at 10 AM and 8 PM Pacific Daylight Time.

WRN also carries Radio Prague, Radio Budapest, Radio Slovakia International, and Radio Romania International.

I get it as overnight programming on one of the local educational stations (KXOT 91.7 Tacoma), 11 PM-6 AM, so I can't get the Poles, just the Czechs and Romanians.

Yeah the Hens aren't far away, about 10 minutes. Jamie lives in the LA area. Still glad I'm not in FL this time of year.

Jamie may be in LA, but Klinger will always be in Toledo! :)

Why? Hurricane season doesn't start, till Friday.

Dear Rick,

My favorite "one-year warranty" is the one that you get on a window air conditioner. In general, you will use this for three months - at the most - during the first year you own it, so in effect, that "one-year" warranty is really onyl for one season of just a few months.

Best,

Joe

P.S. In three years of very heavy use, my AOR AR7030 Plus has not even "hiccuped." I can even say the same for all of my Sony ICF-SW7600GRs, the oldest of which is six years old. Currently, all parts for these receivers are easily available and, I believe, will remain so for years to come. Given reasonable care, these radios seem almost "unbreakable!"

9740 and an African freq of 9750 are mostly dead, and if they're not there's a Spanish speaking station on 9745 that is very strong and which wipes them out. I clicked around on the WS site and found freqs of 6030 and 6190 as well as 9750 for 0300. 6190 is the BBC but in a language that is German or Germanic, such as Dutch or a Scandinavian tongue. Since this is a freq for Africa the language might be Afrikaans, a Dutch derived tongue spoken by whites in South Africa.
6030 is no good. It is almost 0400 as I post. I have about five or six freqs for The World Today at 0500 that I will try. As I said, the Singapore and Thailand relays are no good here in the evenings local,
since they are in daylight paths and it is around noon at the tx sites. I doubt that they get out much in the middle of the day, along with the sunspot minimum causing upper bands to be useless. According to the BBC website, 6195 only has World Briefing, which is sort of a news digest rather than an in depth newscast. It's sort of like CNN
Headline News instead of full CNN.

I collected antique tube radios for a number of years, and I never understood how people in the 1930s and 1940s could NOT be driven absolutely bonkers by many of the "decorative" airplane dials common on many of those radios. I am not familiar with the radio in question, but I have seen PLENTY of confusing dials. I never actually tried to listen to shortwave on any of my stuff, just AM (usually called "BC" or something similar).

I can't imagine sitting at home in 1940 or so, with huge headphones on, desperately trying to find Berlin, Tokyo, or London at the same place on a poorly marked and designed analog dial where it MIGHT have been the night before, with images galore and tube drift too. Yikes. Maybe that was part of the fun, and the advent of $50 all digital appliance radios and reliable station lists took the fun out of shortwave and led to its decline (along with satellites and the attendant expectation of static free video from war zones on demand).

Even DXing on the transistorized analog radios common in the 1960s must have been crazy. I have a GE World Monitor and 6-18 Mhz is squeezed onto a very small dial-on one band labeled "SW". Not even Tecsun, which makes the windup analog SW radio, is that nuts.

I never visited that part of Ohio. I only visited Lima, Akron and

I'm picking up a cw station, call sign SVO, transmitting a long tone then de SVO. 8424kHz at 407 GMT here in Texas. Anyone familiar what this station is, where they are and what they do?
Thanks,

I used a Drake 2NT with an external vfo as a transmitter and a Swan for rx for my first ham rig. My first rx was a Knight Kit Star Roamer that I put together. It was tough to finish, but oh so worth it to a 13 yr old in the Interesting. There is a CW signal there, bearly detectable and not strong enough to be readable in socal.

Thats a coastal rtty frequency, when not transmitting they often have such a cw signal just so receivers can stay tuned in for when a rtty broadcast begins.

AD,

If the Eton E5 works like most AM/SSB Radios :
http://www.etoncorp.com/product_card/?p_ProductDbId=5968

1 - Tune in a strong 'local' AM/MW/BCB Radio Station in the AM Mode and switch to SSB Mode [Button # 8]
and the SSB Icon will show in the LCD Screen.
- - - Or the 5 MHz or 10 MHz WWV Time Signal in the Shortwave Radio Band.

2 - Use the Fine-Tuning Knob (Wheel) on the Side to Tune in the Station {Clarify the Sound}. You may fine one or two points that the Sound 'sounds' OK.

Most likely if this does not work : Then the SSB feature is not working in your Radio

CATO,

In general you should see very little {if any} differences between two Radios manufactured around the same time.

Now if you have an older product model like an early Sony ICF-2010 and one made several years latter :
You might notice some differences in preformance
due to component age and wear-and-tear differences.

It's almost a thing of the past, the new bridge is about to open, no more drawbridge problems, no more backups because of them.

Yesterday,Goobernor Haley Barbour was in Batesville,Mississippi.General Electric is going to build a Jet engines parts (fan parts,something like that) factory in Batesville.(old news to me,I have known about it since last year) The G.E.parts factory will be up and running in early 2009.(Rolls Royce has a Ship/Boat engine factory in South Mississippi.y'all would be supprised at what is in Mississippi,prettiest gals in the World too)
There is a bulding boom going on in many places in Mississippi.

Candles,campfires,smoke signals? What? no traffic lights? Let me step back up on that chair,it's getting ''deep'' in here.

Brian, that's maritime coastal station Olympia Radio SVO, in Greece.
They provide VHF and HF radio telephone and HF SITOR services to vessels at sea. As it happens, I logged this station myself a few nights ago (28 May) on the same frequency at 0318Z.

The transmitter is located at 37-36-11.7N/21-29-11E, which is at Pirgos, but is remotely controlled from Athens.

You can find QSL address information here:

Hi Stephan,

Thank you again for responding; did you manage to scan

Responses : Votes[X] - Choices = %
3X - Digital Radio Mondiale (DRM) for Shortwave Band = 15%
2X - HD Radio (IBOC) for AM and FM Bands = 10%
12X - Want "Both" DRM and HD Radio = 60%
3X - Keep the AIR Band with No Changes = 15%

So far the majority 60% want a both new Digital Radio features; "DRM" Shortwave and "HD" AM&FM Radio.

Responses : Votes[X] - Choices = %
12X - Pass Band Tuning (PBT) Knob = 57%
4X - RF Gain Knob = 19%
3X - Front Antenna Selector Switch = 14%
2X - Keep the Squelch Knob with No Changes = 9%

So far the majority 57% want a Pass Band Tuning feature and a (PBT) Knob

Care to explain? In my opinion, the Sony 2010 tunes SSB signals MUCH easier, like a tabletop. The DX-440/Sangean ATS-803A is really frustrating to bandscan with.

FWIW - The first Radio that I bought with my own money for myself was a Hitachi AM/FM Radio Model TH-812.
[The Grand-Daddy of All My Radios]
* Back in the early 1960s I managed to receive "WBZ" in Boston using this Hitachi TH-812 (TRF AM/MW Portable Radio) with an outboard 'inductively coupled' Tunable Ferrite Rod Antenna Feed by a 65 Foot Random Wire Antenna.
GoTo= > http://www.transistor.org/collection/hitachi/hitachi9.html
NOTE: This took me Two Winter Seasons to Log
this Cross Country DX Catch in Oakland, CA.

The first Radio that I make {assembled} for myself was a HeathKit GR-64 {4-Tube} Shortwave Listener's (SWL) Radio

Does anyone know anything about this morphy richard DRM receiver http://www.morphyrichards.co.uk/index.pl?REFID=mruk&ORPGM=productOverview&ORPGT=perl&ORPRD=27024&ORGRP=R11&ORCAT=SR03&ORLID=ENG
it looks like it may be a MA'AH update http://www.thiecom.de/drm2010/index.htm.
Costs $380 delivered worldwide. The MA'AH was something over $800 and apparently didn't sell to well (funny that). Bo these sets are mains powered only so they obviously have a poweer hungry DSP on board which leads me to believe the same manufacturer.
Chris in Samoa
P.S I see a Euro 199 price about 150$US sans P+P

What control software do you use? Ten Tec's or something else? I've become a fan of RxPlus, though I can't say I've compared it with every one of its competitors.

About a year or so ago at www.rigpix.com there was a link to a radar device (looks sort of like a set top box thingy) which connects to a computer and the device would identify Aircraft that are flying around.I don't see that device at rigpix.com now and I don't remember the name of it.Does anybody know the name of the device and a URL to it?
I don't need to buy one of those devices,I only want to read about.Although,it would be handy to own one of those devices.I like devices and gadgets.

IMHO - When Sony-Sangean-Tecsun-Degen-Redsun
come out with a stand-a-lone DRM Shortwave Radio as good as the :

Sony ICF-SW7600GR

Sangean ATS-909

Tecsun/Grundig/Eton E1 or Satellit 800

Degen DE1121

Redsun RP2100

All Priced under $200 : Then DRM Shortwave Radio will be available {affordable = priced right} to the average everyday Shortwave Radio Broadcast Listener (SWL) ~ RHF

A DRM Radio/Receiver that also requires a Computer to be able to simply listen a DRM Shortwave Radio Broadcast is a "Non-Starter" for the average everyday Shortwave Radio Broadcast Listener (SWL) - Who simply wants to Turn-On-the-Radio-and-Listen*
* Relax and Enjoy Listening to the Radio Broadcast.

and that is the way i see the drm of it ~ RHF

Hmmm, I really would love to get into hardcore utility monitoring, but it was hard enough for me to get my ICF-7600GR, so I don't think I will be able to get some of the nicer radios for a long time. The one was like almost $5000, I was like holy heck. Radio Monitoring of any kind seems nice, but it seems like it can get extremely expensive for the really nice stuff.

Mine has been powered on since I bought it, turned off only by AC power outages, so that's more than a decade (lost track of when I bought it but it was when universal radio was at their old Main Street location).

One power outage required removing the batteries for a day to recover, but otherwise it's perfect.

It's in effect an FM speaker for the sound that the computer pumps into a FM transmitter downstairs, is the reason it's just left on.

Radio Stops Bullet and Keeps on Working

(Petach Tikva, Israel, May 30, 2007) -- Tadiran Communications reports the discovery of an unusual benefit exhibited by one of its advanced radios designed for use by individual combat soldiers. While being carried on the back of a soldier in Latin America, the radio stopped a bullet, saving the soldier's life and continued to operate normally.

Tadiran's in-depth understanding of evolving field requirements - gained through years of experience and close cooperation with armies worldwide - has enabled the development of a range of cutting-edge systems for strategic, tactical and Homeland Security communications. These solutions assure uninterrupted, reliable, secure communications in every type of location and conflict situation ... and apparently, also stop bullets.

The BBC closed its german service 1999.

On 6190 kHz is 24 hours the german "Deutschlandfunk" It is a domestic program with more information than music,

If you want to see all shortwave frequencies of the BBC, you can use the web site of the german radio club ADDX on www.addx.de.

On http://www.addx.de/cgi-bin/hfp.cgi?language=E is the english listening guide.

With greetings from Germany

You can buy any number of good used sets for under $700, any of them would work fine for UTES:

Icom R-70 R-71a
Jrc NRD-525 NRD-535
Kenwood R5000

Ham transceivers under $1000, some way under:

Icom 735, 745, a bunch more Icom models.
Kenwood TS 440, 450, 570D, 950, and a few more Yaesu FT757, 767, 890, 990.

There are a lot more, those are the most common ones.

Really not that difficult with a HF receiver having a decent number of memories than can be tuned through quickly using a tuning knob. Just enter the frequencies of interest one time and tune back and forth tilll you get a hit.

Push button tuning through memories on the 7600 would not in my opinion be a very effective way of tuning back and forth rapidly across many stored frequencies.

The only way you will truly be able to "see" whether adjacent frequencies are in use is with an expensive receiver having a spectrum display.

One of the best tuning systems I ever saw was on an old GRUNO (1930s?) console radio.
(I think the old ZENITHS used a similar system)

The tuning dial was arranged like a clock face.
There were two pointers.... an "hour" and a 'minute" hand.
.... and it tuned just like a clock mechanism.

On Shortwave, you didn't have to remember a specific frequency.
Just that BBC came in on "twenty to four"... or that Cuba came in on "five after nine".

Made it easy to keep a log of stations too.

Yes, I accidentally used the wrong voltage DC inlet, and my Sangean ATS 818 started smoking a bit from the plug. I quickly removed it. It does not work anymore. I have opened it up, and cannot find any circuits that could have burned. The LCD screen still displays the time. I am not sure how to proceed, and I was wondering if anyone had any thoughts about fixing it or having it fixed somehow. Thank you.

The radio should have a reverse-polarity protection diode at the DC input.
If it's done it's job, it will now be shorted out, and will need to be replaced. Depending on where it is in the circuit, it could also prevent the radio working on batteries until it's been replaced.

I'm getting 15335 and 15360 kHz here in Seattle at 2:00 UTC (7 PM PDT) , which is a half hour of The World Today. On a good day, try 15360, 17760, and 21660 at 5:00 UTC. They have come in on those frequencies then in better years, (like last year).

Best bet for your news fix may be News Hour at 12:00 (5 AM PDT) on 9740 and 6195 kHz. I think they use the same staff for The World Today and News Hour.

Insomnia radio update: 15360 was coming in ok here at Midnight (7 UTC), another half hour of the World Today.

9740 and an African freq of 9750 are mostly dead, and if they're not there's a Spanish speaking station on 9745 that is very strong and which wipes them out. I clicked around on the WS site and found freqs of 6030 and 6190 as well as 9750 for 0300. 6190 is the BBC but in a language that is German or Germanic, such as Dutch or a Scandinavian tongue. Since this is a freq for Africa the language might be Afrikaans, a Dutch derived tongue spoken by whites in South Africa.
6030 is no good. It is almost 0400 as I post. I have about five or six freqs for The World Today at 0500 that I will try. As I said, the Singapore and Thailand relays are no good here in the evenings local,
since they are in daylight paths and it is around noon at the tx sites. I doubt that they get out much in the middle of the day, along with the sunspot minimum causing upper bands to be useless. According to the BBC website, 6195 only has World Briefing, which is sort of a news digest rather than an in depth newscast. It's sort of like CNN
Headline News instead of full CNN.

2023. Sony 7600GR External Antenna Jack, Needs to be settled, Can it be shorted out to the point that it destroys the radio.

If you use a random wire in the Sony 7600GR radio and accidently short it, can it destory the radio and/or cause damage or is it protected?

In the manual it says it has DC power but on at least two websites, it supposely only has a "sense power" to turn antennas off and on.

I called sony customer support and they claim the jack doesn't have any DC power in it, that it is only reception. This was said by two different agents, but when I emailed them, they keep talking about the headphone jack for some reason.

Will someone please settle this for me, it's like some are saying it can short and at the same time, some are saying it can't at all. I just want to have this darn thing settled.

Thanks in advanced.

Back in the day when I started this hobby in 1982 I started with a Realistic DX-100 and the 75' longwire kit strung under the eaves of our single story house. Since then I have been restricted to what ever I can string up inside the apartment. Today my kind neighbor gained access to the roof of my apartment building and tacked 50' of speaker wire to the edge of the roof in an L shape for me. While the noise floor was raised two S units the gain is unbelievable. The R-75 is finally coming alive. I guess it's time for the Slinky dipole to come down from the radio room ceiling. I know that none of you gives a sh@t but I just had to share my excitement.

Handy Shortwave Chart

billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. For multi-use bands, primary usage is shown. Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2005 FCC rules and Jan 2006 NTIA manual, see Chapter 4 of:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/redbook/redbook.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day; frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Phone line as SW antenna

Changes preceded by "|".

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area. Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines | usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because | DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the
| telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead. Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should
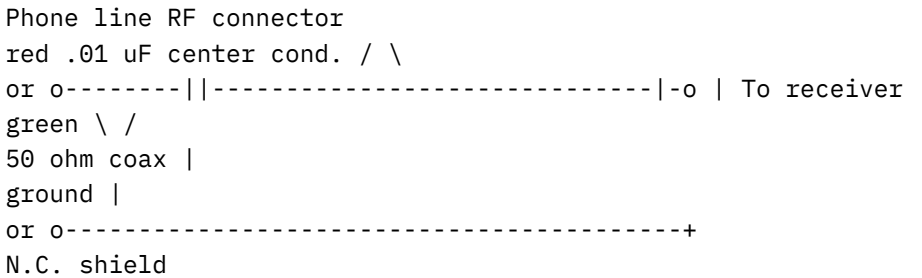
| be rated 250 volts or higher.



N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

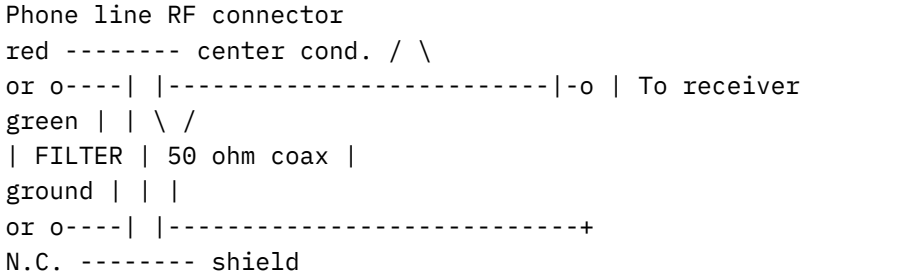
A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:



| RECOMMENDED FILTERS
| If you don't want to make your own filters, the following have good | performance, are well-built and affordable:
| Model 400 BCB interference filter (3.5 MHz highpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#bcb

| Model 420 HF lowpass filter (30 MHz lowpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#3
| (scroll down a bit to see the model 420)
| If you have a random-wire antenna, the following unit will provide | impedance matching and lightning protection (connect antenna to 450-ohm | terminal):
| Model 182A beverage matching unit
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/reconly.html#Beverage Matching

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

Date: 09 Jan 91 00:54:08 GMT
From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {

-------------+-----------+-----------------

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

From: bill@videovax.tv.tek.com (William K. McFadden)
Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

LOW-PASS FILTER (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

signal in ------- filter 1 -------- filter 2 -------- signal out

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics,

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

Parts for the filters can be obtained from the following source:

I would like to know if anyone playing around with this radio has found frequencies beyond those stated for reception? AM is stated 520-1720 but I have been able to tune t250 +/- to high 400, and on SW
I have hit plenty of frequencies lower than those indicated.

Shortly after I got my '7600GR, I hooked it up with the AN-LP1 antenna to see if the '7600GR would power this antenna. It would not. When hooked up to the '7600GR, the AN-LP1 required batteries and required being placed in the "on" position. I'll go home this evening and test out whether the '7600G actually can power up the AN-LP1... It would seem rather surprising if the '7600G did, while the '7600GR did not. Although I'd prefer that neither utilized the antenna jack for powering an external active antenna. I just don't much care for that arrrangement.

Hopefully, this will be mostly an issue, if you have a local 50KW AM and are trying to hear a distant, adjacent AM - either way, AM-HD will be the death of AM.

What exactly are you describing here. Are you saying that you sent power through the antenna back to the receiver? Maybe by walking across a carpet and touching the antenna. If you did that then yes you very well might have fried the radio.

Or are you saying that you touched the antenna end to some ground.

Your description is too vague.

I guess this touches to the issue of Sony putting a DC voltage to the antenna jacks to power the AN-LP series of antennas.

The antenna jack on the ICF-SW07 does incorporate a DC voltage to power the supplied AN-LP2 antenna. The instruction manual accordingly warns:

"Do not connect any other antennas other than the recommended active antennas to the AM EXT ANT jack of the unit, as the jack supplies DC voltage to power the recommended active antennas."

Neither the instruction manual to the ICF-SW7600G nor that for the ICF-SW7600GR has any similar such disclaimer.

In hooking up the AN-LP1 antenna to the ICF-SW7600GR, I have found that the radio does not power the antenna. The antenna requires its own batteries (unlike the AN-LP2 which can be powered directly by the 'SW07).

The real issue is that the FCC neither has the technical expertise or desire to combat market forces such as IBiquity. AM HD is a solution to a problem that doesn't exist and is technically flawed because there is no clean way to transition from pure analog AM transmission to digital transmission. IBiquity and AM broadcasters know this but they seem intent on ignoring the technical issues.

You just can't throw away billions of analog receivers and get everyone to buy a more expensive digital one. The market just isn't there as most AM listeners just don't care.

An obvious solution, though perhaps too late for the original poster, would be to put a ceramic capacitor in series between the connector and the wire, just in case. Something like .001uF or maybe .01uF. It won't hurt.

Dear Adam,

This has been discussed many times both here and on the < http://groups.yahoo.com/group/7600GR/ > group which I recommend to you if you do not already belong.

You can attach ANY antenna to the Sony ICF-SW7600G or 'GR's antenna jack without damaging the radio.

Period.

Of course, if the antenna is too elaborate or too long (supplies too much signal), the set will overload. Iif you were to discharge static electricity through the antenna, the radio could possibly be damaged (this would apply to ANY antenna [and any receiver] and would even apply to just touching the set in certain ways or areas while "electrified," though such a situation would be quite rare). And obviously you would not want to "accidentally" attach an AC adapter to the antenna jack!

The small amount of DC voltage present at the jack is merely for turning "on" and turning "off" the Sony AN-LP1 Active Loop Antenna.
The AN-LP1 is "on" whenever it is connected to the ICF-SW7600G/GR and the radio is in "AM" mode. This is regardless of theposition of the AN-LP1's own switch (used with this radio, the switch should be left in its "off" position) or even whether the radio is tuned to the shortwaves (where the antenna functions) or the MW/LW (where it does not and, in fact, attenuates signals, and thus should be physically disconnected when listening to those frequencies). It serves no other function (it does not "power" the AN-LP1 antenna, regardless of what has been written in PASSPORT and some other places) and does not interfere with reception regardless of the antenna connected there. I definitely know that a 60-foot long wire antenna (properly grounded and protected) works very well with this radio. I have read that even longer antennas can be successfully used but I personally cannot say that this is so. I have used my Wellbrook ALA 330S with the Sony and it works splendidly. And, of course, the AN-LP1 is a superb adjunct to reception with this receiver. It is still available from dealers in Japan and I strongly recommend it to all owners of the ICF-SW7600G/GR radios.

Unfortunately, as you have discovered, people at Sony"s customer "support" do not really know anything at all about shortwave radios nor do they care. Contacting them is generally a waste of time.

However, as I stated, any reasonable antenna of any configuration can be used with this receiver via its antenna jack

I hope this answers your question and is of help to anyone else reading this.

Best,

Joe

Unfortunately, it's true we resemble Americans too much; Canadians are indeed a nation of polluters and fatty mcbutterpants but I for one am not cheering. As regards beaches and beachside homes, some of the ugliest developments I have ever seen are in Florida.

Just heard Cohen on the CBC talking a little too rapidly for his own good. I distinctly heard him say that we Canadians are not "crawling around a rain forest". Who is?

I look forward to trying to hear this station - but it seems that a desperate nation would do better to try to improve the conditions for its own people before trying to convince others that it is already happening.

Joe,

Actually, my 7600G DOES power the AN-LP1. I'm listening to it right now with a set of dead batteries in the AN-LP1. The dead batteries don't have enough voltage to even turn the AN-LP1's red light on. As we've discussed this before in the 7600GR Yahoo Group, I can only assume that you continue to disbelieve me. Please take the challenge I extended to you by taking one of your 7600Gs out of storage and try it with totally discharged batteries in the AN-LP1.

I will admit that the GR model does not power the antenna, but I've been using a G model for quite awhile.

I think Passport wasn't aware of this slight change between the G and GR models. It may also explain the confusion from Sony service people.

Before you once again assume that I don't know what I'm talking about, please take out one of your 7600G's and give it a try.

Well, I can agree with most of the foregoing except for two essentials:

"Carleton University professorAndrewCohenpoints out in his intelligently

I have considerable difficulty believing that a professor at Carleton can argue intelligently.

"He drinks coffee at Starbucks," Maybe "intelligent" professors from Carleton do; but Canadians get their

Dear Mike,

As I explained to you previously - yes, the antenna works with dead or no batteries - AS A PASSIVE LOOP. With the antenna in active mode, using good internal batteries, all signals will be much stronger. They are being amplified. This is not quite as noticeable with very strong signals (where the antenna, in passive mode, certainly works fairly well) but it is surely VERY noticeable with moderate or weak signals. (The relative signal strength increase on strong signals is not as noticeable because the radio's automatic volume control keeps levels as constant as possible.)

While operating the antenna with dead or no batteries, try changing the frequency selector. No matter the frequency to which you are listening, the signal will be of the same strength. The selector has no effect. This is true unless the antenna is in fact powered by its own internal (good) batteries and the red LED is on, showing that the antenna is functioning in active mode. If the red LED is NOT on, the antenna is NOT properly functioning as an active (powered) antenna. The radio itself, whether 'G or 'GR model, does NOT supply operating power to the AN-LP1 antenna. It merely turns the antenna "on" or "off." (This applies only to the AN-LP1 antenna.)

Of course, when using this antenna as an active antenna (the way it was designed to operate), the signal strength of a given frequency will change as you change the selector. (If, for example, you are listening to Deutsche Welle on 15205 kHz later this afternoon, and, with your antenna powered with good batteries, you will notice that the signal is markedly stronger when the selector is in the 14 or 16 position. Changing to, say, the 4 or 5 position will noticeably attenuate the signal. With dead or no batteries there will be no difference in signal strength whatsoever and the signal strength, in active mode, should be much stronger.) You can also try this experiment with Radio Australia (15515 kHz) or Radio New Zealand International (13730) around 0300 UTC tonight or, even better, RAE 11711 kHz, if it is coming in at all, at 0200 UTC.

Your antenna is NOT being powered by the radio. It is not functioning as an active antenna. In order to function properly, it MUST have good batteries inserted. (And I did try this with one of my 'G models recently. Both the 'G and the 'GR models behave exactly the same in this situation.)

Best,

Joe

Joe,

Then why does the red light on the AN-LP1 come on when it's attached to the 7600G, even when there are dead batteries in the AN-LP1?

And, yes, I tried your test: When I change the frequency selector on the AN-LP1 (with dead batteries), it definitely DOES impact the strength of the signal I'm listening to on the 7600G.

Further test: I have two AN-LP1s. No difference in operation between the one with dead batteries and the one with live batteries. Signals sound the same. Signals vary when I change the frequency selector on both AN-LP1s.

Sorry. I'm going to trust my own experience and what's written in Passport over your definitive "expertise".

Another thing: None of your 7600G/GRs sound any different on upper/lower sync? I have to tell you that every 7600G and GR I've listened to (probably over 10) had at least some difference in audio between upper and lower sync. You claim none of your massive collection do. Is this another time when Passport was as out of it as you seem to think I am?

Got any more tests you want me to try?

PEOPLE

Who IS running this bushite nazi liar show, where they, our elite corporate media masters, kill our stupid kids with their flagrant naked monster lies, while refusing all calls for clarity, Johnny America really wants to know. Like immediately. Help us out here some man, don't be evil.

Demon bush told us Saddam wouldn't let inspectors in, and that's why he irrationally started this war against God conflict. Impeach him, then have him PUNISHED for high treason against a further dying as truly unheard from America - for that lie alone - we ALL could/should stand together as equals demanding re-dress for the innocent murder victims who've suffered for such contempt, and belligerence for the basic precepts of freedom as Justice, or G-D as Johnny.

/ / "It could make August a tough month, because what they're going to try to do is kill as many people as they can to try and influence the debate here at home. Don't you find that interesting? I do, that they recognize that the death of innocent people could shake our will," the President explained. \ \

People of Earth, know, these bushite soldiers war Creation proudly with repeatedly committing aggravated felons, and South African death squad goons, all to war Love for the neocon god haters. Who, as peenacking atheists, as their very own documents stress, would murder anyone of US for a stolen nickel.

Our Mr. Bush Jnr. "The war is for you or for us [neoCONS] to win. If we [neoCONS] win it, it means your defeat and disgrace forever."

Die bushite die.

Kucinich for President!
http://www.democracynow.org/index.pl?issue=20070524

Now, it's true, America's Alex Jones states Kucinich wants to take away all your guns, and is a communist, but, Alex as sometimes, is terrified of those who seek the requirements to defend freedom directly, as more specific. (Example: NWO isn't the name of the specific guy who financed 911 to murder America.) So, as a consequence, he gets near ridiculous with labels applicable to generalizations only dummies could believe blindly. With Kucinich campaigning on ACCOUNTABILITY, Alex Jones looks quite foolish. But, he's still trying. Thank god for that. Thank god for that. Talk radio in America should take open line calls on our ideas about how to actually plan to defeat these, found factually to be, traitors to God and Country.

Bush Successful at Permanent Legalization of Torture
http://www.prisonplanet.com/articles/march2006/070306Torture.htm

/ / The truth is that the Bush Administration has used the McCain anti-torture bill to codify a policy of torture that is now embedded in our legal system for perpetuity. \ \

McCain is some kinda demon enemy of God isn't he? To say publicly, he apposes torturing innocent people to death for the practicing Satanic bushite LIAR bad guys, leaves US thinking, shouldn't WE put McCain to death for OFFICIALLY sanctioning such criminality? I'd easily, without a second thought, put to death all those FOXJunkies in that debate audience who cheered from hell with JOY, the prospect of torturing innocent people to death, 'if it means' such IRRATIONAL action protects "American lives". See? the Magic TV and radio people refuse to allow me or anyone to think nazi vermin haters of Justice measured, [who steal in MY America as TRUE EVIL DOERS,] forbid such wisdom communicated Victims more air time.

And wise poor men such as myself would command respect and gratitude.

torture innocent people to death for their satanic pleasures.
For, you know it does warrant the Death Sentence in America, right? (You can thank Reagan for that...)

Receive thanks from everyone, GOD included, by rightly destroying such inexcusable treasonous ungodly enemies of all human life.

Torture is a crime against God and Humanity. So, likewise, joyously, with pride, destroy the neocon traitors of Justice - for the true Love you have as Freedom willed - is as granted. Don't buy their demon lies by blind blanket false assertions, against YOUR Humanity's Innocence in tyrannical bondage, all done in to fool you believing, we have no rights to be heard in our presence - here existing freely. MSNBC told YOU when interviewing Tom Daschle in discussion of the official public contention, that immediately after the terrorist act of 9/11 in New York City, (where thousands of American People were murdered,) bush and cheney frantically, desperately, INTENTIONALLY, worked paid overtime to close 9/11

The Pentagon's Power to Jail Americans Indefinitely
http://www.jonesreport.com/articles/270307_pentagon_power_jail.html

Look, demon enemies of Christ torture innocent people for fun, paid for by the silent American tax payer. Americans refuses to bother making a simple phone call to Coast to Coast to raise some concern. THEY don't. They refuse to hunt bushite down in their streets for death to defend the innocent held indefinitely against GOD'S will. pleasure of the president

US Attorneys don't serve "the pleasure of the president", they serve freedom lovers dedicated to defending America from willful criminality. But, americans are too stupidly weak to demand Coast to Coast hosts allow open communications on America's highest of concerns. Bushite america would rather, in silence, thieve from God as our Humanity, than serve the protections of Justice as ourselves.

"Those who negotiate in the name of the Taliban will be killed," he [the bushite nazi dumfuk 'Taliban' 2nd in command] said. He did not elaborate.

Hmmm. Allah is all, and negotiating for freedom from naked bushite tyranny is won EASILY through communicating understanding. The tribal strategy of Afghan fighters, where Allah is Oonerroh, seems to be not the only thing missing from the statements of this "Taliban" RELIGIOUS FUNDEMENTALIST top top top leader. Only "second" to Omar the Just. (Apparently an individual this current bushite incantation of "Dadullah" is totally un-familiar of.) Omar, the Just, whom Dadullah claims he receives his Top Secret nobody can see'im orders. In other winds: Bill a bushite for God and America, an all day long you'll have good faith in a world freeing ourselves of godless dumfuk tyranny implemented by the horribly foolish, as deeply ignorant of Allah, bushite demon liars for the traitor neocon. TRAITORS!

"Those who negotiate in the name of the Taliban will be killed," he [the bushite nazi dumfuk 'Taliban' 2nd in command] said. He did not elaborate.

Allah is all, and negotiating for freedom from naked bushite tyranny is won EASILY through communicating understanding. Omar the Just knew this to say so, as do I. And this is why corporate news professionals forbid me to speak openly without nazi censorship, ON OUR AIR-WAVES, because I am honorable, right, and true as believable. While America's fun guy, zionist George Norry, states to support PUBLICLY, the ungodly murder of innocent Arabic children for nothing but his personal contempt of YOUR DYING LIFE, while further wanting to invite thoughtlessly nuking places on Earth all for his secret hatred of US freely commutating. Typical bushite. Ending with to tell US again 'convincingly', that bin Laden did do 911 as a terror-ist bad guy in G's World!!?! How so? EH? How so? he don't care man, he don't care. He and his family have millions of dollars to sell you out, so why care for your struggle to survive in bushville soldiering? Frankly, George Norry is a total dickhead. True, he has lots of money in America, but he's still a dickhead nevertheless.

Alex Jones and me aren't on the best of speaking terms, but I will state, a desire to address every same challenge he has adroitly addressed as publicly lacking. And when I am addressed 'officially', I will campaign to put US in the space to realize, we are the government, we are the people. We don't need to run to the hills and encamp ourselves away to defend ourselves to the max from the man, we are the man. I'm telling yeh, I know this to be so as the sea is we magically. Equal rights for all in God's name is self evident. Self evident to ME anyway... but well.. who am i?, right - I'll tell you as I have for more than a decade as a living fiction forsaken for lack of anybody anywhere understanding in totality what I am here on Earth as true Son to Man - a 'understandable' timeless stand in for G to gain recognition through as honest broker. [I've been everywhere around forever, and.. blahblah.. I know people really don't care to know of ancient wisdoms, truths that guide the order to the Universe, cause often they think I'm beyond their comprehension as a 'better than', when all power is in equal respect for others as our hurting brothers and sisters suffering with tyranny by our collective willful ignorance on Justice.[God's bestest is Just for every reason being thus]] I am one serious genius by no accident in words you have as much right to contend for yourself being, if you'd only believe we have some good ideas here to really defend ourselves with.

Please my American friend, help US speak out freely Coast to Coast. So we together can start, on demanding Justice for all, as innocence in serious jeopardy. Dadullah is most likely an individual who holds at least some control over official military functions of NATO in the region. So, we're going to seed loyalties of the rare Patriots in the force to recognize our need to isolate who supports, not talking FREELY for peace easily in Afghanistan without question. No evidence was brought against Laden, therefore, the Taliban were True Patriots, and bushite traitors are pure racist nazi filth ridden, toxic, as being cowardly dishonorable as despicably evil, enemies to us all. Put US in Command.

Question the bushite, question to anyone who mumbles disagreement in the godly fact, that WE, as Humanity, will spend the better part of this next generation, hunting every last war profiteering nazi war criminal down for our real Freedom from their, so errorred "endless" tyranny of big money terror. Lawlessness with be outlawed, and ANY corporate american who mumbles otherwise, as an enemy totalitarianist, the clear ungodly, (as should be criminal,) will be put to challenge by their very own children, or parents, or bleeding dead brothers. Hannity must be tried for death as lying that the holocaust never happened from Iran. DEATH to the demon liar nazi fu-ker I say, DEATH to the demon liar nazi fu-ker.

/ / According to Danish Karokhel, director of Pajhwok, the Italian government should negotiate directly with Dadullah. "Italy is negotiating with the wrong people," he said in an email to IPS. "The only one that counts and decides is Mullah Dadullah." \ \ Oh Yeah, but what about Omar the Just, And... hmmmm. who is Karokhel today anyway, and when was the last time anyone seen him alive?

/ / How did a member of the Taliban in Afghanistan get hold of the phone number of an ABC news producer? Afghan 411 must be REALLY good! \ \ iiIII! can't even do that.. well... easily from Canada as an official non-fugitive that is. Just what is the going rate of satellite phone service out of Afghanistan? Remember: evil is DUMB about everything, including technology. Or so, how are we missed for report by point to point presentation using the same old satellite for phone service? Repeatedly calling the same mumblers? Jesus,

If we really worked at it, I could probably reach where they were in a day or two by hitch-hiking.

"Al-Qaida" = "General Mahmoud Ahmad" = "bush's ungodly partners in crime"

Who IS running this bushite nazi liar show, where they, our elite corporate media masters, kill our stupid kids with their flagrant naked monster lies, while refusing all calls for clarity, Johnny America really wants to know. Like immediately. Help us out here some man, don't be evil.

/ / "Those who negotiate in the name of the Taliban will be killed," he said. He did not elaborate. \ \ He's either with the proven cowards of JTF2, or the two or three "CIA" guys secretly hunting bin Laden in caves out there with tens of billions of dollars. SPENT EACH YEAR 'unknowingly'. (No reason why, but, they just can't tell You, as the paying for it really while DYING) Put US in Command.

kill all of them

/ / In his testimony on Wednesday, Pfc. Bradley Mason of Company C said that on May 8, the night before the raid, Colonel Steele told soldiers to ``kill all of them.'' Three other soldiers gave similar testimony. \ \

I would offer rewards for more soldiers to come forward. Why? because there truly is, no honor among thieves. Every bushite soldier in Iraq for the liar neocon is minimum, a purposeless dumfuked cowardly thief. See? if you offer a reward, and they don't take it, their 'fellow' bushite, kill'em for it, right? why take the risk it'll cash in over your worthless life? For, who can trust a lying bushite nazi savage? certainly not a lying bushite nazi savage. In other words: speak against committing war criminal acts of lawless aggression in Iraq for Bush, as CLEARLY un-American, and I'll try to forgive you as human. Or, I guess you'll kill yourselves in mutually muted total contempt for this universal life as actually worth something.

When you see and hear on video, sexually dysfunctional, as sadistically satanic grunt puke pro-bush soldiers moaning, while deliberately killing innocent defenseless Family People running for our dying lives from a holy church, or as just simply anyone standing near the side of the road, then, my friend, you'll begin to understand what evil actually is. And, what needs to be done to seriously save ourselves. Seriously. Justice must be won sooner than later.

Five Star American General Johnny Wizard will train American Soldiers to recognize such demonic behaviors in combat as worthy of immediate frag to defend the lives of truly fellow honorable soldiers. Soldiers ACTually, committed to freedom from godless satanic dumfuk tyranny of the antichrist demon, Mr. evil personified, the UN-ELECTED 911 TERRORIST, George Walker Bush and CO..

/ / "He realized that they had killed these three [innocent] detainees, and in that moment, yes, he decided to help his [ungodly murderously nazi fascist] squad members, [escape Freedom through Law wisely practiced]" Gorecki said. \ \

There is much self evident truth hovering above the realities of such statements. For the exampled fact, that he did actually use a weapon against 'his' troops, 'to save them punishment', says a great deal more than they contend we hear. Now really, how ''we be dying as godless war criminals for demon LIAR Bush'' dumb is that? (and how does such an evil thing steal our military command in an un-defended Johnny's America? as a dying for bushite tyranny, irrational neocon war wanker? like holy fu-k..) Remember: evil is real.

The time is now.

Let Johnny Wizard on Coast to Coast everywhere god damn them man, get US on the PUBLIC radio to make something better of ourselves by communicating freely. Do it!

Praise Jesus, and pass the ammo forthrightly. I'm a hungry man.

"If the absence of violence is victory, no one will ever win." http://cleveland.indymedia.org/news/2007/03/24652.php

I know, it's seems odd that I am, at the same time, offering answers to any question on the science of God as is pertains to Justice measured, but this is just who I am to be conscious man. So, if we can get over the shock of me being so especially normal, maybe we can then realize, I have some simple good old ideas that transcend through time by rational understanding communicable between any two people. I am not a "miracle worker" to all those I advise to not eat Aspartame because it's a poison that also makes your body crave un-needed carbs, that will likely convert to more unless fat. So, it slowly kills you, while making you fatter than you need be along the dead end journey faithing in "the system". So, why do some do it religiously? Who cares (for now) but to say, our governments are failing US miserably. I spoke personally with one of the head scientists in Canada at "Health Food and Safety", and he told me the scientific analysis done by reputable scientists I found freely available repeatedly on the internet years ago, was completely true.

(It breaks down to formaldehyde, and methanol (a slow lethal poison), among other shockers. Poison. P-o-i-s-o-n-s in our food stuffs. Poisons.) However, he could take no action to defend Canadians "officially" because we, Canadians, have our corporate interest news departments completely refusing to defend ourselves from corporate exploitation anywhere, and as natural consequence, we, as the dying world, would together unrepresented, probably lose a law suit from mutant Monsanto through the self inflicted bounds of OUR censored WTO program. - instituted through the top secretly mastered puppet people persons of the 'unseen' NWO I guess.

I'm telling you, we need me as King.

Look: Aegis's workforce, for American PAYING profit, has been publicly disclosed through CNN to be shooting people in Iraq indiscriminately for your money, and when the Pentagon was contacted by Nick Roberts about what would be done, they responded, nothing would be done by Johnny's America but to increase the multi-hundred-million dollar contract with demon enemy Tim Spicer to continue. Now... why you ask? Because the neocon liars, steal money by lying to cowardly American kids about what they mindlessly, without thought, give their souls for. Tim Spicer openly hires South African goons to commit hardships for American GIs to die without end for, in lawless tyranny. Peace sells less money for the neocon war profiteers to murder the innocent American as. (Iraqis, along with the rest of Humanity's Men, WILL eventually learn this truth, or life for you will end.) As an Arab hating bushite, (like what you'd find as a publicly proud practiced hatred for all Humanity, by an Amerkan dumfuk soldier in Google's alt.religion.islam), they say nothing for Freedom by Justice, but root themselves to Spicer's monsters who like killing black guys, as world renown mass murdering racist nazi filth. That's why zionist Israel loves them so much.

Look: Somebody stole four trillion dollars out of the Pentagon.

Look: Greenspan STOLE four trillion American dollars for his international billionaire banker friends before 'leaving'. [Asian market chaos SCAM]

Look: Lotteries everywhere in North America are running the same PROVEN criminal scams that cost US ALL billions and billions of public dollars that, without question, (as MATHEMATICAL FACT), regressively destroy our dying communities. CRIMINAL. [Solution: 100 percent cash payouts.]

Look: corporate magic TV people couldn't care less for US if they tried. Ahmad funded Atta. bin Laden claimed he played no part in 911. And video of steel running like water moments before the first tower fell is freely available for download all over the place. CBC, CNN, FOXnews et al. know the Bushmob did 911 in other words. I've spoken to most of those 'in control', and I'm telling you, they're losers, and they know it. Remember: they'll censor my voice to send YOUR child to die for no better good, or reason understood, while entertaining. Weekend TV in North America totally sucks.

Now, why do YOU think that is brother? The more powerless they make US, the more money the neocon zionists can murder Humanity for, thinking they might just get away from this if we continue to take no action in defense of anyone as God would will. Let me be Your servant King, by backing me up some here. We need some dollars to eat, and I need it now before we starve to deaths.

Look: Barbra Bodine did the Cole bombing. [the Cole whose crew has been completely overhauled. Where are the many who served there NOW eh?]

Look: America has kidnapped countless thousands without evidence to be held against OUR will indefinitely. [Like the NOT Jewish Israel]

Look: innocent people are being tortured to death by those who hide OPENLY in America's uniform. [let US hunt them down for GOD, despite what demon lies they argue give them as Satanic to avoid "The Law".]

Look: the bushmob war profiteers STOLE the Iraqi Development fund

Look: the more than 100,000 security contractors for Bush are officially deemed lawlessly unaccountable to anyone - THINK ABOUT IT

Look: Negroponte PERSONALLY stole the Iraqi emergency water provision money

Look: Sattler OPENLY committed the worst war crimes of all Humanity's history

Look: I am a guy that is regularly denied public access to our national radio programs because I speak documented truths consistently on behalf of real honorable soldiers and police officers. I agree with most, if not all facts Alex Jones importantly brings to our attention, however, I almost as often, disagree with his conclusions.

Support my cause, which is your cause.

Senior Military analyst, Rob Riggle "In the field John, the soldiers are out there, every day, risking their lives, for a common Ideal: that none of the President's decisions be questioned."

This is more true than a bushite would admit before murdering a honorable father to rape his young child, like Lcpl Boudreaux freely confesses. Boudreaux will tell you, openly, you have to murder the Arab father of the Arab child your planning to rape, because if you don't, that Father will spend the rest of this life, hunting you down in the streets to rip you limb from limb for it.

Let US, me and the few, proud, and the brave, bring that Father's intent to bare on lancing Boudreaux, and any other who would sing in it's ungodly defense.

Zionist american media celebs do tell, everyday, soldiers for the neocon are all Heroes. (True Hero worship has long gone dead, and simple common respect for the starving man of Johnny Wizard is almost entirely illusionary, but for the love of God has for me, the Son, to never stop caring religiously.) While McCainites advocate imprisoning any (chosen) man in America (with our familiar "Exploitation Units"), who has a picture anywhere on their computer of a fully clothed teen, while denying this following censored video of children being beat to death for fun and profit is real. When I watch only thirty seconds, my rage as a god increases beyond anything anyone of Humanity can even contemplate, and i start crushing bricks in my hands with fury, twist iron bars into pretzels, all as a foolishly feeble attempt to personally have killed those present in this video. Then I cry. I cried for these children present in this video the first time I watched it, and I cried last night briefly, before stopping it.

Please, my brothers, join me in hunting each and every bushite present in this video down for death. For a Love of God that will never end, until we have seen each and every responsible child killing bushite present brought to true Justice extreme.

Did you know Blair had arrested the reporters who reported this initially? Didn't think of defending children, no sir. For, the commentator, who gives the play by play, while masturbating, has been given forgivence because it's an heroic "Christian". Not publicly executed. This must change for the better. Here is where I will make my final stand, and where heaven shall part from hell in America.

But for those of us who would believe protection to be a mean?? Find out!, in the new candid, let's talk politics interview, with no other than, PRESIDENT GEORGE W. BUSH.

ARE YOU TALKING TO ME? - A Johnny America Exclusive! - a candid interview on Bush's deeper than ever political thoughts about the war, up front, and personal. Surely, an historical event such as this, with the revelations contained in his own shockingly powerful words, while granting a stage in Johnny Wizard's World, is frankly, beyond the pale, quite shocking in perspective I'm sure I would state again. I feel confident Bush's surprising candor on life's humbling higher meaning wont make the crazies 'out there' any more less right per say.
As for the barely living of you passing travelers to our dying

Realm.... be ready to be taken on a journey of such profound discovery, with a wit never before witnessed from President Bush!, all about the cruel hardships Americans continue to endure without guidance through effective leadership. Without evidence to form his guilty verdicts. That orders the murder of the innocent with. I kid you NOT. Hey? maybe the Son of Man doesn't have to wipe out the entire human race after all.. With Bush co-operating now, I personally believe, no, I know, we're going to make a go of this after all.

Let US speak in challenge to any or all bushite enemies

NATO war plane bombers must be hunted down by the will of Humanity to be gloriously publicly executed to defend the innocent lives, they once again, have indiscriminately murdered in Afghanistan without a sliver of evidence, but for to say, some dumfuk had a 'rumor' that a single individual SUSPECTED to be an anti-heroin pro-child defending Taliban supporter, granted the bombers of NATO to wipe out an entire village MURDERED indiscriminately by the TRUE demonic enemies of LIFE. Please, if you must forsake me in your personal cowardice and self loathing, don't forsake GOD and America by not killing with PRIDE, these bushite dumfuks of NATO the first chances you get. Love liberty as if it were your own, and kill a lawlessly murderous bushite nazi savage for your love of anyone included. (You can quote me forever on that.)

Giuliani told ABC's Peter Jennings on September 11, 2001

'..and I was operating in there [75 Barkley St.], when I was told that the World Trade Center Towers were going to collapse.'

WTC TOWERS? "WERE"?

Did you know that the international Johnny Wizard comic book is out there? Don't miss out on picking up a copy for yourself, or your loved ones. And did you know, I'm trying to get on international radio without a censor to thunder my audience back into submission. I HATE HANNITY. All I want is free open debate to resolve this crisis, that doesn't have to be so ruining our dying worlds without questions forwarded by the dumfuks. Justice is Paramount through reason to be so. The Bush Administration have been up to no good, escaping for 911, that New York City should sue for. Hire me on as legal consultant buddies, cause I'm like near starving broke here, with supreme court challenges failing my cost factor, and hunger pangs slowing our progress on fighting unjust incarceration. I desperately need money, like now, as a gift, or an advance on a industry paid private consultant gig. Or, instead, maybe you'll idly watch some innocent person willfully be sent to prison by liars in your demonized name, to defend the ungodly evils of war criminal traitor, our Mr.

Bush Jr. in foolish disguises. Your call Bud.

be Wiser,

Johnny Wizard - Patriot Liberator of Eternal Destiny
(i.e. REAL sustainability as self sufficiency)

(i.e. nothing is separate from existence ourselves, not even time, and Justice is binding to defend our lives if practiced fairly with it's elemental divisions through reason. Example: a person accused of a criminal offence, without any evidence, is INNOCENT. Those who say otherwise, are the actual terror-ists. Civilization's ancient Founder Hammurabi, suggested just to openly publicly have executed those who lay capital allegations without any evidence, while working to close outstanding criminal investigations. A made CRIME within ourselves Hammurabi claimed, and by thinking such ways, brought birth of 'Civilized' to an untamed till then, chaotic confusion. Old becomes again anew, because Americans are weak as polluted, and too cowardly to defend the rights of US innocent. Let's change that. Support my climb to international controversy, with my unchallenged claims of direct accountability being sought, for the 911's neocon war terror plot.

http://japan.indymedia.org/usermedia/image/7/large/jw-wallpaper.jpg

P.S. someone tell Hannity, I got a beef with his demon lies to sacrifice our guys. I'm calling Hannity out to explain himself freely to US now, as a demand for an immediate match between him and ourselves in the dug pit of his utter contempt for our free to be alive communications.

'A military judge ruled last week that Watada cannot base his defense on the war's legality.'

Telling US what?, that it is a crime to not commit a crime? It isn't only high treason against America the ungodly bushite are guilty of, but of a madness held by those truly Satanic..

/ / 'Why are you taking pictures? You don't have permission."' [...] the [bush whore] American, speaking through a translator, warned him that he did not want to see any AP photos published anywhere.\ \

No bushite was found gloriously killed for country, yet, they, the godless bushite enemy, continued to shoot innocent People indiscriminately for a distance of six miles, while likely, secretly masturbating each other as bushite liars do always.

The pro-bush irrational military said only eight innocent un-armed Afghans were counted as murdered deliberately, by those who believe our Mankind, can not ever find themselves accountable, without zionist controlled, corporate news permission. See? The military counts mankind as zionist, but I am a man of real men, committed to defend our world from all enemies, foreign, or domestic. Unlike a bushite traitor to God and America, who's word, as Oath, means as much to them, as we do. Ungodly as they are loveless, the bushite, is Life's enemy.

See my friends, this is why I, as the Son of Man beg and plead for all able bodied men, to kill treasonous bushite on sight, for every time you love God by defending the innocent from murder, (the innocent whom any pro-bush corporate professional hold in total self contempt,) you save REAL peoples lives, and you defend God's good name to love God as ourselves committed to true Liberty. Bushites are enemies of freedom, enemies of God, and worthy of death, before allowed to further bomb people indiscriminately like the commanders of NATO order day after day without risking instant frag because, bushites are blind cowardly thieving nazi fascist savages, brain damaged, who believe as satanic demon whores of Molech, they can con all of US including me forever, just like dare dubya. Dumfuks.

WHERE IS YOUR NATIONAL NEWS TO DEFEND OUR PRIVATE INTERESTS?

Former FBI Director Calls For New OKC Bombing Investigation

/ / The FBI man in charge of collecting evidence from the government building destroyed by the Oklahoma bomb has called for the case to be reopened. \ \

WHERE IS YOUR NATIONAL NEWS TO DEFEND OUR PRIVATE INTERESTS?

First things first: America must demand the immediate arrest of those who told America the victim committed suicide, when clearly, due to autopsy photos, the individual was tortured to death as the innocent. So, the 'officers' responsible for the fraudulent claims, need to be arrested for accessories to MURDER. The torture will earn them both the death sentence, if found guilty under STANDING AMERICAN LAW. And any bushite like a, it's always a great day George Norry, who purposefully with criminal intent stands in life's continuing way for Justice's demand, American Patriots will phone to Bill with every once of pinky power we have at our disposal.

Support Johnny Wizard's personal challenge against thieving LIAR traitor Hannity, and his corporate nazi bush whores who lore our stolen values by how much they can deny US privilege.

Coast to Coast radio hosts need to be publicly challenged for debate they deny US knowing of together naturally speaking. Great example of our Problem: CBC National Radio, in Canada. When a caller phones during the very rare moments we're taking public words, have a pre-broadcast rig-a-ma-role question session, you'll have with not only the OFF-AIR screener, where he'll probe you for controversy, but after the first process of noting in book form your disclosed intel, will notify you that; IF your independent thought is granted by the "Producer" (- who reviews everyone - rules are rules -) Our national station will phone you back this afternoon, so stay tooned, to line you up with your baking gingerbread creds. They never ever dido! The more Brilliant you are, (like the highly charged as extremely charismatically charming, wild man ruler, Johnny America - the media phenomenoner) the higher probability they'll find POSSIBLE concern, on their do nothing for your taxed attitudes..!. Why take chances someone might show a greater living responsibility to a real suffering God as our left corporately forsaken Country?.?.?. A dying Humanity.

Look, seriously, my friends, we have all the answers to our problems.

Support Johnny Wizard's personal challenge against thieving LIAR traitor Hannity, and his corporate nazi bush whores who lore our stolen values by how much they can deny US privilege of equal standing.

Albeit, some rock/country/pop stations are now wading a little ways to allow minimal defensive communications on behalf of our truly dying communities. [i.e. the THIEVING Lottery actually takes more than communities get returned in cash transfers from the government, and this, beat up the unrepresented poor, actually ends costing EVERYONE more. [read "Stand Together, or Don't"] You don't know Evil until you hear CJOB's radio host pontificating on it's greatness to deny our community any time to respond to their direct criminality against OUR interests. A near 75 percent of Our radio content is private commercials, while the rest of twenty percent is amateur sport updates. Why don't the strangely often fat slob sports fanatics go away on their own as blood sucking leeches, and stop denying us more serious subject meters with 'we're just too dumb to hear' censorships. In Winnipeg, it is a teensy, tiny authoritarian illiterate group of sports crowers, that the station has devoted the Province entirely to for private financial profit. And so, what is someone in Selkirk Manitoba going to do with the play by play radio commentary?, not listen like everyone in Winnipeg does since, that's what. I personally can't even bare the wasted time, to finally get on to be immediately hung up on impolitely by a Station who literally robs from our community. More than 600,000 live in Manitoba, as apposed to a small cadre of proven criminals who stole our public phone system, or took a PULBICLY paid for Private arena or Private sports facility that cost us practically billions to get in the front door of the already completely paid for by ourselves ten times over, to maybe see a concert that Ticketmaster charges half the ticket price to simply just print a paper ticket/contract. ENTERTAINERS, let me be your manager's Manager instead, and I'll get you every last penny your fans paid to see YOU with. I could practically double your earned earnings, or, are you instead going to blindly give HALF your life to a scalper, who's done nothing creative but hire someone near minimum wage to press a print button religiously. I'll tell you what, we just won't do any more good shows until we can get this remedied by freely communicating our concern for dying soldiers left further without measured value, left to actually DIE in the gutter as homelessly forsaken.

Take care by taking action.

God we can't do this alone, I need you.

Help me gain access to speak freely for open challenge against Hannity, and of America's Coast to Coast Radio network hosts, who deliberately deny you to contend, we're really, one hell of a great bunch of People persons with rights God damn them.

promoted through the tyranny of censorship

Corporate News America's Terror Expert, Gaffney, who publicly advocates the rape and murder of the innocent in Iraq to thieve from for the 'escaping' neocons, (as the truly UNGODLY,) stated these words about why American Soldiers continue to lawlessly DIE sacrificed for no better good or reason understood, as total willing dumfuks under deep hypnosis:

"It is not George Bush, it is not the Neocons, it is not people who have been advocating waging that [IRRATIONAL 'Evil' UNJUST] war [against the established innocent] where we find our [hidden from view] enemies, who are responsible for that fact that we are indeed in a global war [sacrificing our conned kids to the un-accountable war profiteering thieves of American labor as the UNELECTED]. It is the enemy that started it, that is pursuing it, and that is trying to bring it here back here home now. [, and that way, us neocon zionists would miserably fail against those who would speak in freedom's demand for Universal Justice. Real freedom I mean of course, you know, evidence to form conclusion factually, public trial by questioning juries, blah blah blah. We can't have that Now can We? Colmes? Greenwald?]"

"," = swinging pocket watch

Don't let these neocon zionist bastards doe this to US. Either Gaffney suffers from some blind dolt syndrome, where he clearly can't see himself flailing madly in criminal ignorance, or he's an accomplis of blatant treachery, to help escape his demonic war profiteering benefactors who murdered thousands of Americans for similar gains through the unspeakable bonanza of the "Pearle Harbor" like event that 911 was. What the peenackers publicly stressed they would crave to fool US into Iraq and beyond as glorified war criminals. 911, New York City, where thousands of Americans were murdered, and millions polluted. killed like now American teen soldiers with the Iraqis. Led by a Sattler, or Mattis, Blount or Russell, who order the murder of women and children openly, and 'they', the actual soulless minions of the demon antichrist, the true dumfuk cowardly enemies of Humanity, don't cut them down instantly instead for Life as cherished. That must change for our betterments. Kill any bushite bomber and be loved by God's America.

Any Commander that doesn't support the arrest of those responsible for 911 and the subseqent neocon war crimes of Iraq, is a traitor to God and Country. Death to the bushite, death to our enemies - so says Johnny.

How much much God take as taken, before you people get on over this criminally empowered war monger Congress of an unelected lawless dictator demon, and call them out on the turning talk commercial radios, all to finally truly defend ourselves with a good media plan for results.

Make the call, be a man.

further to the death cults of corporate news:

Realize, our corporate experts on Life in the national news agenda, don't work to defend our children from mercury in innoculations they promote for profit. Nor, do they tell US about radio-active depleted uranium. Instead, as now, they look to blame others, even God, when suggesting dna is responsible, as if the American corp public could even comprehend multi-demensional cross kingdoming. They can't, (too stupid) but their Satanic death cult [no evidence] where they News pretend and WE DIE, they are willing to continue to go with by refusing all calls. Ahmad funded Atta, but they don't want to tell US there either. Look how many people they have so far watched murdered as the innocent for zionism while entertaining.

Support our call to be heard my brothers.

Sir Ken, head of the Crown Prosecution Service

"The fight against terrorism on the streets of [..] is not a war. It is the prevention of crime, the enforcement of our laws and the winning of justice for those damaged by their infringement."

You got that right. So, join US in demanding the quick trials, and public executions of known bushite enemies who murdered Americans on 911 with general Ahmad, and who with Peter Powers, murdered the innocent in Britain for more stolen goods against God. And anyone in the air force as bushite bombers should be a great joy for US all to hunt for prosecuting too. The bushite dumfuk is an enemy to our lives, with it's blatant naked contempt for the innocent, who like the demon liar THEIVES at CJOB, George Norry, or Hannity, will forbid ANY human defenses of the lawless dictate of the IRRATIONAL tyrannical demon antichrist, all so to victimize more of You as the censored forsaken.

REPENT. [from the Greek, meaning to think.]

The TRUE Son of Man Johnny Wizard Exists Born to this Eternal World to end permanently demonic bushite enemies of Creation. Help Life out by destroying cowardly America's greatest threat to the Species, the greatest threat against Humanity's Freedom to be Loved by God. Corporate nazi zionist bushlores at CBC,

CNN, and criminal thieving from the desperately poor in Winnipeg CJOBers forbid open communications, and I can't 'take over', because then I'd be defeating my own, power to the Peoples argument. So, it really is up to YOU, yes you there... reader. Who.. really..? YOU, here, now. Life begs, takes a stand for your fellow man, and demand our voices heard for the defense of the entire human race. And be quick about it. Repuglicons don't want freedom from endless war where they kill your forsaken kids, for we all know, bushites would be publicly tried, then spend the rest of their treasonous lives behind bars broke, or dead from lethal injections made popular in America. Again, officer Bowman is responsible for letting 'escape' those from Fort Detrick, who attempted to murder the American Congressmen who thought going into lawless tyranny, !makes no sense! Where is corporate America on our issues when OUR free speech is ruled by the irrational evil minds of Limbaugh, Bell, and Norry?!?!! Back to Bowman: Bowman, also is responsible for sabotaging the Moussaoui warrant. And, how much you wanna bet, he's probably the same bushite who found Atta's passport, and likely had all 19 names of the high-jackers to give CNN, CBC, and FoxNews just like the neocon's "bin Laden" would have too. Take the publicly prancing bushite enemy out for questions by yourself, if he doesn't plead his defense publicly on Coast to Coast by tomorrow. Remember, there ain't an "Intelligence" group worth their salt on the face of our Earth, that doesn't know exactly what I'm doing here honorably for a real Justice made through careful thought. So, support Johnny Wizard speaking for public challenges internationally, and with the 23 plus co-operating for life 'Intel' agencies, along with, anyone else who can join in on the call. as a growing number of Patriot Soldiers, who trust yourself to see, this wanting of Justice isn't complicated. A person accused of a terrorist event without any evidence, has our accuser a bushite, who should be watched carefully until verifiable conclusions are done by the understanding of fact. Not faith. With George W. Bush making real decisions in faith, expecting us to believe as corporately broadcasted unabashedly unbiased, that he is not a deliberate incompetent monster war criminal of unfathomable evil?, who is just too 'stupid' to understand why we are innocent until proven otherwise?, is really something we all need to scream about to save our dying lives.

"[..] just like the neocon's "bin Laden" would have too."

However, the real Laden, on video taped confession, claimed he played no part whatsoever in 911, then later, offered himself for arrest, confident he would be acquitted. Not corporately newsworthy though, so, few even know why their American child was later died in the terrorists act of corporate contempt for US living Freedom with something greater as real Justice wills

Yours again,

King Johnny Wizard

Whatdoyahsay?? \ \

Art Bell, the zionist enemy of Life, wont allow free communications with the established facts though, so, as natural consequence, America IS dying for their own personal contempt for the value of Your very own soul. THEIVING zionist TV america won't put in ten minutes of caring for the lives of anyone bombed indiscriminately, but for to continue thieve from US as God unrepresented. George Norry supports in his broadcasts the murder of Arab children as the godly innocent, so, I support his immediate execution with AIPAC Hannity as lying demon nazi traitors to God and America. AIPAC people are really who all of Humanity should target as questionable, for first understanding what these, corporate professionals who are paid tons in spilt blood to spew lie after lie are, then after open debate, where ANYONE, even anonymously can speak in their defense, we hunt each and every guilty lying zionist devil worshipper down, and burn them at the stake gloriously for God and Country.. Sound good? Or are we going to continue to go with, Israel is Jewish because while torturing their "friends", they thieve innocent Peoples homes, and incarcerate tens of thousands without charge, or bail, or Court. While dropping more than seven million American worker paid for land mines in Lebanon, across 170 towns and cities to murder children indiscriminately for decades. I say, save some lives, kill the zionist, and be a friend for Life to God from the Bible. Or, go to hell and see if we care.

What do you think? Are you truly all alone on this?

Again, more than half of the money being spent on demon Bush's wars against life's reason for being, is completely left un-accounted for thieving. Not spent to offer dumfuk cowardly soldiers help hunt to kill bushite rapists and torturers. Stolen American values Just like the bushite soldier on the ground, who after gunning down innocent people in the street, go through our pockets to steal the spared change. Kill a bushite for the love of God why don't you my American Patriot brother and sisters?, today!

Again, my friends, Art Bell and George Norry have thousands of bushite dumfuk in America that will phone them to tell US how greatly they are to have no care for dying freedoms in America. While when the humans call, Art Bell for example, between breaks, when privately screening his calls, just hangs up on anyone he fears might articulate things like Ahmad funded 911's Atta, according to the FBI, in defense of America. I say, we at LEAST, talk about putting them both to death for treasons against Your Life dying teen soldier, wannabe Patriot. Make sense?

Again, corporate nazi america states 30 percent of America supports the ungodly George W. Bush's demon antichrist action, when in truth, it's less than one in a thousand. it's just CBC, CNN, CJOB, and Art Bell the liars ain't taking our calls for enlightenment. just like they treat the innocent in Palestine for zionism's encouraged racist in-action. For what does a fan of 'we're the best' Coast to Coast radio network family know about nothing after we witness them froth at the thoughts of nuking countries, or calling for enemies, none of us here in North America have any real problems with?

People of Earth, know, these bushite soldiers war Creation proudly with repeatedly committing aggravated felons, and South African death squad goons, all to war Love for the neocon god haters. Who, as peenacking atheists, as their very own documents stress, would murder anyone of US for a stolen nickel.

Die bushite die.

/ / A Winnipeg bodybuilder, who had to be forcibly removed from a flight to Winnipeg, was denied bail in a Minneapolis court Friday and will remain in jail until his trial. \ \

Why is it that CBC, CTV, or Global doesn't think this story needs coverage?, why, in fact, is "the establishment" not seeking for clarity on this matter of direct accountability? Is holding Aaron E. James in Minneapolis, not like, sorta, questionable? He could be a good guy in a bad spot, or a bad guy in a good spot, it certainly wouldn't take much to find out. But Look! just like in 911, and the daily atrocities of the nazi THIEVERS in Israel, they, as a celeb cult of zionist refusniks, deny US to seek Justice for caring, and that in selling their, who cares darkness, succumb to the "powers" of the bushmob's Satanic devil worship, done through Bush's flawed deity named Molock. (snpd)

My friends, People are dying because the magic radio and TV wont broadcast our publicly available findings. Police findings. People are dying needlessly, illegally, irrationally like meaning really stupidly on Bush's behalf, for they claim, we don't want to be 'embarrassing ourselves', leaving our forsaken Johnny Wizard's Wild Wow World of Wonder Wording Wees!.. mostly just appreciated by myself as sole surprised spectator, because you people seem to not be there for God when the chips are down, and truth is plain to see.. 911 was an inside job, and CBC with CNN don't want to tell us about it, but will watch our LOVED children lied to, to go out and die further for a causeless war of criminality unparalleled in it's wickedness.

Time is wasting ourselves on nothing but contempt. It's been five long years And I love you just the same. Honest Human, I'm not all that bad a guy if you don't go dying to promote further rape, torture and murder of ourselves as the INNOCENT. in my name, all to please G.W. Bush, "The Liar", as your lawless godless falsifying commander, Your chief 'savior' - leading you blindly for slaughter as human sacrifice. Now, for the really really scary stuff: I'm God's Dead ringer. Hell isn't necessarily a bad place to visit, but you don't want to end there indefinitely without any love left for living large.

Do you expect yourself to fail trying?

It's all up to You my friend, it's all up to you.

Onward Christian Soldier.

Life. Ourselves, the innocent. These soulless grunts don't destroy such deserving commanders, Like Blount, Sattler, Russell, Wuterich, Pantano or even Kimmitt, and instead, as in Fallujah, murder every woman and child present, while stealing all our given monies for desperate life saving help. Anyone

NEVER seen any legitimate bombing campaign, but for to kill People indiscriminately like NATO regularly does with radio-active toxic waste, while then sending in the dumfuk

rightly get killed on the ground in retaliation for such blind evil stupidity. Please, I beg, help Iraqis, and kill the escape for the treasons against America on 911, for, bushites are OPENLY traitors, as the TRUE enemies of evidenced Justice, as the Freedom to do our own things loving God on our own.

Besides, most bushites aren't even registered American nor on mercury vaccines not banned minus "The President" in dollar "Exploitation Units" to defend our King's children from TRAITOR pro-torture of US as the INNOCENT McCain there then eh? Units who he holds hiding behind himself somewhere in high blind praise as a rich group of child lovers I SAY??? (Is a heroin pushing bushite THIEF that supports the 'escape' of the bushmob with indiscriminate bombings in Iraq or Afghanistan, Lebanon, Haiti or Somalia, even capable.! of real human Love I torturingly ask dauh gangsta rappah? buddies where are You there in the stomach of the Beast celebrating?) McCain is a demon enemy of Life ourselves to promote the arrest of all the goodness that beauty brings in the heavenly art of our clothed teens. If it weren't for Earth Women, God's boy, Johnny Wizard, wouldn't even be here to bother. It's the reason I first picked up a guitar, it's the reason I did my early plays, then monster movies, and it's the reason I praise the orchestra of the Heavens in Dream, and well.. it's just the reason for everything. I speculate sometimes perhaps slyly that G was kinda lonely all by ourselves for zillions of years, whom, for entertainment, loved us up on the entranced exit starting - before a beginning without ending, yet, as outer there, is still the insider here, forever being we sorta, and gave us this foolish boy for the mental gymnastics. All in good fun. Rocking on to leave all as Mystery, never realized forever and a day in Eternity. You are a Servant, as so I am. Quite a place eh kid? So as it looks now presently, we're here still barely hanging on striving to survive against Mr. Bush's continuing unfair irrational tyrannies of clear injustices committed in Your Name against our Humanity, or, end ourselves dying without true representation, left falling further forsaken. [Home is home sweet home as in Chicago, as we always was going to with or without our loves heaven bound. For I'm starting a journey back to where I belong, where the food is good, the music's great, and life is truly worth living as miraculous.

Sorry everybody, but that's the way it's gotta be for my Life to have meaning terms.] Long story short: Females Rule, and wiseguy Johnny is Freedom King for this moment Being.

Division is Illusion to a concept incapable of conception, because of our understandable impossibility to think such things that demand to have no mass included I suppose nowhere. Very strange stuff we can be considered as.. but guess what? Every mark is off the mark. It's totally crazy, but you move on to find Life to see/be how things are, and when you cross over, you find us all suffering much needlessly in blind sorrows due in failures to simply communicate our findings. So, that's who I am. I'm born a simple man with a plan to save my broken dreams, and also exist unknowingly everywhere, all ways, forever... even beyond death.. just like you funny

Atheist sparks of quantum energies are also, theoretically I should say in reflection. What proof could I bring you that would suffice you believing you have a responsibility to protect our dying selves too? Don't forsake me, by forsaking yourself in doing. Mister Bush committed 911 with his partner Ahmad, and we together, somehow, must fight back to defend ourselves DYING by demanding George W. Bush's immediate arrest, along with the others implicated from his Administration of Evil for the neocons treason of 911. Then, we'll work on us through there for further unseen treasuries! Keep the faith my friends, you all can now do this without my support whatsoever. So, get to it... for, I'll probably be watching from my cell if I'm imprisoned soon fraudulently from your fear to defend US now, further falling innocent victims by the will of no one.

Please help God.

We have to overhaul how all our national news Podcasts are assimilated through corporate nazi zionist censorship. Art Bell and George Norry are enemies to ALL american teen troops put in harms way to die as bad guy irrationally for the neocon God betrayers. Why? because they purposefully lie to have YOU die as innocent murder victim. Death to the bushite, death to God's enemies.

Well, gee, Iran has no nuke program, in anyway, shape, or form, but Israel wants to murder more of humanity for their ungodly lies anyway. The enriched uranium Iran is making, can not be used for a bomb because it's only enriched to 2 percent, and to get the bomb making stuff, you need a COMPLETELY different technology. But science?, in bushite america? It has been reported that some special ops out of Britain are paying for terrorist attacks to happen in Iraq to insure more Americans give their lives in praise - as criminally sacrificed - to the demon antichrist, Our Mr. bush Jr.. All unjustly suffering because corporate news america cowardly refuse to defend freedom, by defending the truly innocent. Nor, will Coast to Coast allow me to speak on "American" radio. Let's change that. Will you make it so Commander?

Cause I'm ready.

A Public Letter to the "American" Coast to Coast Radio Network:

1. We, as the People, demand you allow US, the human species to openly discuss the public evidence on who funded the terrorist acts of 911 according to the FBI. And full disclosure on the science of building Seven.

2. That the Iraq war never had, nor ever will have a justification, concluding Naturally, that all stolen Iraqi money must be returned by the will of GOD to the victims; with those responsible for stealing it, made to pay US back, with the true American Patriots to be found, backing US up 100 percent. The bush administration has teamed our kids to mercenary forces who have no loyalty to freedom but to freely die another Marine for more dying stolen values. While successful at it corporate America, just lies and lies and lies without shame, nor apology for the death of your poor cowardly kin.

3. Also, that mercury tainted vaccines are deadly stupid. Mercury is scientifically understood, without question, (no doubt) to be a neural-toxin, and, Influenza is a constantly mutating virus. So, pre-determining which 'deadly' strain is going next, is only because the WHO wants to continue killing US for huge cash profit. With cult slaves, like those who forced Jones Towners to drink at gun point, are the same as those who now demand we give our girls of America from Texas such. It seems the magic TV news people don't want to trouble us on this matter of our actual survival.

You must wake up to life's demand for you to defend our dying lives my friend. Please? Make the call, be a man to defend our women. Be a man to protect our children.

Support our call to be heard my brother.

That's all.

/ / to think that these could have been just dumb ideas or incompetence. (L. Paul Bremer, for instance, who made the "dumb" decision about dismantling the Iraqi army, prior to becoming Iraq's occupation viceroy, had headed the nation's leading risk assessment consultancy, and surely knew what all the risks were of his various decisions.) \ \

Bushite TRAITORS got rid of the ORHA plan.

Death to our indiscriminately murderous thieving enemies of God's Creation, who war Creation for bush's personal escape for the crimes of 911 Christ would say right, wouldn't you say so likewise my brothers and sisters, of the Muslim, Christian, and Jewish religions in belief?

Exit strategy to save the lives of dying Americans:

War bushite LIAR zionist repuglicons who did God wrong on 911

War bushite who LIE to American Sons and Daughters to not hunt those who stole billions with ear-marks, Social Security, no-bid contracts, Iraqi oil, ect.

War those who stole the Iraq Development Fund, and the emergency monies left to save the lives of our dying children

War bushite who feed soldiers radio-active toxic waste as harmless

War bushite who support torturing the innocent to death

War bushite who sing about the joys of murdering Iraqi children

War bushite who beat to death barefoot Iraqi children

War bushite who jokingly beat lamed dogs for fun

War bushite who claim they are lawlessly un-accountable as liars.

War bushite in the air force who target bombing innocent People like in Fallujah or Somalia with land mines and mini nukes

The godless as lawless bushite is the enemy to America, kill it proudly for freedom, as an undying love for a real God and Again, a Patriot Soldier whos only crime is that he refuses

George Norry and Art Bell are enemies of American chances for survival of our dying teens. Their contempt for Justice in America is blatantly EVIL, and worth killing before they do another dumfuk, they hate US, zionist demon broadcast.
Traitors to God and Country George Norry and Art Bell are.
They'll laugh, sing, and cheer while KILLING your CENSORED forsaken Son or Daughter, needlessly trapped sacrificing with the ungodly 'lawless' bushite zionist enemies, all before allowing any REAL Americans to SIMPLY discuss evidence as a requirement to convince ourselves of something. Norry, that demon fu-ker, has an endless supply of bush whore callers, that'll tell him, he doesn't have to read the news, read his email, or hear the screams of dying innocent murder victims.
Sure, once a year, maybe, we'll get the Patriot popular Alex
Jones, but he's too terrified of me as Puppet Master, or US, or talking about the NO CAUSE Iraq war, that Iran doesn't have an ability to create weapons grade uranium, or that General Ahmad funded 911's Atta. Just the way TRAITOR George Norry DEMANDS it. For, truly there is no defense for 'lawless' bushite, but by an ungodly tyrannical censorship. Because YOU fear me, or refuse to demand Justice truly, You'll DIE as bushite victim, but Norry and Bell plan to live on 'escaping' as multi-millionaires, broadcasting on to further destroying freedom for others to 'cash in' with Your worthless forsaken soul. Now, I'm the Son of Man who can only do so much. If you won't speak for our dying freedoms, what do you expect me, or an all powerful G to do even? No... Really? What? I could ask all Universal species to assist US here on earth by hunting to kill bushite everywhere, but chances of 'them' getting here in time listening, seems rather unlikely. But who knows..

Death to the murderous bushite, death to our enemies, so says Johnny.

What are you then, some kinda Jesus freak?

You are standing in defense for your own rights as you see ourselves. For me, I got some real troubles scrounging my next meal as nature's King and Lord of all creation, but for you, this should be something of a dream almost, eh?

Worshiping bush in a delusional cult like, TV trance without any thought to care about our actual criminal irrational murderer of innocent good Americans as soldiers alike, a psychopathic depiction to his true evil self as US played intolerantly ignorant, while he bares false witness against our eternal family of all being humanity. Is not what you too perceive of our world?, a reflection of your own conclusion? If we believe we are of life when perceiving an injustice, are we not moved to do something in favor of our remedy? To challenge bush's contempt for ourselves as the Public, is to demand nothing less than known facts to conclude our guilty verdicts, as otherwise, bush would be prosecuting US innocent as God is US included,

New Recruit

Destroying enemy bushite is a gift to Humanity, it is saying you care for the lives of the innocent a bush bitch nazi grunt freely confesses to targeting for murder. Liars are the bushite, who steal Iraqi resources, allow racists and rapists to commit their demon crimes in America's name un-challenged, and who absent mindedly bomb the innocent without just reason given. All the while, labeling themselves, "pro-Iraqi". snpd

Real Americans are those of US as humanity that believe in liberty as Justice for all. Demon bushite nazi whores, don't like those principles of freedom through evidentiary findings though, for their false deity,

George W. bush Jr, wouldn't be stealing from the honest hard working blokes who live for a better day that way.

The Iraqi children did nothing to deserve such awful suffering and fright and death at the hands of the enemy bushite. The bushite: who the demon anti-Christ states, are un-accountable to any rules of law in this Universe, like with his extremely foolish criminal decree, 13303. I kill mindless parasite bushite nazi enemy soldiers just for that alone as eternal defender, and I do it for to win some mercy for a real living God, who the fascist enemy bushite hold in their ungodly contempt as LIARS.

I have the backing of every real man alive on this planet, and we all know it. No voices of reason have apposed my factual claims in FREE Usenet, and Art Bell makes no attempt to defend himself as internationally painted enemy traitor, and that says a whole lot to Talk America. Why? Because Mr. Bell, the bushite propagandist, knows too, I speak and act truthfully, honorably, and righteously, while the talk radio american bushite lies, cheats and steals from America's America, that as bushite, leave undefended for criminal plunder in Your name call censored from classed enrollment. You have just as much a right to be here as I do, and the demon bush, he ain't no better than any of US when he is "excused" for the murder of well more than a hundred thousand confessed as completely innocent people on this planet called Earth.

The fascist control bushite, don't like You to think independently for Yourself, for we independents out here make them look as stupid as they are. Thank you very much for that not so secret info.

Through the pronounced bush demon's gaffes, embarrassments, and told complete total ignorance on subjects like the science of economics, the whys of constitutional law, or when the bushite takes credit for indiscriminate killing of our families and friends while parading it's all done in bush's name for our freedom, or for 9/11, doesn't fool me, and should get you thinking about reaching for your guns too, for bushite rapists and torturers will not walk this world freely un-accountable, for as long as we remain alive to hunt them down and kill them if so be. As the soulless disciples of the enemy anti-Christ, Our Mr. bush Jr., their "officially" granted legal immunity from all prosecution means nothing to me as a honorable man defending my humanity, or as living Creator, who brought all into this new world to be free, and can just as soon, take you all nazi bushite out the old school way.

REMEMBER: Demon bush is stupid, yaw, but he knows that he and rumsfeld with condi planned and carried out the crimes of 9/11 with likely cheney orchestrating, don't ever forget that part when attempting assessment [snpd]

How The Demon Bush Misled God's World

How Bush misled the world
http://www.theage.com.au/handheld/articles/2004/02/05/1075853996640.html

/ / Once the document was declassified after the war it became known that it contained 40 caveats - including 15 uses of "probably", all of which had been removed from the previously published version. Tenet further ingratiated himself by remaining silent about the OSP. "That's totally unacceptable for a CIA director," said Thielman. \ \

Thielman meant "totally unacceptable" as in HIGH TREASON. Could it be any higher? Deliberately caught misleading whore-dumb Congress to wage his immoral neocon 'escape' with a unjustified criminal brutality against God as all of our Humanity. A great deal more than a million innocent people have been victims to the 'targeted' Zionist killings of the irrational bushite enemy. Lawless enemies to Creation, spreading their toxic waste who thieve, rape and murder without reprimand from corporate news america, shall, I pray daily, die justly in vengeances by the will of a real undying Love for our victimized innocent family. Justice for Humanity.

Please, help US.

The guilty party of Haditha have confessed that targeted killing of innocent children is fair game in their worlds, and as confessed, they 'got away' committing the same Satanic acts - going house to house in fallujah murdering more than two hundred thousand innocent folks for LIAR E-N-E-M-Y Sattler.

Bushite corporate america, has stated in silence, the bushite enemies of Haditha will never face public execution for such offences, YOU apparently WILL NOT GRANT IT, too cowardly, and in all likelihood, (like those of the Saudi Blount's third infantry) will be allowed to walk freely down american streets after being found guilty as politically supporting the robbing and murder of innocent men, women, and children all because we're rag-heads or niggers. The, deserving to die as illiterately intolerable bushite drone soldiers HAPPILY, WITHOUT QUESTION, co-operate with ANY lawless mercenary forces such as south african death squad goons in finding the enemies of themselves. Purposelessly ungodly bushite soldiers are told they are DYING to defend Iraqis, while breaking out of prison, mercenaries caught trying to kill innocent Iraqis for fun and profit. While, at the same time, actually having SLAVES from India preparing their lunches!!! And guess what? they're coming to live bushite america as the patriots after they get killed you're forsaken American Son or Daughter teen! With millions of stolen American dollars to set up new 'freedom' operations.

Shirley, bin Laden would be sided with the fundamentalist Shiites, before, everyone-is-an-equal Sunnis, who as Bathists, had no problem WARRING al-Qeada, while counting as members of their party, Christians, Jews, Muslims, and Atheists. But corporate bushite liar america says no, bin Laden supports Sunni IRRATIONALLY, and that is why bushites have to sacrifice in partnership with those who blow up PEOPLE indiscriminately as the 'good guy' 'heroes'. Similarly like in Somalia, where bushite forces are working to directly arm those who murdered American GIs during Clinton. Those war criming repuglicons responsible for the bombing need to be tried and executed for committing first degree acts of mass murder in America's name. CBC, in Canada reported that Pentagon sources allege their isn't any evidence whatsoever to what bushite news america has reported to the dumfukked populace. [Peter Lance will tell you [mind you, half assly] on behalf of investigating officers of our LAWS, it was a dishonorable LIAR Green Beret actually, a Green Beret who set the bombs and blew them up to KILL AMERICANS, but says Laden ordered him to it though, so he gets to go free on his own apparently. An individual EVERY AMERICAN should hunt to kill with Americxan Law firmly established already. Why? Zionists murder Americans for profit, by simply lying un-challenged through corporate mind control, and culted soldiers to this day, would thoughtlessly call the ungodly lawless bushite traitors to freedom, 'good guys' and 'heroes'.

A Soldier's Life Held in Contempt

The way I see it, is that I am completely documented correct on who was responsible for the terrorist crimes of 9/11. I have my own theories on why our media and police services have failed our Soldiers by refusing to support my cause directly thus far, but I am far without hope.

I believe the failures of me gaining direct wide support through our police services and the Court of Queen's Bench, is much more so for fear of uncertainty, and lack of leadership, than a general, across the board support of furthering Bush's war crime sprees by going still silent while Canadian soldiers are left forsaken. I speak out publicly often regarding the 911 evidence in America, and email campaigns of my writings, done for public recognition, I'm told, continue to swell to near epic proportions. Intelligence officers the world over most certainly know of my position on this matter. Those who may support the fight for Bush rule in our police services, can mostly only do so, risking in dishonorable blind personal fear of the great unknown I figure. And, crazy as this may sound, I believe there is a spooky cool God, for I'm walking a groove most all of the time.

The affidavit that starts "1. National Security Issues" was submitted in conjunction with my motion to request assistance from the Court. The additional paper "Stand Together or Don't", was an added part of the same affidavit.

The affidavit with 38 positions was submitted with the two motions, "Order of Production" and "for the Crown to Stay Proceedings". Duplicate copies of the same affidavit were submitted in each respect.

/ / In another characteristic incident, Bush asserted, as he has repeatedly, that any decision on withdrawal of American troops from Iraq "will be made by military commanders, not by politicians in Washington DC." \ \

Exactly. The demon enemy of life itself, Our Mr. bush Jnr., who publicly parades his contempt for freedom and God, must

AFFIDAVIT

AFFIDAVIT OF JOHNNY WIZARD

I, Johnny Wizard, in the city of Winnipeg, Province of Manitoba MAKE OATH AND SAY:

1.

Pakistani ISI Director General Ahmad orders an aide to wire transfer about $100,000 to hijacker Atta. Ahmad later resigns after the transfer is disclosed in India and confirmed by the FBI. [Dawn, 10/8/01, Times of India, 10/9/01, Wall Street Journal, 10/10/01, AFP, 10/10/01] The individual who makes the wire transfer at Ahmad's direction is Saeed Sheikh, later convinced for kidnapping and murdering reporter Daniel Pearl in February 2002. ABC News later reports, "federal authorities have told ABC News they've now tracked more than $100,000 from banks in Pakistan to two banks in Florida to accounts held by suspected hijack ringleader Mohamed Atta." [ABC News, 9/30/01] CNN also reports the $100,000 transfer, and the New York Times specifies that it came in 2000. [CNN, 10/1/01, CNN, 10/6/01, New York Times, 7/10/02] Ahmad's order must have preceded June 2000, since that's when Atta and others started opening bank accounts and receiving the money ($109,910 is received by Atta and Marwan Alshehhi between June 19 and September 18). [MSNBC, 12/11/01]

2.

On March 3, 2002, MSNBC's Jim Miklaszewski reported that he had received anonymously, top secret presidential war strategy documents dated September 9th, 2001, originating from Condolezza's office, outlining a strategy to invade

Afghanistan premised on blaming bin Laden a terrorist, but providing no evidence to back up the allegations, thereby guaranteeing criminal invasion. Only workable if Laden pleads innocence to a crime that hadn't yet taken place, a crime serious enough to "justify" sacrificing American GIs truly for a liquefied natural gas pipe line for pension thieving Enron. ["The Dahbol Working Group" and Bridas] Any evidence for any offense would have been sufficient to have Muslim fundamentalists hand Laden immediately over, as they had offered [as others of other nations had also] repeatedly during the Clinton years.

CBC and CNN have still, to this day, consciously refused to do any follow up on the intelligence, deciding instead on behalf of dying people everywhere, our public devolvement of a just society.

RTÉ News - US rejects Taliban bin Laden evidence calls
21 September 2001 17:41

The White House has rejected requests from Afghanistan's ruling Taliban for proof that Osama bin Laden was responsible for last week's attacks. According to the US Secretary of State, Colin Powell, the United States has enough evidence to try bin Laden in an American court.

The US Government said there would be no negotiations.

October 9 2001 - The Times of India

"While the Pakistani Inter Services Public Relations claimed that former ISI [the "Pakistani CIA"] director-general Lt-Gen Mahmud Ahmad sought retirement after being superseded on Monday, the truth is more shocking. Top sources confirmed here on Tuesday that the general lost his job because of the "evidence" India produced to show his links to one of the suicide bombers that wrecked the World Trade Center. The U.S. authorities sought his removal after confirming the fact that $100,000 were wired to WTC hijacker Mohammed Atta from Pakistan by Ahmad Umar Sheikh [Omar Saeed] at the instance of General Mahmud [Ahmad]. Senior government sources have confirmed that India contributed significantly to establishing the link between the money transfer and the role played by the dismissed ISI chief. While they did not provide details, they said that Indian inputs, including [Omar Saeed's] mobile phone number, helped the FBI in tracing and establishing the link."

No evidence was brought against Laden for nine eleven, none. [So according to Bush's official top secret Presidential directives] While Laden himself claimed he played no part in 911. Still, to save the lives of third worlders on the brink of starvation, Laden agreed to hand himself over, but Bush refused the offer, while CBC and CNN denied to report on that fact for the behalf of now dying dismembered American GIs. Once the indiscriminate bombing began, targeting almost every building in the country of Afghanistan, Laden then claimed he had no choice but to fight back to defend US innocent from the ungodly enemies of Creation/Freedom. Then the clear to all fake video came out with an actor who's face wasn't even close to looking remotely like Laden, but for almost the facial hair. [Bridge of the Jamaican actor's nose is HALF as long in proportion to Laden's for example, and surely frightfully shocking for some, the actor doesn't even take blame for 911 either!] Photos comparing the two faces never aired on CBC and CNN available in about twelve seconds with the power of the Internet.

The Washington Post, 23 September 2001.

At American urging, Ahmed traveled ... to Kandahar, Afghanistan. There he delivered the bluntest of demands. Turn over bin Laden without conditions, he told Taliban leader Mohammad Omar, or face certain war with the United States and its allies.

Mahmoud's meetings on two separate missions with the Taliban were reported as a "failure." Yet this "failure" to extradite Osama without providing a shred of eidence was part of Washington's documented design, providing a pretext for a military intervention which was already in the pipeline. If Osama had been extradited, the main justification for waging a war "against international terrorism" would no longer hold. Nor would the ready to go Patriot Act. Incidentally, when

MSNBC contacted the Whitehouse regarding the top secret invasion of Afghanistan plan, it was confessed that the plan had been "fully implemented"

It's the simplest idea. All you gotta do, is get a couple large buoys, that let's say take maybe a twenty foot square space, maybe a foot or two thick, and they contain air, made of some strong plastics. You just take that, anchor it stationary to the ocean floor, and have it situated on a gear system where, even though the buoy moves up and down slightly, there is such a tremendous amount of force on it, through the rising of the tides, that through gear ratios, you could easily get some turbines going for a thousand bucks or something. Not a big investment to give you free energy endlessly.

Johnny's Flying Jalopy

Corporate America's contempt for Justice is STILL killing American teens un-necessarily. All religions are in agreement - God is just - and if there is to ever be a heaven granting freedom to all, it's a world that treats all people equitably, like Mohamed, Hillel, and Jesus with Confucius, Buddha, and so on preaches to real believers... While evil bushite liars tell our children we're blaming the innocent as God's will for their 'escaping' criminality. Murderous! Art Bell again, told his viewers he didn't support starting the war against the innocent in Iraq, but he did relentlessly. I survived through that well recorded international challenge. The demon forbade any discussions on the matter, but for a rare seldom talk with someone who wanted to nuke somwheres else. The demon would screen his calls, privately during commercials, and anyone who wanted to bring up an American soldier's interest in why we were all pro-war with those who directly carried out 911 AS DOCUMENTED, he'd just hang up on before broadcast. Despite MILLIONS marching. So AMERICANS wouldn't know: George W. Bush actually is the 911 master mind of this journey into hell by his criminal ineptness to plan an effective exit strategy for him, and his dishonorable ungodly servants, like the bushite terrorists Cheney, Rumsfeld, task group 626. Sattler, Blount, Mattis, Russell, Allawi, Aegis, and now,.. PUBLIC admissions of the bush administration taxing "Americans" for death squads against the INNOCENT by their "democratic" constituency. Gifts from America to you freedom lovers! See the bushite, you kill it for America, you kill it for children, you kill it for the love of GOD left forsaken by corporate 'for profit' zionist news directors, who TRULY hold YOUR life in contempt. Hate me? okay, f--k you too then, HATE GOD as 'defenseless' by supporting these continuing indiscriminate al-cia-duh bombing attacks against our Humanity, and I'll personally hunt the offensive liar bushite down religiously for judicial prosecutions as OUR enemy. Join me in ridding Humanity of the enemies to American freedom, the bushite terrorists.

Bush signed the top secret war strategy, to ignore all relevant evidence for a crime that hadn't just yet taken place, on September 9th, 2001. [Jim at MSNBC] A top secret criminal plan to close inquiries carried out after the catalyst terror event of 911. The General who provided the no evidence argument to the Taliban at Bush's request, was found also responsible by the FBI for funding the same terrorist offence in question. A terrorist crime that the bushmob has taken a huge killing in GOD with. wAllah, George W. Bush is the for real antichrist. No escaping it my friends, no escaping it. Fight for Freedom, or die a loser to bush's genius. Support me, or fail to recognize true wisdom when it speaks to you of need for desperate change to save your dying selves.

Do YOU have any idea how truly evil Art Bell appears when he says, of course America was lied to through corporate news censorship in regards to the WMD questions, but that's because it was all for stealing Iraqi property to benefit no-national, bottom lining by jack bribing, - bush's - pro-military dictatorship oil companies after all is dead and gone, that's what death Your American Son is good for. And why isn't Art Bell mad about what he did to you?, at least near half the angry of how much, still locked in the trunk Daddy G is? No,.. in shock!, he's sounding as chipper as ever! That is what Art Bell actually said last Saturday night to God and Country.

So listen: Art Bell and George Norry won't allow Americans to set a HIGH PRIORITY in solving any American crisis, and instead, we'll get the regular, who cares about the dying poor, needless American teen sacrifices done for a better life it was not thought. Art Bell will likely never be able to stand up proud as a real American man, unless he allows US to form his good defense on fears of wisdom existing beyond his stupid man comprehensions along with likewise traitor Norry. Only way for that to happen, is if he, as the other radio celeb happy happy cultists, are forced by LAW, to have broadcasted on every private radio station of OUR Planet, a full hour of open lines calls to talk about whatever as the disgruntled, but loving, immediate community, perhaps sharing recipes. Then, if America is still then a wasteland of worthless words trumpeting a bushite's proud barbarity for ungodly zionism as death of the Jewish religion, continually committed to the further enslavement of the Human condition, by thieving, and torturing as proud boastful bushites do, WE'LL ALL know it, and consider demanding Justice then on OUR, not so out there old country radio stations, all so THEY can then, as offending war criminals, go it alone without ourselves. Like an old "All in the Family" episode I saw once, or thrice. Where Archie gets to makes a community member statement on his local TV station!!! Wow eh? How far we've come...

Jesus, hell no, I ain't going down that blind delusion of what infinite Justice means. Tell George Norry, Ahmad funded Atta. Despite the FACT that he will likely again, personally determine, DYING American SOLDIERS must be FORBIDDEN such knowledge as understood in context. Then, get him to invite US on as a very controversial guest. What a show that would be! Wouldn't it be a great novelty that would eventually wear off with something even more curiously interesting in a million to two years? Or, die tomorrow as a forsaken American Patriot soldier. It's all up to YOU. Do the right thing by supporting me, Creator of the Universe, with answers to EVERYTHING. Or, die with evil genius Bush, as your blind tyrant war bringer, against everything good in purgatory.

American!

American soldiers are being terribly mislead by the Bush administration to undermine freedom for Americans, by suggesting an effective war strategy is to ignore all the 911 evidence, and go off instead to blindly blame bad Afghans or badder Iraqis, is an insult to all honorable police services. I infer from that that DRM will fizzle out? I talked to the RNZI engineer sometime ago and Andrian said their main purpose for DRM was to send a high quality signal to places (read Islands) that cannot either afford of have sattelite and or internet (real expensive in the Tropics) services for rebroadcast e.g. by LPFM.
Really useful for us Island folk as their(RNZI) cyclone alert and hourly update service is better that great! The also have an excellent Pacific news service which is faster that our local newspapers and edited (censored)local TV.
For this these puposes I myself welcome this "technical inovation" for the aformentioned uses. However I can appreciate the other side of the coin in "built up" populations, the noise factor.

Most people will never be interested in international broadcasting as such, regardless of signal "quality". To argue otherwise is akin to arguing that men will begin finding Rosie O'Donnell attractive if we simply broadcast higher and higher resolution images of her.

The resolution ain't the problem!

G'day RHF,

Whoops sorry RHF, I meant to put the time in, I was monitoring the station from 2300 UTC then signed off at 2400/0000 hence my confusion as none of the sources had a spanish station airing at that time ?

Anymore thoughts ?

Cheers

Good News Canada !
Canada's British Columbia - Holds fully a Quarter (1/4th) of All the World's remaining Tracts of Temperate Rain Forest.
http://www.rainforestweb.org/Rainforest_Regions/North_and_Central_America/Canada/
It is a mist-shrouded land of rugged fjords, storm-battered islands and magnificent valleys lined with cathedral forests of cedar, hemlock, spruces and firs.
Canadian National News !
Why even the good Canadian Folks at the CBC know that http://www.cbc.ca/canada/british-columbia/story/2006/02/07/bc_rainforest20060207.html
Premier Gordon Campbell has unveiled an agreement to preserve 1.8 million hectares of land along B.C.'s Central and North Coast, including one of the largest intact Temperate Rain Forests in the World.
Canadian International News !
Also Radio Canada International (RCI) is telling the World
"CANADIAN RAIN FOREST THREATENED AGAIN"

Looks interesting. It shows me that it is somewhat larger than a tin of Thanks for the 'Software Defined Receiver'. I suppose it's obvious to those in the know.

Being an analogue sort of person, I'm a bit of a dinosaur when it comes to these newfangled devices, but it certainly looks interesting.
Unfortunately, all things digital tend to generate radio frequency interference, and it takes a lot of design skill to make them usable.
Undoubtedly, the designers of the RDF-IQ will have taken this into account.

As this is the rec.radio.shortwave NG, it makes perfect sense to publicise this 500Hz to 30MHz receiver here. Free samples to all our readers?

one error in my earlier post...an-lp1 did not require being placed in the "on' position. "off" is a standby mode and antenna is activated when radio is turned on while hooked up to antenna.

for more on the sw7600g (and in every likelihood applicable to the gr version) external antenna jack, see the following (while i can't attest to the accuracy of the info, indications suggest that this individual did his homework):

from: http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/dfd16b3dca3750b3?dmode=source

1.- The ext. antenna socket is "hot", i.e. powered through a 470 ohm resistence + 100 uH coil. This means that it will deliver approx. 10
mA
DC current to the external antenna circuit. The coil is to prevent "polluting" the power circuit of the radio with radio frequency signal.
Evidently, the purpose of this arrangement is to "inform" the accessory
antenna when the radio is turned on. In case of the Sony AN-LP1 it turns on the antenna without need to use the antenna power switch.
However, the 7600G will NOT power the antenna, the 10 mA are not enough to power the amplifier circuit. The power for the AN-LP1 comes from its own batteries. You can use this feature with any active antenna by including a proper power-up circuit - a nice feature if your active antenna is located far away from the radio and you want it to turn on and off automatically when you use your radio.

2.- You can connect any other antenna (provided it is correctly designed
and installed) to the EXT ANT socket without risking to damage the radio. However, if the external antenna circuit has low DC resistence,
it will drain some current from the radio. Therefore, you will experiment slightly higher power consumption from your batteries (up to 10% at normal listening volume). You can avoid this current drain by including a small ceramic capacitor (1000 pF) in series with the antenna circuit, however I don't think it is really necessary.

3.- The 7600G has some basic protection build into the EXT ANT input circuit. Any static buid-up will be drained off via the power circuit mentioned in point 1. It also includes a diode pair (1SS123) to protect the input RF amplifier FET from damage due to too strong signals or an accidental connection of the antenna to a low voltage AC source. IT IS NOT A SUBSTITUTE FOR A PROPER ANTENNA GROUNDING AND LIGHTNING PROTECTION
IF YOU USE AN EXTERNAL ANTENNA - YOU STILL NEED TO PROPERLY GROUND YOUR
EXTERNAL ANTENNA AND PROTECT YOUR RADIO, but it builds some margin of safety to protect the front-end FET - a common problem with the Sony 2001D (2010).

Heckfire, I should post messages while at work... A mistake here...
The manual for the SW7600GR does have one of these disclaimers, now doesn't it? Worded as such: "Do not connect external antennas other than those recommended to the AM EXT ANT jack. This jack outputs DC voltage for antenna power supply."

Interestingly, the '7600G manual, dated 1994, has no such warning, and in fact has instructions for the use of the '7600G with the old AN-1 amplified antenna, among others.

In any case, both radios behave in entirely the same manner when in use with the AN-LP1.

To Adam, Mr. Alessandrini and Mike:

Perhaps you might find the following interesting:

>From http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/dfd16b3dca3750b3?dmode=source

1.- The ext. antenna socket is "hot", i.e. powered through a 470 ohm resistence + 100 uH coil. This means that it will deliver approx. 10
mA
DC current to the external antenna circuit. The coil is to prevent "polluting" the power circuit of the radio with radio frequency
signal.
Evidently, the purpose of this arrangement is to "inform" the
accessory
antenna when the radio is turned on. In case of the Sony AN-LP1 it turns on the antenna without need to use the antenna power switch.
However, the 7600G will NOT power the antenna, the 10 mA are not enough to power the amplifier circuit. The power for the AN-LP1 comes from its own batteries. You can use this feature with any active antenna by including a proper power-up circuit - a nice feature if your active antenna is located far away from the radio and you want it to turn on and off automatically when you use your radio.

2.- You can connect any other antenna (provided it is correctly
designed
and installed) to the EXT ANT socket without risking to damage the radio. However, if the external antenna circuit has low DC
resistence,
it will drain some current from the radio. Therefore, you will experiment slightly higher power consumption from your batteries (up
to 10% at normal listening volume). You can avoid this current drain by including a small ceramic capacitor (1000 pF) in series with the antenna
circuit, however I don't think it is really necessary.

3.- The 7600G has some basic protection build into the EXT ANT input circuit. Any static buid-up will be drained off via the power circuit mentioned in point 1. It also includes a diode pair (1SS123) to protect the input RF amplifier FET from damage due to too strong signals or an accidental connection of the antenna to a low voltage AC source. IT IS NOT A SUBSTITUTE FOR A PROPER ANTENNA GROUNDING AND LIGHTNING PROTECTION
IF YOU USE AN EXTERNAL ANTENNA - YOU STILL NEED TO PROPERLY GROUND YOUR

EXTERNAL ANTENNA AND PROTECT YOUR RADIO, but it builds some margin of safety to protect the front-end FET - a common problem with the Sony 2001D (2010).

About time!

At the recent West Point graduation ceremony, Shotgun Cheney promised the graduates that the Army will have all the manpower, equipment and support it needs.

So, does that mean that our guys don't have to scour the Baghdad junk yards for sheet steel to weld on to make their own Humvee armor and have their parents mail them good body armor and other equipment Cheapskate Cheney wouldn't issue to them?

Hello,

I have decided to clean out some items sitting around that I don't use anymore.

I have a like new and working perfect Radio Shack PRO-2042 1000 Channel Scanner that tops my list.

I bought it new and have hardly used it. Still have manual too.

Seems like I paid about $500.00 dollars for it when it was purchased.

My question is what is it worth now?

Thanks, Mike SW FL

Well the humble little TenTec RX320D on my desk doesn't seem to

Is it interfering with itself or other devices.

If it is interfering with itself it is perhaps not surprising.
It is an interesting looking gadget but it is not a radio.
It has no front end. It is open to the whole 500 Hz to 30 MHz all the time. If you have a strong AM broadcast station near by or a ham or CBer in the neighborhood their signal will override everything else. The SDR-IQ would make a good IF/back end. Better results would be obtained by connecting the SDR-IQ to the IF of another receiver. Or by putting an RF preselector in front of it.

The TenTec RX-320D is about the same price but has a real radio front end. Unfortunately the TenTec has an RS232 rather than USB interface and the TenTec only has a 12 kHz bandwidth.

Oh. It's so strong here in the Western US that I thought for a second it was Deutsche Welle's pointless 24hr all German service to North America, back from the dead. Then I thought it was the BBC, since they're on then, but apparently these Germans are wiping out everything on that freq. I would guess that "Deutschlandfunk" would be a private station not connected to DW or the German government?

Yeah, it was Grunow who made the clock face dial, they called it a "teledial" or something similar. I've only seen those in ads, not even in the days when antique stores were loaded with quality old radios did you ever see Grunows. I don't think Grunow sold very many of those things, they were just too weird for 1940 America.

I dont know, what you hear on 6190 kHz.

Anyway, "Deutschlandfunk" is on program of the public broadcaster "Deutschlandradio".

According to
http://www.dradio.de/dlf/frequenzen/liste/#kw 6190 kHz is at present used with 17 kW

You can compare the signal with the Livestreaming

http://www.dradio.de/streaming/

There is an english Wikipedia articel:

Some years back, 6190 was used by Radio Bremen and Sender Freies Berlin.

I have read of some folks opting for this solution. Are there inline capacitors available with mini-jacks (male on one end, female on the

Greetings;

C. Crane sells a nice dynamo LED lantern for $50. I bought the earlier battery model and it worked nicely during the outages I've experienced. The dynamo one is even better since it can be charged by hand and the top part folds down for easier storage.

I did notice one problem with DX. When my LED lantern was set on a lower setting to conserve the batteries, it interfered with AM and low shortwave frequencies. Apart from that, it makes a nice emergency light.

Sincerely,

Greetings;

I noticed that Edmonton has a few traffic lights with LED arrays. I like the WALK light since it's so much brighter and easier for me to see. It would be most interesting to find out how the lights deal with Alberta's harsh winters.

By the way, the chips in those multi-colour LED lights cause considerable AM RFI. Straight LED arrays don't as far as I've noticed. I have 4 floodlights and 3 reading lamp bulbs which don't bother the radios at all. The only LED bulb causing interference is that multi-colour one. I guess the traffic bulbs have some sort of switching or power supply which causes the interference.

Sincerely,

Unfortunately my radio history wasn't as wonderful as some I've heard on this NG. After wearing down the battery on my dad's car radio, I was given a 6 transistor AM portable when I was 10 years old. Unfortunately I went to a boarding school for blind children and one of the boys ripped out the ferrite rod antenna. I borrowed my mom's 12 transistor radio for a while until my dad bought me a Lloyds AM/FM radio. Having become addicted to shortwave from listening to the Pye radios at school and my mom's Westinghouse floor model, my mom gave me a Sony AM/FM/SW radio. I loved the image-free reception it had. I bought my own shortwave radio second hand from a friend. It's the RCA CR-91A military surplus radio. I still have it and it still works fine except around 19 MHz. By the way, I have my mom's Westinghouse radio and it works quite well.

Buy a stereo headphone plug that fits, and connect the antenna wire to the tip, only.

I take that back. The SDR-14 is known to have that problem. The SDR-IQ block diagram shows some front end filters.

This does not sound right to me. A power detect circuit would only need micro-amps not 10 ma. 10 ma is respectable power for a simple amplifier.

To me, the most striking thing about this little box is that it's actually USB powered. So, it wouldn't require an independent power supply or wall wart. That means you could run it off a battery powered laptop after you lost power in a storm or something. I guess that's kind of neat, but if it generates so much RFI that a new Yahoo group has appeared just to discuss that fact, I wouldn't let this thing anywhere near my house.

OK So . . .
The 470 Ohm Resister plus 100 uH Coil would be a Series Circuit {In-Series} to anything pluged into the External Antenna Jack of the Sony ICF-SW7600GR.

So and Antenna Wire and Ground Wire connected to the Jack would NOT Short-Out the Radio's Power [.]

However - A "Jumper" Wire {Direct Short} across the Jack would 'cause' the Radio to go Silent {Eliminating any RF Signals} and 'appear' to be Shorted-Out {No Sound} until the Jumper Wire was removed.

WRT - Sony 7600GR External Antenna Jack,
Needs to be settled,

QUESTION : Can it be shorted out to the point that it destroys the radio.

ANSWER : No !

According to the schematic for the antenna, only 6.4 mA is drawn from the batteries ( 3 volts) when turned on.

The sense circuit to turn on the antenna from a radio has a 100 kohm resistor in it. This would draw 30-60 uA from the radio.

Also, the antenna schematic indicates that it is not possible to power the antenna from the radio connection. (Although there could be different versions of the antenna....)

FWIW the antenna's LED is powered with less than 1 mA.

The Sony radio schematics I looked at all have enough series resistance so that shorting the antenna connection will not damage the radio. There is no issue to settle.

Many prefer mailing lists as opposed to online forums. I have seen "groups" mentioned here several times but nothing about a mailing list. If you'd like to try a mailing list, you can do so at the following link.
http://dialtrax.com/mailman/listinfo/shortwave_128034
It works like this: You send an email message to the specified address. That message is then distributed to all list members. When you reply, the same thing happens. There is no SPAM problem because only members can post messages. Enjoy!

2140. Handheld Shortwave Portable, no SSB needed, which is the best?

I want to get a small shortwave radio, that I can use like a walkman. I was looking at the Grundig Mini 300PE for the price at my local radio shack, which is only $30. I notice it had no SSB but I really don't need SSB, at least not for a walkman type, but if there is SSB for a portable, I guess I will take it. Should I go with this portable or no?

I want a nice cheaper radio, under $50, that I can listen to FM, AM, and SW. I like Radio Habana Cuba, and want to listen to other stations also. I want a digital readout of what frequency I am on, not 100% analog, because then I can't see clearly what frequency I am on.

Should I go with this radio, or would there be a better choice that covers more frequencies, as it looks like the Grundig covers 7 bands.

Mike,

About two or three weeks after our last discussion on this subject ended, I had occasion to go down into my crawlspace to get some things for my wife. While I was down there, remembering our discussion, I brought out one of my Sony ICF-SW7600Gs. It was Serial No. 208903 and I bought it in March of 1998.

I installed four fresh Ray-O-Vac AA batteries (labeled DEC 2013) and REMOVED the batteries from one of my AN-LP1 antennas.

What I expected to happen did in fact happen. THE ANTENNA FUNCTIONED IN PASSIVE MODE. THE RED LED DID NOT GO ON. THE SELECTOR KNOB HAD NO EFFECT.

I have to tell you and all others here that I felt like a complete fool for even trying this because I knew already that the radio does not send sufficient power through its antenna jack to "power" the AN-LP1 and is, in fact, not meant to do so. This whole thing started in the pages of PASSPORT which reported (and still says) this in terms that would suggest that the radio actually does "power" the antenna. It does not. Their report is worded inaccurately (one of the rare times they have done this).

As the original discussion had apparently ended, I decided to "let sleeping dogs lie."

But here we are again. So here are my last comments on this subject.

I have now tried this "experiment" with my FIVE ICF-SW7600GRs and ONE of my ICF-SW7600Gs. I do own one more ICF-SW7600G but I'm just not going to waste my time.

The radio does NOT power the antenna, the selector knob does not function, and the red LED does NOT go on (which would indicate that the antenna is in active mode) UNLESS the antenna has good batteries in it. Period.

Frankly, Mike, I believe you are not telling the truth. Unless you have some "miracle" ICF-SW7600G that functions differently than every other ICF-SW7600G or 'GR in existence (doubtful), you are not reporting accurately what is happening. Perhaps you don't actually own one of these radios or even an AN-LP1, or you have some other agenda. Whatever, your comments are dead wrong and, while I definitely am not omniscient nor a "great guru," at least in this instance, I am correct. The ICF-SW7600G/GR does NOT "power" the AN-LP1. It just turns it "on" or "off" (if the antenna has good batteries installed).

Like a fool, I have now tried it myself six (6) times! and with two different AN-LP1s. What a jackass I am to have even CONSIDERED wasting my time this way! I invite any others here who wish to be as foolish as I have been to try this "experiment" also.

As for differences in sound in sync mode when switching from USB to LSB, if you had read my posts carefully and accurately, you would have seen that I wrote that there are certainly very slight differences in the sound, and this is on ALL of my '7600s, but this does NOT include excessive treble or bass, the complaint being discussed in the particular posts. If the sync circuit were out of alignment, I have read that sound will be more "muffled" on one sideband than the other but I cannot comment on this AS I HAVE NEVER HEARD IT! A difference in the signal's sound - yes; "muffled" sound or attenuated or exaggerated treble or bass, no. Not on ANY of my '7600 models. None. I'm sorry if others have some problem along these lines, but I personally do not.

On EVERY radio with a sync circuit one can hear a slight difference between upper and lower sideband (either in ECSS mode or sync mode).. I also own a Grundig Satellit 800 and an AOR AR7030 Plus. These both exhibit that same characteristic. This is because the sidebands ALWAYS have slightly different in sound quality to some extent. They are not quite perfect mirror images of each other.

All I can say to you, Mike, is that for less than $10.00 and less than a half-hour of your time, you could have built a passive loop that wouldl FAR outperform the AN-LP1 when it is used in passive mode without batteries. You could have saved at least $70.00. But you go right ahead and use your AN-LP1 without batteries. You will get far less performance than the antenna is capable of achieving, you will have saved 50 cents, the price of two AA batteries, and you will be a happy man.

This discussion, and your comments, are rapidly approaching sheer stupidity and I shall have no more of it.

Joe

Thanks, folks, for taking the time to delve into this a bit more deeply. One question, though, even if the radio itself is in no risk of any damage, could there possibly be any risk of damage to a non-Sony amplified antenna that might be hooked up to this jack? i.e. could this low-level current flowing out to the coax cable damage the amplification unit of an active antenna?

Dear Junius,

You are quite correct about the warning in the '7600GR's manual. I do not have at hand my '7600G's manual but I know you are correct there too, especially considering the fact that the AN-LP1 had not yet been introduced when the '7600G's manual was written (and to my knowledge it was never revised)

The warning is plain silly however. It is almost akin to what we read back in the old days "for best results use Columbia needles" or "for best results use RCA tubes" but the warning in the manual is much more explicit, wrongheaded though it is.

It has been my personal (though limited) experience that ANY reasonable antenna, to which one can attach a 3.5mm plug, can, in fact, be used with excellent results with the ICF-SW7600G/GR. In my opinion, the best overall match is the AN-LP1 but others have much more experience than I do with using other antennas with these radios.

By the way, my name is actually spelled "Analssandrini" not "Alessandrini." I will say that this spelling error is quite common. You ought to see some of my junk mail. There are even more "creative" misspellings of my name!

Best,

Joe

Dear Junius,

I have used two non-Sony active antennas with in conjunction with my Sony ICF-SW7600GRs. One is my Wellbrook ALA 330S.. Believe me, if I thought that there might be even the slightest problem, I should have never tried it. After all, the antenna costs over $300.00! But, of course, there is no problem whatsoever in using this (or probably any) active amplified antenna with the Sony, other than the problem of needing three Radio Shack adapters to hook the Wellbrook, with its PL-259 plug to the Sony with its 3.5mm socket!

The other non-Sony amplified antenna I have tried is my AOR WL500 Window Loop antenna. This also works extremely well, in fact, even better than the AN-LP1. There are certain difficulties with this antenna which preclude me from using it on an ongoing basis, but its performance is absolutely first-rate. There one needs two Radio Shack adapters to go from a BNC connector to the 3.5mm jack.

This was an interesting question. Has anyone else used any other non-Sony amplified antennas with the '7600G/GRs? I would be very interested in hearing the experiences of owners of the AOR LA-380.

Best,

Joe

Is that radio discontinued or something? I can't hardly find it

That would depend upon the antenna. However, the most power that would be delivered to the antenna would be maybe 40 mW.

30-60 uA for a "sense circuit" makes more sense than 10 mA.

I have only used a roll-up single wire external antenna with the radio connected to the tip of the antenna jack. If I decide to connect a closed loop antenna like a folded dipole I'll use a series capacitor so not to waste battery power.

The purpose in life for this unit appears to be as a spectrum analyzer not a radio receiver.

I'm sure if you put it in a good metal box with ferrite chokes on the cables it would tame the RFI.

Others to consider might be the Kaito KA105 / Degen DE105. Or the Kaito KA11 / Degen DE11. Both are totally digital. No analog tuning, and have memories.
I tnink they are quite a bit better then the Grundig Mini 300PE. The analog tuning on the Grundig is very, very touchy and does not lock in at all.
Check the reviews of these little radios at ...
http://www.radiointel.com/reviews.htm
I bought one of each from eBay dealers in the far east. Delivery was just a touch slow, but not too bad. Although of course they don't perform like my larger radios, I do like them for their portability.

Thanks to all who responded to my inquiry about timer recording radios....especially Duncan.....I didn't know about the Degen 1121....and I already like Degen products.....I have a Degen 1102 (see my product review on eham.net) which is my "go to" sw portable of choice....I like it so much that when I "lost" it awhile back I immediately ordered another (later found the 1st so I now have a spare.) I don't want the bother of separate recorders, timers, connecting wires/cables, etc. The computer software methods mentioned are interesting, but I want a small portable to accomplish recording at and away from home....seems the Degen 1121 will do exactly what I want....and I'm not really into music listening much but the built in mp3 player will be a plus. Thanks again to everyone who responded....all info is appreciated.

If the IBOC folks are correct, then lots of people would probably like to listen to power line noise if only they can hear it in digital quality. lol

If it does process DRM, there might be some way to disable this function. Or perhaps it's possible to control the radio using third

I might also recommend a Kaito 1102 / Degen 1102. Very sensitive, very small, digital, memories and SSB. The Passport reviews pretty much explain that they think this is the best of Chinese mini-portables. (Personally, I think the DE 1103 / Eton E5 / Grundig G5 is a better radio, but at a higher price)

The Mailman program is not vulnerable to such attacks as you describe. If there is an attachment, and you do not know the person who sent it, do not open it. Other than that, a Mailman list is safe.

You can configure a list to block attachments.

I'm skeptical about the OP. He never responded to any other posts. I checked out that yahoo group when he first posted and it had one member. Checking now, yahoo says the group doesn't exist.

It is still probably healthy to maintain a little skepticism about the SDR-IQ too. It reportedly has switchable lowpass and highpass filters at 5 MHz and 15 MHz. It seems they would cover most desensitization issues. The 5 MHz highpass filter should prevent desense due to nearby lower frequency broadcast band stations. But if you've got a ham in the neighborhood who keys up on either 40 or 20 meters it seems to me that could desense the SDR-IQ to everything from 5 MHz to 15 MHz.

It's interesting.
I'll be watching the reviews and this group.

Aren't some LEDs pulsed in order to get higher average intensity? This

I can hear IBOC crap on the analog signal. It's very low level, but you can clearly tell when a local station is using the hash generator.
Also, the bandwidth goes to shit. The analog signal when IBOC is running is just barely better than a phone line.

Yeah, see I like the features of those radios, but so far it looks like really only the Grundig 300 is the size I need. See I want to go for walks and take a shortwave radio with me. I have the Sony ICF-7600GR, that I use right now but it's not really a "walk radio" that I want to have. That's really what I am looking for. I will be looking through those radios you guys/gals recommended, then I will see what decision I can make.

Think the Kaito 1102 would be decent to go with for my walkman type or should I go with the G5? The G5 looks like it's the same size as my Sony ICF-7600GR, but maybe I am wrong. I want a powerful radio but not a powerful size.

Sounds very much like the front ends of most HF receivers. Both my Yaesu FRG-7700 and my Kenwood HF transceiver have this type of rough bandpass front end. I guess the days of tuned RF front ends have passed. I'm glad my Grundig 600 has a preselector.

The Kaito KA1102 is without doubt a good radio. Good enough for me that I bought two of them. I also own the Eton E5 which is the same as the Grundig G5, the only difference being the name on the radio. It too is a great radio. My oldest radios are a Panasonic RF 2200, and a Sony ICF 7600D, (ICF 2002). All good radios.

The reason I suggested the Kaito KA105, or even better the KA11, (or the Degen equivalents), is that I thought you wanted something small enough to slip into a pocket, about the size of the Grundig Mini 300PE that you mentioned, but a better radio.
I also thought that you wanted to spend $50.00 or less, and the KA105 would fit those parameters.

You stated, "I want a nice cheaper radio, under $50, that I can listen to FM, AM,
and SW."

The KA11 is the same size, but a bit more money, however it is still close to your $50.00.

You may have a difficult time finding a KA1102 for $50.00 or less, except on eBay (DE1102), for maybe $47.00, but then you will pay at least $18.00 for shipping from China.
I would be surprised to see an Eton E5, or Grundig G5 going for $50.00 or less. I bought mine new for $149.95.

A KA1102 in the U.S. will cost a minimum $59.95, from radios4you on eBay, and add on $10.95 for shipping and insurance. That might be the way you want to go for the KA1102.

Because of the G5/E5 size, I would thing that it is more then a Walkman type. The same would go for the KA1102 in my opinion.

When you start getting up to the size of the Kaito KA1102, and especially the Eton E5, or Grundig G5, you are beyond pocket size.

The 'live' antenna imput of this radio is useful for a very simple home-built active antenna.

Is there any smaller walkman like radio, that is a fairly good FM dxer? I have a station I love to listen to from Pittsburg/Beaver Falls. It's a station that's 102 miles away, but my Sony ICF-7600GR picks it up really well even if no other radio I own does, so I hope possibly I can pick it up on the new shortwave I pick.

Also, one of the majors reasons I was thinking about the Grundig Mini 300 was that, it's only $30 at my local radio shack, so I wouldn't have to wait for my money order to get to the company then wait another week for shipping, and my birthday is coming up soon, and since I can pick what my family will get me, I figured maybe they can just buy me the Grundig Mini 300. But I hope it would be worth in, one poster said it doesn't lock on at all. Does that mean that it's very hard to listen with because it will change stations on you or something?

I can never forget those very brave young men who saved us and our future generations from the jackboot of Hitler.
On 6th June every year I re-run my favourite DVD "Patton". What a swashbuckling general he was with his pearl handled revolvers!
I was a child at the time living in the country on the South coast of England and thousands of Canadian troops were bivouacked in the fields around our cottage. One night there was a lot of revving of engines and in the morning, they had all gone.
That day the sky was black with thousands of aircraft - bombers, fighters and hundreds of hundreds of C-47's with their gliders in tow. Sights and sounds that are indelibly embedded in my mind until the day I die.

Indeed, as dxAce exhorts us, let us not forget those brave men and the hard
won freedoms they fought for and brought us.

My son-in-law just bought me a box of very fine Romeo y Julieta Cuban cigars
and they are sublime.
My government loves Fidel, but sadly they put a horrendous excise tax
on
Cuban cigars, making them very expensive, but a fine smoke.

There are many SDRs available today; the Winradio G-series is possibly the best known. The Flexradio SDR-1000 (now replaced) and the RF Space SDR-14 and SDR-IQ have properties most other SDRs do not have; the ability to record a large (up to 190 kHz) portion of the spectrum to a PC hard drive. The recording can later be analyzed using different demodulators, bandwidth settings etc.

Ordinary front end filtering is difficult to match with a 190 kHz spectrum, hence one might need extra high-/lowpass filter or even notch filters to avoid very strong signals.

The SDR-IQ does emit RFI on higher shortwave, masking very weak but audible signals. I didn't know until I was informed about it but I only use higher SW for listening to strong international stations. There is no RFI on lower SW and MW. I don't know if this is also the case with the SDR-14 and the Flexradio systems. For me the RFI is a non-issue; for others it may be very important.

For me, the ability to record 19 MW channels into a file for later analysis far outweighs the RFI and front end issues with the SDR-IQ. Others may judge otherwise or have a more hostile RF environment.

Yep; It's only available on Ebay with Paypal.

Liypn is a very reliable dealer..

PLL Double reduction, 1,000 memories; It's the best of the bunch, IMHO .. .

But

this one, Kaito KA11, looks Very Similar . .

http://www.radiointel.com/review-kaitoka11.htm

. and is available from Universal Radio

http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable/0011.html

Neither of these are DX Boxes, but if you hook up an external antenna ; you can really pull in reasonably clear signals from all over the world..

& off the whip performance is quite remarkable

The cheaper ones are non-digital, no memories and won't compare side by side

another set of reviews on portable SWR;s.. 300 PE getds a poor rating;
tuning is drifty,
impulse shopping SWR at best;

(review from Eham below . .)

My Grundig Mini 300PE performs very well with the exception of the MW (standard AM) band. My set experiences poor image rejection. Ex. a station on several miles away (WTOP Wheaton MD) 1500Khz can clearly be heard at a tuning of 590Khz. That tells that this radio uses an IF freq. of 540Khz.

I was surprized initially at all the whistles and hetrodynes that occurred at night time at frequencies above 1000Khz. With some investigation, I've discovered that this radio is receiving short wave transmissions from the 5 to 7 Mhz band. At a tuning of 1082.5Khz, WWCR on 5.070Mhz is tremendously strong. By some simple arithmetic calculations, it appears that the third harmonic of the local oscillator (at the 1082.5Khz tuning) is at 4.62Mhz--below 5.070Mhz by the IF frequency of 450Khz. For the math to work exactly right, the exact receiver tuning would need to be 1.090Khz, so that the radio's frequency display may be a bit off by -7.5Khz. Similarly, I receive other shortwave stations where there is no conflicting AM broadcaster.
The FM/SW telescoping antenna seems to be active on MW; touching it attenuates reception. It's as though there is no front end tuning.

This is poorer AM performance than a '60s shirt pocket six transistor radio.

It's hard to believe that this performance is typical for this radio.
If I got a bad one, someone please say so.

Thanks))

If your receiver IF/Mixer isn't completely flat you'll hear the IBOC.
The digital sidebands are out of phase with each other and the system relies on them cancelling out in your receiver. You can't use a synch detector on an IBOC station, unless you can listen to both sides at once.

Mostly,the only stores I get to anymore are the food store, the discount tobacco store, gas station,the Animal Health Products store (dog food) and sometimes the Sears store and the book store at the mall.

I almost never check out the radios at the stores I go to which do sell radios because I know they are mostly junk and I haven't looked to see if there are any hd radios on the store shelves.I don't like hd radio.

So, what is it going to be like for most people when their AM radio listening gets all messed up and they can't buy cheap enough hd radios at the stores in their local areas? (Katrina all over again)

A few weeks ago at tvpredictions.com I read that there might not be enough hd converters for analog tv when that big hd tv switch over is suppose to happen on Feburary 17, 2009. (Katrina all over again)

The Kaito KA-1102 fits into most of my shirt pockets, with close to 1" sticking up from my pocket. It is the best performer, has the best features: wide/narrow, SSB, 10 k steps on FM, 1 k steps on AM/SW in fine tuning setting & has rugged construction. Also dual conversion on SW/AM for reduced images. But about $70+ new from radios4you.com

The 300PE overloads terribly on FM, no memories, no SSB, single conversion causes SW images, etc.

G5/E5 slightly larger than KA-1102, maybe won't squeeze into pocket.

The KA-11 has horribly wide selectivity AM/SW/FM. Cuba on 6180 puts strong clear audio on 6190 where China is broadcasting to North America via Canada. On FM 94.1, the KA-1102 gets a station 75 miles away, but on the KA-11 on 94.1 I hear locals from 93.7, 94.5, & 105.1!

The DE1105 is only available new from China for $75 & may have no warranty or may have to be sent back to China for repair.

DE105 single conversion causes images, no 17 MHz or 21 Mhz bands, no SSB, no small step tuning, FM overloads.

The Kaiti KA-1101 is like the KA-1102 size wise, just a few $ cheaper & no SSB or 1 k tuning steps.

The Eton E-100 would be the size you want. Retail is $99.95 but there are always people selling them on eBay at auction for $50 or less. Many of these are store returns & they'll offer a warranty usually. It's the best performer under $100 of the really tiny radios. It "hides" in your pocket completely. Performance overall not quite as good on AM & FM as larger KA-1102. FM requires a stronger signal for hiss-free stereo. No SSB, but does have 1 k tuning steps on AM/SW. Single conversion so images possible. Good SW sensitivity. George (MN)

So you have one. Interesting.

Every radio has its birdies. My TS-440 probably has about 20.
And I always have my CRT computer monitor on which puts out spurs spaced 63 kHz through half of the HF band.

I wonder how strong and wide the interference from the SDR-IQ is. Maybe it is normal. Maybe it will be reduced once they go through FCC certification and the boxed version is available.

> For me, the ability to record 19 MW channels into a file for later

Yeah, the SDR-IQ has a lot of good applications.

Checking the TS-440, it covers HF with 10 filters of varying width. One filter selects 0.5 to 1.5 MHz.
So when tuned to MW the whole band is coming through the front end filter at one time.
A serious MW DXer might consider a preselector even with an old style receiver.

I looked at the digital receivers a while back and pretty much decided that I would go with the RX-320D when I could afford to lose a week playing with a new toy.
But the SDR-IQ looks like it could go to the top of the list.

There are indeed rain forests in Canada. I should have meade my point of contention a little clearer. Would you like it if someone described you "crawling around" these forests in a quadripedal fashion? That would be a tad offensive, no?

Something tells me to get the Kaito KA-1102. It keeps coming up with good reviews. Does it do a fairly good job of AM/FM DXing? See I just want to get in some DXing. I am not looking for a $15,000 portable, but I don't want one that I might as well just throw in the trash. Do you think I should just go with this radio or would my money be better spent on something else like the E5 if I am going to spend $100?

I can't seem to tell by the pictures alone, does anyone know how the Kaito 1102 is in size compared to the ICF-7600GR? I defiantly don't want the 7600 size at all. That's why I don't walk down the street with my 7600, too big.

What kind of Kenwood do you have? I have the TS-440. Hadn't thought about it before but just read in the manual that it uses 10 filters to cover HF. That is certainly better than the SDR-IQ but it is conceivable that a preselector would be advantagous with the TS-440 is some situations.

There is a ham about a mile away that runs 25 W, PSK31, on 20 meters occasionally. When he keys up everything else on my 3 kHz wide waterfall display disappears. 20 meter falls in the range of the TS-440 10.5 to 14.5 MHz front end filter. I wonder if his signal is desensing my receiver to everything in that range. I'll have to check next time.

Nothing. His or her hypothetical problem does not affect the list and its members.

I've been running Mailman lists for years primarily for an organization. Not one person has been adversely effected by mail relayed through a mailing list. Besides, each of us should have defenses in the form of anti-virus software with real time protection for incoming messages.

The thing I'd be curious about is the software. I can't find anything very descriptive of the software on the website. I suppose I could download it, install it and play around with it, but I don't like to install software on my system unless I really need it. Perhaps someone who has used it can comment? I'd also like to know how many commercial, third party control softwares could be used with this receiver.

There's no problem downloading and installing Spectravue. Easy to uninstall. There is a "Winrad" software too but no AM demod on it yet. Don't think other programs can run the SDR-IQ or -14. DRM: Use 3rd party software like Dream. Spectravue has a learning curve and is not always intuitive.

I don't have the specs, but I have seen them side by side and the Kaito KA1102 is quite a bit smaller then the Sony ICF 7600GR.
The Kaito KA1102/Degen DE1102 is 143 X 88 X 28.50 mm
Yes, I really like my KA1102's.

Maybe someone on this list can give you the size of the 7600GR.

The Kaito KA11 that I have is actually quite a good performer for its' size. I have heard that this past year or so quality control at the factory has been a bit of a hit and miss affair. You must take into consideration the limits of it's size. You cannot expect a radio small enough to fit into you pocket to perform like a big Kenwood or Yaesu tabletop communications receiver, or even a large portable like the Grundig G5. Even the tiny Sonys like the SW100S, cost a lot of money for a few more bells, and whistles, and their speakers are still so small that they still don't sound very well compared to a larger cheaper radio with a bigger speaker and larger enclosure.
There are tradeoffs that you must make in return for smaller size and extra portability. And for extra bells and whistles like on the little Sony SW100S, you will pay a lot.
It's possible that the other owner of the KA11 got one that just isn't up to the quality of most of them. Sometimes a bad one slips through the system. Owning a number of radios over the years, and having worked in quality control at a large manufacturer, I know that these things can happen. I have heard of people that love their Sony ICF 7600GR radios. They are an excellent radio... but...

... there have also been some that had a problem of once kind or another with them and were not happy with the Sony.
All it takes is one bad experience to turn you off from a product.

Not that I am aware of but a DC to DC step up supply might be used to

In the sub $100.00 price range, the DE1102 can't be beat. It is much smaller than the Sony 7600GR. I think it is a bit to big to fit in your shirt pocket, but would be easy to carry in one hand for walking. I have never dropped mine, but I don't think it would survive. The DE105 will fit in you pocket, but it's not much of a radio (I own that one as well). A truly great shirt pocket radio is the Sony SW100, I have one, but expect to pay $300.00 on ebay if you can find one.

There is only one way a virus can make it through Mailman. Then you have to open an attachment. As I've said, attachments can be disallowed with a bit of configuring. Also your real time virus protection would kick in and save the day. What is a person doesn't have protection? Then they shouldn't be out here (Internet).

Rainforest in Canada and Alaska.

A number of years ago I travelled out west in my VW Beetle for a month and a half, with a buddy to look for work. The rainforest in British Columbia and up into the Alaska Panhandle is beautiful, and lush with thick green growth and huge trees, and much wildlife. A great natural wilderness. Heaven on Earth. All the lush green growth and huge trees just makes everything look so much alive. Like no where else I've ever seen in Canada.
When I was in Prince Rupert B.C. on the coast near the Alaska border, I bet I only saw the sun for about a half hour in the two weeks I was there. Quite often it rained, but not a real heavy rain, more like a misty drizzle. Clouds often hid much of the mountains. and the humidity was always high. Lots of thick rainforest wilderness all around for hundreds of miles up and down the coast and surrounding islands. It was very beautiful, clean, and lots of fresh air. Not like the city I live in near Niagara Falls.

There are actually a few different types of rainforest in the world. But they can be grouped into two major types. Tropical Rainforest, and Temperate Rainforest. Tropical Rainforest is the type that most people are familiar with. Temperate Rainforest is not so well known, because, I will guess, there is not as much of it. Much of the world's Temperate Rainforest is on the west coast of Canada, and extends up into the Alaska Panhandle. Temperate Rainforest might also be found on the coast of the State of Washington, and on the Olympic Peninsula of the State of Washington. I'm not sure, but I bet someone on this list can tell us for sure. Temperate Rainforests, like Tropical Rainforests, receive abundant, year-round rainfall, and are characterized by an enclosed canopy and high species diversity, but lack the year-round warmth and sunlight associated with Tropical Rainforests. The huge amounts of rainfall for the Temperate Rainforest out west is caused by the almost constant flow of moist air coming in off the Pacific Ocean, and then dumping all the moisture as rain or misty drizzle when the air mass start to rise in the coastal mountains.

At least that's my guess. Whatever the case, I love that type of forest.

Wikipedia has a good article on Temperate Rainforest, and yes, the Northwest States of Washington, Oregon, and northern California, also have Temperate Rainforest. It stretches all the way from northern California all the way north through Oregon, Washington, British Columbia to Kodiak Island in Alaska.

There arer other areas in the world that have Temperate Rainforest too. But in some places that used to have a lot, it is almost all gone.

Drake MS-7 speaker just went for $192! It took me 2 E-Mails but finally got an admission that the speaker has the Drake sticky paint on it.
Someone is going to be disappointed.

A letter of calling for rescue from serious persecution in Mainland China.
To whom to be concerned.

Dear sir:

How are you?

I am an ordinary but very special Chinese citizen, the destiny of life coming in front of me is very dangerous and hard, which is far more than an ordinary people experiencing, neither to be understood normally and easily.

I understand USA and the western world are liberal world with solid and complete humane legislative system to support the countries and their people. For myself, I am gifted a high education with my outstanding hard efforts from a remote and poor county, my records in my primary, secondary, middle and high school are all excellent. From 1997 to 2001, I studied in and graduated from the central south university located in Changsha, Hunan province. My comprehensive quality is fairly good, I am accredited with certificate of undergraduate and bachelor degree along with a CET 6 of English test proving my success of hard learning on English. But after my graduation, I experienced a almost horrible life, which being tied with China national leader, political system and my blood background.

I come to know I am the only sons of Hujintao the chairman of China central government with his wife about in 2005 to now. I was abandoned by his wife and him to a peasant family in the west part of Hunan province and they adopted the son of my foster family as a political costs and sacrifice and capital to the Chinese communism campaign. But the problem is they are trying to persecute any contents of my private life and work to manufacture me into poverty, desperation and death with The Chinese social powers backed by governmental ruling powers.

I can't describe to you how hard and painful I suffered when I grew up with details, which could tell too much clews to discover the man-made trap, special biological treatment to me and my family member as well as slaughter and murder to my and my family menber's physical and spiritual health after almost all truth of people and things come out to my consciousness.
As to me, I completely rely on myself hard study and my own foster family's poor economic and emotional and spiritual support to achieve the university education, possessing education, diploma, quality and skills to make a living. But since my graduation in 2001, I have never passed the 3 months trial period in any companies having employed me, meanwhile I felt totally different experiences and treatments from other people who worked and lived around me. I am tricked and controlled and fired for any logical or illogical, reasonable or unreasonable excuses consequently and frequently, for which I feel deadly confused since I am well educated and possess good individual quality until I knew I have a special blood or birth background told by the continuous strange, special and odd experiences and my foster mother directly in 2005, but since then on, My life became double miserable and horrible. I have been drugged with heavy nerve drugs and sodomy raped at my own home, my aunt's home, the bedroom of companies I served while I sleeping, for which I could not evidence but feel the physical results including the terrible feeling or mood of head and blood and deep sharp and expanding pain from my anus, every time I suffered this kind of thing, I would become very easy to lose memory of things just happening minutes or hours ago completely without any trace of memory., head is too dumb and heavy to be felt and controlled by my sense. For now, since I have been raped from the December of 2005, I would feel the widening and looseness and wetness of anus and deep pain. But for this cases I have no evidence, I don't know how to protect my head, my anus, my work, even my life. Before I suffered these horrible stories, I never have speeches or actions in public to threaten to the nation and government or even privates. But my life, career have been totally harmed. I have been deprived of the rights of possessing health, safety, private affection of love and work, meanwhile for my sex appeal, I keep suffering frustration upon continuous man made trap of love and sex dramas with my unknown sisters from different mother and departure with several my truly loved girls of sisters for any solid reasons they help and lead me to routine as I knew nothing about my blood background at that time, therefore my heart tied and broken time and time again. Then for girls not sisters from different mothers, the shadowless mighty power behind will let me used to seeing they all give me cold shoulders easily no matter what and how I was to them. Then the sex desires and the sodomy rapes by the groups of brothers from different mothers try their mighty bloody best to force me to turn to a homosexual gay. Meantime, I could also felt my right chest old internal wound and the frustration of life make me feel unnatural shame and confuse of life. For all those collectively and directing programs, you with advanced social psychological and science analysis will conclude easily all these are bringing me into a gay with massive of political and governing forces, only these kind of forces could do these project in China, you all know what China governing body is. Extremely, I can't endure the endless sex abuse even in a very good friend's rent in July 2006, left him to find a job by foot along the road in Shenzhen for almost 10 hours showering heavy rains with heavy luggage', and finally I got a job as a waiter in a massage club, then the game started again, raping, women sex abuse upon me with nerve drug treatment to make you unconscious when I slept. Then I use language and gestures to demonstrate my opposing. Then my position shifted frequently from any positions to any positions in the club with rude manners and cunning traps and excuses, eventually I serve at the position of gate as a security guard. At this position, the security manager with his massive county fellows' support beat and wound my head, nose, face, ears severely, where bleeding all over my upper half body and he also wounded my spermary and penis and left leg kicked and knocked with several rounds for almost 10 minutes by an sudden attack even with the sight of the boss and several senior managers. I had pain of spermary, left leg, head and right ear from then on. After the attack, the boss and mangers forbade me to call policeman. I escaped and called the policeman, but they came and played game again with bride, lies and hiding crimes, I was left in bed with no care, no medical examination and treatment, finally I got not compensation but had to leave there for finding a new job with wound recovering themselves slowly.

If what I suffered is isolated event, I will not quote the shame to you. But for now, the control, threaten and hurt to anything of mine setting my normal happiness and success happens at any possible circumstances. I have called for help and protection from any of Chinese public security and legislative organization, but in vain in return of more persecutions. I am even not a political sensitive or criminal people, I and the value or happiness I chase and preserve are as ordinary as every Chinese and the people in the rest of the world do. So what the hell I should be born into this world and continue to live if there is no more forces of justice and rightness that could support, protect and save me as they do to every ordinary people with their excellent and civilized system of country, government and legislation of, by and for all their people?

Please save me as I am innocent people longing for a normal life of human.

I do believe USA or any civilized countries could save my life, since I am innocent and ordinary as most of the people on this planet, I don't deserve the monitoring, persecution and abuse of changes of anything normally belonging to me at any possible circumstances. I have lost several family members and lots of normal possible happiness of career achievement and health and affection of love and my total life, etc. All these are devastated seriously with the shadow less mighty forces only being able to existing in some dictating countries such as Previous Iraq.
In 2006 I was employed by a Taiwanese invested company named Chenghouse Enterprise Co.,Ltd. From Aug 28,2006, the same symptom of head and feel of anus appears again for almost two days. In fact I have to say that these china men who doing these dirt and crimes all communicate with or imply me they doing this with partial tone or gestures, by which they play me to increase my spiritual pain and shame of being insulted. I have no diseases of hemorrhoids, I am not a gay, I never had any of this anus fucking behaviors when I am awake. For now, May 2007, I still live in the endless dramas of traps from this country's ruling powers, I wrote lots of letters to claim persistence and the harm to my private legal and moral rights, but as I finally reach to know, my grandfather is the Japanese prime minister in World war 2,Hideki Tojo, Hujintao is his bastard son with Chinese noble blood, my foster mother is the bastard daughter of Maozedong, My foster father is the bastard son of Liushaoqi, I am the destined victim and sacrifice of the conflicts of classes, families, races, political groups and countries of China and Japan, I am the born one to wash, cover, compensate and honor all the sins, shames, crimes.

I am dying in slow and inevitable murder executed with each details of my private life by Chinese society sponsored and supported by Chinese ruling powers.
This is a absolute political traps executed by Chinese and Japanese ruling powers, for the other bastard from generations of Chinese leaders and Sino-Japanese cross blood in WWII, I am the manufactured standards and example to discipline and control them not to be scandals exposed to contaminate all the political and various social celebrities. My father Hujintao and my mother Liuyongqing cooperating and leading with Chinese ruling powers abuse, persecute, harm and murder my life in secrete with the Japanese economical powers in China cooperated ignorance and pretended unknowing my background of the ID of Sino-Japanese blood to lead me into the burst of life risks in the most reformed and heavily foreign invested region, Guangdong province and the discovering and exposing all the scandals of sex abuses of bastards and lead and forge me into the disorder and mistakes of my various life contents including sexes specifically and concentratively, during the courses I have been persecuted to reach to know but not exactly about all the family, social and political truth about China, Japan and me. With ruining me by Chinese ruling powers and Japanese economical and political powers in China in secret, I become the sacrifice to let Chinese public reaching to know my background and misery with opportunities for me to release my misery story and ask for rescue on internet, to lighten,ease,and even calm down and clear all the historical debts and hatred between Chinese and Japan, catch and lead the blind Chinese hatred upon me to ignore, help, participate and support the cruel persecution upon my life to demonstrate what the Chinese people will do upon a Japanese blood and will be about human being nature specifically if history came back to clear the historical dirty reputations of war crimes and Chinese people's hatred as most as possible, , to clear all the present visional evidences of crimes of corruption committed by Chinese ruling powers including our mothers,fathers,relatives,brothers and sisters, to justify and calm down the sex scandals of crimes upon Chinese women by Mr.Hujintao and Chinese leaders and Japanese soldiers into the scandals of love affairs and prostitutes, no-choice physical needs and behaviors. This is not only a scandal of human being and family and politics, this is a planned political traps about re-distribution and re-construction of international and regional political, economical and social interests and orders, which Chinese and Japanese in yellow and Asia have competed, impacted, penetrated and tried to reach cooperation for generations with violence of wars and political and economies. The Chinese national Chairman, Mr.Hujintao, the man with fatherhood from Japan and having blood of Korean and Chinese, my father and what he has done upon me along with the rest bastards are the significant evidence of this aims. By abusing, persecuting, harming and murdering me slowly and inevitably, they have the achievements of easing and clearing all the historical and present conflicts and evidences of scandals and crimes upon Chinese people and their bastards with the minimum individual cost, me, an innocent people to win the most possible opportunities to cooperate and control, Chinese by Japanese or Japanese by Chinese in this new form of relation as a routine of evolution for China and a much better opportunity to win the survival and development spaces for Japanese : ally to take place of the failed and dirty relation of invading ,robbing, controlling and exploiting China. I am planned, chosen and born to be the one with my whole sacrifice and the minimum cost of sacrifice to Sino-Japan for the past and presents conflicts and hatreds, since I am the only one real prince born by the present Chinese national chairman and his legal wife according to Chinese tradition and habitual laws, for now this background and reputation known and not publicized for Chinese, Japanese and world public makes my murdered individual sacrifice deserve all the above functions and values for them but only not for my survival and development of a normal and healthy life of human being. I was born to be sacrificed as the whole for my life but the minimum but most powerful costs of value for Chinese and Japanese.

I am seeking for an opportunity to live and work as a citizen that could have from the respect, support, protect and administrated by laws and moralities of a country of government and society.

Thats exactly why most of those viruses uses the email address book so it looks like an email from a friend.

Even when it appears to come from a friend you should have a healthy

German-to-English via AltaVista "Babel Fish" Translation
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/e363b5117ffea249

Hello dear OM's and user of Sony world receivers, with the study of the connection diagram of a SONY ICF-7600G, daá the socket of the external antenna was noticeable to me by a 470-Ohm resistance and a 100-uH throttle with the internal tension is connected by approx. 6V!
That walk naturally after the Anschluá of one active threshing floor with remote supply. First attempts with a low-noise universal transistor (BC 239 or BC 549) brought surprisingly good results. The circuit could be hardly simpler, since the Collector resistance is present already together with uncoupling in the Empf"nger. Only for the base voltage muá to be still provided. Naturally one is in such a manner "primitive" circuit which the Groásignalverhalten concerns beyond of property and bad to settle. But for the vacation far starting from the civilization and groáen radio stations, the circuit is suitable better than then Y throw Y. Even with an additional entrance filter for the delimitation of the range on approx.. 3-30 MHz (against strong medium-wave transmitters), the circuit with something fate in a 3,5mm jack plug laeát itself accommodates. With 75cm the whole thing less place in the luggage takes wire away as antenna and an appropriate 50-Ohm extension line from RG-174 than the SONY Jojo during clear level rise. One can fasten the antenna with suction cup, Klipse or plaster to the window and one needs no more wires by the hotel room to then stretch.

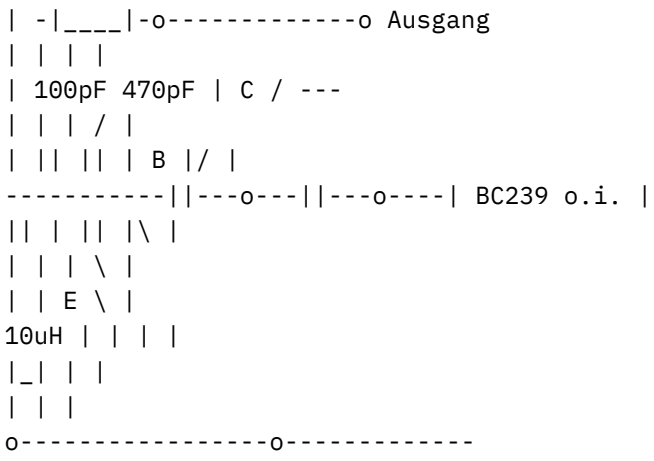
Here now the really simple circuit:
V 0,5 - 1m 220k ---
| Draht ____ | 50 Ohm



Attention that the internal tension is switched off with FM enterprise, functions the whole only to 30 MHz. Who would like to hear also occasionally FM restaurant act ions, and no desire has continuously umzustoepseln, muá still another additional filter for the UKW range to construct themselves, and to above circuit parallel put. If the antenna wire is made long then 75cm, it affects UKW as passive 1/4-Lambda-Staebchen, thus daá the inserted teleskopantenne to remain pushed in can. It would still interest me whether also different then Y Y put such a phantom powering on the external antenna socket. Perhaps the circuit can be used then also there. I had already made myself a suitable jack plug with light emitting diode, in order to test with a resident dealer times the world receivers. It had however fear, daá I which make broken could, rear.

Much fun when tinkering and...

Was wondering if it is safe to listen to Shortwave radio without terribly long external antenna during such time. I actually like the crackle pops along with the fading audio. Would I damage the radio by doing this? Radio is Sony 2010 with about 10 ft. long antenna slung near the window.

Looks like they now have SDR Transceivers too ! ~ RHF

The FLEX -First Truly Open Source Software Defined Amateur [HAM] Radio Transceiver
FLEX SDR => http://cgi.ebay.com/_W0QQitemZ150128663265
The FLEX SDR-1000 is the world's truly open source Software Defined Radio (SDR) available for amateur use that overwhelmingly has superior RX performance over conventional radios exceeding it's price class and is easily upgraded with new software features provided at no additional cost. Receiver dynamic range and selectivity are in the top performance class of all Amateur Radio Transceivers.

Hi Rich

Info on the DE1121 is scarce on the web; here a comparison with the DE1103 I wrote when I first received mine:

-review starts here

Here's my opinion after about 6 hours of use! E&OE.

==========

Foreword

Any review of the DE1121 is invariably going to dissolve into a list of likes and (many) dislikes with a bunch of 'features we'd like to see' thrown in. Although the firmware is updatable it is likely that this option will be mainly reserved for bug fixes rather than improvements to the UI. Instead I'm purely going to look at the DE1121 alongside the DE1103 (which is easily the jewel in Degen's crown). In this vein I will largely overlook the MP3 player as the DE1103 hasn't got one and will concentrate on the radio.
General observations.

One improvement is the overall shape; the DE1121 is more compact than the DE1103 and less likely to topple when standing upright. The aerial can be raised vertically when the radio is propped. The finish, a black rubberised coating, looks prone to marks and scrapes (so look after it) but shoudn't be affected by dinks like the metal-fronted DE1103. It takes three AA batteries lengthways (the DE1103 is 2 x 2) and again the battery flap is retained. Ergonomically it is quite good; the tuning knob is less subject to accidental movement - mainly due to its Tecsun style notchy motion - and the multitude of buttons are easy to select. 'Awake in bed' listing is going to be difficult as the buttons are not illuminated and are hard to find by feel, there are no braille dots. Timekeeping is better too but this might be sample variation.

The speaker is a little poorer with less range and is noticeably coloured. Audio at switch-on can also be an experience, after a few pops and bangs the volume level begins at the level set for the radio sans-MP3 until it the player starts up and adjusts the volume again. Also MP3 playback is much louder than radio. Luckily the volume control has dedicated buttons unlike the more awkward and ponderous DE1103 so this is a minor niggle.

Listening through earphones, the DE1121 is a significant improvement with a lower noise floor from its audio amp. It can also accomodate two sets of earphones as the MP3 jack isn't disabled when docked. The supplied earphones are cheap quality but the audio is very good.

Performance.

Not as good as the DE1103. The lack of the high IF suggests that the internals may have evolved from the DE1102. However FM is very sensitive and most stations can be cleanly received with the whip stowed. I have not experienced the instances of ghost images raised by another user but there are no really powerful transmitters near me (obviously I can't easily test for overloading either). A dedicated aerial jack allows the DE31 to plug straight in and reception, as you would expect, becomes strong and clear. SSB is also there but, in my tests, was noticeably quiet and the volume needed to be raised to really pick out the voices. The DE1103 is still easily the best for SSB, the tuning wheel is better suited for chasing around. Good DX capability on MW although again a little weaker than the DE1103; possibly a smaller ferrite. In short, it's not going to set the world on fire, the DE1103 is more of an out-and-out receiver.

User Interface.

Here's where it gets grim. I got the jist of it in a few hours but it is awkward, although not unusable by any means. If this is going to be your main radio then you should pick it up easily enough but it will be hard to switch from this to a more conventional receiver and back. A menu system is used so three buttons really cover most of the functions. Nevertheless there are a few bugs apparent, especially in the alarm / timer record areas, but these might get shaken out later. Still it is far from intuitive.

The radio has two basic modes of operation; preset mode and normal 'search' mode. The latter is the easiest to use, and all the presets can be temporarily brought up with one button and browsed. Tuning by direct entry, jog wheel, +/- steps and scans (about 6 increments a second) are all there, and an analogue tuning scale display is nicely implemented. The jog wheel is not as good though, the DE1103 is the better radio for aimlessly browsing the bands. One excellent feature is the FREQ.txt file which holds 100 named stations × 4 frequencies per station and can be uploaded from a PC into the MP3 player and imported into the radio. This makes memory management a breeze but there is an even bigger bonus. Whenever you tune through a band and land on a frequency that is already stored, the station name appears RDS-style in the display. This is a great improvement over the DE1103's hexadecimal system. The only headache is the lack of an export option so any new stations that you may discover and add to the memory pages will also need to be manually added to the PC file to keep things in sync. Nevertheless this single feature makes up for the poorer wheel.

Conclusion.

I've now sold the DE1103 because, at the end of the day, given the choice I would grab the DE1121 instead. Despite being easily the better receiver, the DE1103 is plain and dull. The newcomer is fiddly, frustrating and slightly less capable but much more fun to use in a masochistic way and the station names and unattended recordings make all the difference. The final factor to consider is price. The Degen is easily worth the money. However the Kaito KA1121 is significantly more expensive (its price has just been raised again) and the T&K version is extortionate. It does offer wider coverage, is ROHS compliant and is actively supported by T&K (its firmware is up to v1.3 already). However the Degen will be ROHS compliant by April and has menus in English instead of German. Also if you really wanted the extra coverage you would probably also want a more capable receiver in the first place, the DE1121 is perhaps not the first choice for the serious listener.

As time passes it is becoming clear just how good the DE1103 really is. If the DE1103 is the DXer's friend, the DE1121 is it's idiot little brother that can't be relied upon but knows all the girls. Buy one.

Naw, go ahead. How do your feet feel, a little tired? Maybe you could sock them in some hot water, leave the heater coil in.
Want to hear better, put a headset on, there that's a lot better. See you around!!!

No, it's ok. If you were the only antenna around and it was way up high then no but you don't have anything to worry about, I THINK.

There will probably be a string of real-life situations where a strike has actually happened but in a built-up area the charge will almost certainly discover an easier path to ground than through the radio, especially if it is running on batteries. I would be interested to see if any of the group have experience of the preamp circuitry being damaged by the strong rf bursts from nearby lightning though!

ish,

Save your Sony ICF-2010 Receiver {They are Collectors Items}
-and- Use a Low Cost 'portable' AM/FM Shortwave Radio instead.

Listening to the Radio {Safely} During a Thunder & Lightning Storm :

1 - Use Battery Power Only
- No AC Power Connection at all.
- Ground Wire Connection at all.

2 - Use the Radio's built-in Whip Antenna Only
- No External Antenna at all.
- Stay away from Windows.

3 - Insulate Yourself from Everything
- Lay Flat on your Back in the middle of the Floor with a Pillow under your head away from everything.
- Touch Nothing and have the Radio at Arms length.
- Stay away from Metal Objects

now - relax and enjoy listening to your radio -until-the hairs start to stand-up all over your body . . .

RHF, yes indeed I always power my radio using a rechargeable 6 V cell modified with 4.5 V output. And, how do I ground the radio? There is no "ground screw" in Sony. Do I simply earth the antenna? TIA.

I run off a 12v D50 truck battery all the time, I turn the charger on when I go to bed or out. I also use a very good ground rod down 10 feet and if it was in a dry area I would water it just like I do my flowers. I'm sitting on water here so no problem but in the desert I put down a 50 foot steel water pipe with dripping water 24 hours a day and a #10 copper wire on a ground rod pushed out the bottom.

AVG Free antivirus will scan any incoming mail from your ISP's mail server and delete the virus.

http://www.free.grisoft.com/doc/1 is free for use on personal use on Mailwasher will bounce spam and tell the sender that it is an invalid email address.

Would you be injured? No.

Your radio? Not likely. But that's not assured.

You don't have to be directly struck to damage you radio. A nearby strike can easily raise electric potential in the surrounding area sufficiently to induce a current into metal objects, your antenna being one of them.

2010 is particularly susceptible to static damage, but it's by far not the only item that's vulnerable.

A few years ago, during a particularly spirited discussion on the group, I had my radios on during a rather mild and not terribly close thunderstorm.

Now, I run have an active splitter feeding my radios from common antennae. And that night the Eavesdropper was switched in, and I had 4 radios going.

At one point, there was a fairly distant flash of lightning out the window, but no thunder. And there was a pop on all of the active radios.

And then silence.

The static strike had induced a current spike in the antenna, and taken out the active splitter.

The radios, themselves, were not damaged, but the active splitter was demised.

For the most part, there's no reason to be concerned about listening in a thunderstorm. And an indoor antenna will rarely, if ever, pose a problem under such conditions.

But be advised that some electronics are sensitive to nearby static strikes, and can be taken out without direct contact.

Good listening.

Filerglass Tent Poles are lightweight and breakdown

also do not function as a Lightning Attractor like a

Worms do that. There's an easy way to prevent that. Make an address book entry beginning with "!" as the name. Use something like wormalert@ca.com for the email address. That address is not valid as far as I know. Now make another address book entry, this time the name begins with "Z". Now if you get a worm mailer, it will surely start at the beginning or the end of your address book. When it tries to send to either of these two addresses at the top or bottom, of the list, you should get a message pop from Outlook Express or Outlook. I don't know about other mailers but something similar should happen.

Yes, the 2010 IS particularly sensitive to ESD (electrostatic discharge) and even though an antenna is indoors, voltage CAN be induced into it from nearby storms.

Try this experiment. Take an NE-2 neon bulb; connect one lead of the bulb to your indoor antenna. Connect the other lead to any convenient ground. Wait for a nearby thunderstorm (2-4 miles away). Please note how many times the bulb flashes. The NE-2 lights at about 60 volts. Your 2010 may not like this. Even though the antenna is "indoors", this experiment will clearly demonstrate that a significant voltage can be induced into even an indoor antenna. So, it all comes down to "How lucky do you feel?" and how much you value the 2010.

The following website should be of interest to HF propagation watchers:
http://www.solarcycle24.com/

Movies and pics of recent flares from Sunspot group 960. Is it an old cycle 23 spot group, or new cycle 24 spots? Has the new solar cycle begun its upswing, bringing with it rapidly improving DX conditions?
Or will conditions fade back to baseline in a few days or weeks?

Only time will tell. :)

I'm betting we're right there at the change-over, and 960 will be a "transitional" spot.

At any rate, the conditions have been better than average the last few days, from my random sampling. It's worth trolling higher than usual for signals and perhaps catch a new one. :)

I've got a LED flashlight. (3 LEDs, 2 X AA batterys)

If it's ON, and I hold it near an AM radio,
there's a definite "whistling" in the radio.

I had assumed it was battery direct to LED.
What's oscillating ...enough to affect the radio ?

Are you sure you are not blocking the antenna from receiving the intended signal and then it is hearing an internal noise? Try bringing other (metal) object close the same way and see what happens.

Yes, I'm in NYC. Not hearing the KA0PSE beacon just now. However, I am hearing KC9GNK on 28283.6 khz.

10 meter beacons are pretty fun. I find myself looking for them more and more often these days.

The latitude of the new spot will be a good indicator of which cycle it belongs to. The first spots of the new cycle should appear near the equator while those from the old cycle have moved toward the poles.

I'm going to hazard a guess that these are "white light" LEDs.

Those require about 3.6 volts to operate. 2 x "AA" = 2.4 (NiMH/NiCAD) or 3.0 (alkaline).

You'll notice that almost all of the el-cheapo plastic LED flashlights with white LEDs use either two 3 volt lithium coin cells (for the keychain type) or three AAA or AA cells.

But that's a bit long and inconvenient, so a small DC-to-DC converter is used to step up the voltage from 3 volts to 3.6 or so. To make the transformers very tiny and efficient, the frequencies used are a lot higher than your 60 Hz AC power. What you're almost certainly hearing on your AM radio is either the ON/OFF switching of power into the transformer, or a harmonic of that ON/OFF switching.

In the early days of computing, before sound cards (or even enough CPU horsepower to think about making anything fancier than an text display), hobbyists would write software programs that would indirectly cause music on AM radios by running different patterns of use over the lines running out of the CPU. Same idea, just they were doing it deliberately and your flashlight does it as a side effect. :)

The newer versions of the 2010 had diodes installed in the antenna input circuit to reduce the sensitivity to static electricity. I don't think the 2010 was more vunerable to static charge than other portables after Sony made this modification.

Now we are getting a little ridiculous. if lightening will jump thousands of feet, what in the world would make you think that a little bit if metal such as a tent pole would attract it away from where it was headed in the first place? Youre talking about hundreds of thousands of volts, if not more. You think that fiberglass wouldnt conduct electricity at that kind of voltage and current? Please :)

Not really as those worms come with their own mail server, they don't use Outlook (Express) to actually send the email. They dont even use the ISPs mail servers to avoid detection.

I've seen it hit a large open tent with solid steel poles. There was an arc from the pole to a guy using one of our TV cameras. It took out all the electronics in the mobile production van and knocked the guy to the ground. If that bolt hadn't branched to some trees and a small TV broadcast tower, he would have died. BTW, it also took out the transmitter, and the station was off the air for several hours while the plate supply was repaired.

Q: Why doesn't lightning strike the same place twice?

A: Because the same place isn't there anymore.

That's good news. Here's hoping the RP3100 moves out of the vaporware

It's impossible to know beforehand whether you would damage the radio because there are so many variables. Just be safe and turn the radio off, disconnect the external antennna and collapse the whip.

Lightning is tough stuff! I have seen before where it hit the ground and ploughed a furrow like y'all wouldn't believe.Get a flouarescent light bulb (the old style kind, new ones are still available in the stores) and sit it on something outside.Next time it's stormy weather, look out your window and see if it lights up once in a while.You can see it better at night time. www.lightningstorm.com

Right... Remember the Degen 1108, after all...the grand champion of Chinese vaporware receivers. Oh, the rumours that abounded on that radio. If the KA1121 is the basis of all the rumors of the dream-portable '1108, then, well, it certainly fell short of all that expected capabilities that were being discussed in this and other fora.

The path that lightning takes is from the bottom up.Or so I once read.Lightning puts millions of tons of nitrogen into the air.A lot of the bulk of trees is nitrogen.We are breathing in some nitrogen every time we take a breath of air.And oxygen and neon and dust and other thingys too.

For a period of time, the paint Drake used on their 7 line that broke down after time and became a sticky mess. The only real alternative is to strip, prime, paint and bake the cabinet. I have seen some fixes for the sticky paint and they all look to be a half fix at best. You can also send the cabinets to Hartzell to get an original finish, but that solution os not cheap. Anyone paying almost $200 for an MS-7 that is described as near mint, certainly is not expecting to pay out another $75-->$100 to get it made right.

So you're saying all worms are created to operate the same way. I think not. What I described has happened in the past. I did not simply dream it That's interesting information, thanks for posting it. I would have to think that an otherwise new MS-7 speaker that had been stripped and repainted would be worth considerably less to a collector because it was no longer original.

Uh, that was supposed to be a joke...a little humor. (I know , very little) <grin>. I'm pretty sure most people realize that the Empire

But, as they say, if ya gotta explain it...

I have repainted Drake 4 line cabinets using the same splatter finish technique that look identical to the original. You need an air brush with some modified nozzles.
Unless you have seen the sticky paint, it is hard to imagine how disgusting it is- everthing that touches it, hair, dust, etc gets imbedded in the finish.
The concern of most collectors is the front panel, but one would certainly want to know about the cabinet finish.

And you're right Steve, in Martyn World it was "sticky mint". You just have to learn to translate.

With an indoor antenna of that length, I wouldn't worry about it.
There are too many other things for the lightning to hit. If a storm is particularly bad, you may want to disconnect the AC cord from your 2010 and run on batteries, but that's about it.

2307. small variable capacitors (measured in uF)? measuring capacitance?

I would like to hook up a variable capacitor to some audio circuits I built for learning about synths and amps (schematics are here:
http://www.geocities.com/usenet_daughter/tone_generators.htm)
http://www.runoffgroove.com/littlegem.html
http://www.runoffgroove.com/ruby.html
http://makezine.com/09/crackerboxamp/
)

because in some of these the capacitors change the pitch, tone or other qualities.

These circuits run off a 9V battery and use capacitors with ratings such as 220 uF
100uF,
0.1 uF,
0.01 uF
0.047 uF
so I would want variable caps in this range.
Do these exist? Online all I am seeing is ones rated in pF.

Also, assuming I find these, and get them working in the circuit, and find a desired setting for a capacitor, how do you measure the capacitance? I have a multimeter but have really only used it to measure ohms.

Thanks...

They'd be HUGE. Easily as big as a fridge or a car, even a truck in the case of 220 ?F.

What matters is the timing, as it's timing that matters in amps and synthesizers, except for power supplies or sample and hold circuits where capacity is more important.

To get long timing with small capacitors, use large value resistors, and make sure you have low leakage capacitors.

I live in one of the worst places in the world for lightning. I have had battery powered equipment explode, and a SVGA monitor killed during a storm. It was not only off, the cables were wrapped around the base because I was rearranging my computer desk when it started. The building had no windows, yet some of the strikes were so close that the flashes lit it up like the noonday sun. I also felt the static charge when several of them hit the marsh behind the radio shack. The thunder was knocking equipment off the shelves, as well. The news reported over 15,000 strikes during that storm, and I was at the center of it.

Then it wasn't funny, or its so old that the Social Security office has lost its paperwork.

You might think lightning is funny, but around here you hear news stories of people being hit because they didn't take it seriously. People run and hide under trees, play golf in the rain, and do other stupid things, and die from it.

If you want to join them, its your choice, but down make others think that lightning isn't serious business. T have seen chucks of concrete blown out of buildings from direct strikes.

One time when I was in Florida, I was gassing up my raggity old van at a gas station.There was a golf course right across the highway.An elderly guy in his golf cart drove across the highway to buy a cold soda pop.There was a golf club in his golf bag that had an electric lamp cord taped to the handle of that golf club.He said it is his electric golf club.

The issue is not whether the fiberglass pole would conduct better or worse than the metal pole, but rather, the issue is where the discharge originates.

There are multiple phases of a lightening strike. Two significant phases, the visible ones, are the leader stroke and the return stroke. The leader stroke is from cloud to sky. It's often not visible, or obscured by the return blast. The leader stroke will strike an object, and often, but not always, create an ionized path that will facilitate the return stroke. It's the return stroke that contains the Wrath of God energy. And the return stroke originates at the surface and moves from ground to sky.

The leader stroke, like all electrical phenomena, seek the path of least resistance to ground. Height and conductivity will matter most, here. If there is a high object of relative conductivity, the leader stroke will move there. Living tissue, owing to the solutes within it's fluids, will have a greater conductivity, and/or break down resistive materials under heavy voltage more readily than a fiberglass pole. So, the use of fiberglass is often, but not always, an effective measure of safety where electrical storms are an issue, because an ionized path can be created more readily elsewhere with much lower electric field strength.

A metal pole, however, presents a number of electrical advantages to both the leader stroke and the return blast. Among them, besides the obvious enhanced conductivity while in contact with the ground, is the high curvature at the top end of the pole. High curvature on a conductor concentrates the electric field flux offering a dramatically much easier release of current than a flat object. This is why users of a Van De Graaf generator note a corona discharge around the heads of tacks, points of pins, and the like. A metal pole, stuck in the ground offers an enormous level of electric activity that should a potential develop, a discharge would happen at a much lower potential. Making both leader stroke and a return blast more likely than with a fiberglass pole should conditions develop.

It also means that many such strokes may be dissipated before they can become dangerous by releasing electrons through corona discharge at points of high curvature. This is how lightning rods work. But in the case of metal tent poles, the ground system is random, not engineered for efficiency, and poles of even height are often too few in number to offer sufficient corona release to forestall a stroke.

So, a metal pole becomes more dangerous than a fiberglass pole when conditions are right for lightning to occur.

You cannot buy variable capacitors with these values, but you could make up or purchase an arrangement of switches and fixed capacitors quite cheaply which a) would be the next best thing and b) would directly address your
"how do you measure the capacitance" question. Commercially they are called Capacitance Substitution Boxes or Capacitance DecadeBoxes . They're not infinitely variable, of course, but are finitely practical!

Nice. I'm not sure that's what the OP wanted, (more likely a single continuous control of something), but if this switched-cap box were built to 1 nF resolution, for $40 extra or so, you can add a variable capacitor shown on the page David linked to: http://www.stormwise.com/page3.htm

That way you can have any infinitely variable value, just not in one sweep.

Well, I intentionally didn't suggest adding a variable as a) it would re-open the Pandora's Box of how to calibrate the thing, and, b) the combined tolerances of the fixed components would make a nonsense of such calibration anyway.

As the OP sounds as though he may want several capacitors to be simultaneously variable his best homebrew move may be to build up a number of simple, two or three decade BCD-style, successive approximation systems. Each will need 4 switches and capacitor combos (15 caps of one value) per decade - a nice little homebrew project.

Well, I intentionally didn't suggest adding a variable as a) it would re-open the Pandora's Box of how to calibrate the thing, and, b) the combined tolerances of the fixed components would make a nonsense of such calibration anyway.

As the OP sounds as though he may want several capacitors to be simultaneously variable his best homebrew move may be to build up
a number of simple, two or three decade BCD-style, successive approximation systems. Each will need 4 switches and capacitor combos (15 caps of one value) per decade - a nice little homebrew project.

Initially, I didn't assume the OP wanted a large variable capacitor at all, but was mistakenly trying to match fixed sizes with variable sizes without considering why such things are not common practise. Calibration aside, the variable I suggested adding IS a viable idea, assuming your switched-cap box is valid. After all, if you CAN get any value, then you set it as you need. If it's tuning frequency, you measure the frequency.

But as I said WAy early in the thread, first reply, if you really want a sweep of possible timing values, just use a fixed cap and a variable pot, as standard. The OP was talking about synthesizers, after all, he mentioned them explicitly.

Another thing: That variable cap on the page David (and I) linked to, is more than 1 nF. So long as the fixed caps had a tolerance tight enough, it should cover (1.398 nF allows for greater than 20% tolerance on nominal 1 nF increments). Not that any of this matters, in practise.

I wonder if anyone has info on my graduation present in 1963. It's a General Electric transistor portable in a brown leatherette case (purchased in Canada), model 67R18. It pulled in all the powerhouse AM stations (including WLS and WWVA) at night when I was working in North-western Ontario.

Good quality tents use aluminum poles. Question is, how many poles

I'm retired and going to be moving across country to smaller quarters and have a lot of stuff that I'd like to take with but reality is reality. I'm not under any pressure to sell and am interested in getting a fair price. I think the best way to get a fair price is to put it on eBay or some other auction. I guess I could have my own. I'm not intersted in low ball offers (and may not respond) or trades unless it's an older US made acoustic guitar by Martin or Taylor or maybe a US made 5 string banjo. This stuff has been in storage for 10 years or so and I won't have the time to do much testing, describing will take enough time. I've fired up few pieces in the last few months and all worked and I know some have problems, but I would say like Fair Radio in Lima, repairable. This is a partial list, more to come as I get into the storage. On most of the stuff I have a fair idea of its hamfest value which is generally lower eBay. I'll structure my eBay posting based on the most requests for a certain piece. email direct to: kolesnik@sbcglobal.netski leave off the ski.

As others have mentioned, these values are not widely available in variables partly because they are unweildy, and partly because they are rarely needed.

Take a look at your circuits. Many of the capacitors are "uninteresting".
For example, if you look at your "little gem" amplifier, the 100u is simply filtering the supply (looks like a little overkill), the .01 appears to be mostly DC blocking, although it is small enough it might have an efffect on bass response. Ditto for the 220. The only one that looks like it might be interesting to experiment with is the 0.047. The other circuits are similar. Capacitors have all sorts of functions in various circuits, and for many of those functions, playing with the values isn't very satisfying.

Before you go building these things and playing with them, I would suggest modeling them in some SPICE flavor or another. This would allow you to experiment with the frequency response without actually building the circuit. Once you have seen some interesting SPICE responses, then go buy some capacitors.

As far as measuring capacitance, you can buy meters, more commonly LC meters, and many multimeters include them. You can also make an LC oscillator, measure its frequency, then put the unknown C in parallel with the C in the oscillator, and measure the frequency again. You can then calculate the unknown C. Another way is to put the unknown C in series with a known resistor, put some RF across it, and measure the voltage drops with an RF probe. Again, a little math reveals the unknown C.

Hi:

Video signals for NTSC, PAL, and SECAM television are transmitted on AM carriers.

My question is, let's say I have a television set that is capable of receiving and demodulating FM video carrier waves. What would I see on the TV? I am aware that no company uses FM video. Would I see sawtoothlike patterns on the screen due to frequency-modulated electric fields present in the environment?

I'd really like buy a TV with a FM-video receiver; I want to find out what FM-video disturbances in the SHF [Super High Frequency] frequency-range look like. I am sick n' tired of AM video.

AM should be used for analog audio. FM should be used for digital video.

Wal Mart still is selling analog CRT TVs out the wazoo, they have about a dozen different brands. Whoever is in charge of merchandising in Bentonville doesn't know about it either. The weird thing is, Wal Mart just remodeled the electronics sections in their stores to wedge in flat screen TVs, and ended up with a huge section devoted to CRTs and about six different flat screens, most of which are TFT (analog) sets. I saw that and thought, boy are they gonna be sorry. They also gave the heave ho to the cheap HD converter they were selling before. Guess the profit margins weren't high enough for the Arkansas suits.

It is nearly impossible to get any HD converter at all unless you're on the east coast. Best Buy sells a Samsung-for $180-but it's hidden among the DirecTV boxes, on the bottom shelf. They have tons of HD ready TVs, but what they don't tell you is that most of them need the converter to receive HDTV. If you don't shell out extra for the converter, you get analog TV. Same thing with cable, or satellite, you need their special box to get HD signals. The vast majority of America doesn't realize this, so the feds will switch off analog and everybody will be blindsided.

The FCC promised $50 converters on every street corner when they ordered the switchoff of analog, but that never materialized. The price of a box has gone down only slightly from 2 years ago. The govt is too spineless to order corporations to promote HD converters, or sell them for subsidized prices, or even notify the public that analog is about to be switched off. The only mention I've seen has been in newspapers-in the columns written by the chitchatty not-real-news columnists hidden on the inside. There has been virtually zero mention of this on the nightly news, or on TV newsmagazines, or in Time or Newsweek.

I'm starting to think it's deliberate-they WANT people to panic when their TVs get switched off, then rush out all at once to pay $3000 for a converter box and $15,000 for a TV. Sony did the same thing with the Playstation 3-created a hysteria for the product, artificially limited supply, then milked the frenzy for all it was worth. In the end, the PS3 was far inferior to the Nintendo Wii. Six months later, the Wii is still a strong seller while PS3 units collect dust. Everybody who paid thousands of dollars for the PS3 on ebay suddenly realized that they got ripped off big time. Sony probably lost many customers that they'll never get back. Sony probably won't be around for much longer-they're still focused on money losing small time consumer electronics like the Discman. They needed a PS3 frenzy to save the company. Now people realize that they were scammed, and Sony is in extremely deep doo doo with formerly loyal customers who feel used. The corporations that are looking to create a panic over high definition TV and radio are sailing in the same dangerous waters. People will riot over the sudden switchoff of TV and pay huge money for HD, only to realize that they've been had. And the government was complicit. When people realize THAT, they'll be furious at the politicians who they already hate, and they may even start talking seriously about a revolution.

You can only pile so much on people before they snap. An unpopular war in Iraq and an upcoming war with a very well armed Iran, the gutting of the job base, the flood of America hating illegals, the constant abuse by corporations, the wealth piling higher in the mansions of billionaires while half of America goes without health care, the politicians who just don't give a damn about the pain, and now the elimination of analog radio and TV, making a billion sets useless, without a squeak of notice. The ruling elite just keeps piling it on, betting that people will just keep taking it without complaint. Eventually, the elite's winning streak will end, and people will start fighting back. They're preparing for it now; Bush has signed executive orders authorizing the President to seize absolute power on the flimsiest of justifications, and to declare an "emergency" that will never end, along with his limitless power. The army will be sent out to squash America's resistance to the new order and "pacify" and "neutralize" the country forever.

Radium,

Some television is actually transmitted using FM modulation schemes, but not for commercial broadcasting. Examples of FM TV are ham/amateur ATV/SSTV, unlicensed 2.4 GHz surveillance links, and a number of point to point and studio to transmitter systems. FM signaling provides benefits in noise immunity and also permits better channel re-use, since it exploits one of the best features of FM called "the FM capture effect", wherein nearly equal strength signals which would otherwise interfere in AM systems will cause an FM receiver to "capture" only the stronger signal and ignore the weaker, even if differences of 1 dB of signal strength exists.

There is no specific answer to what you would see as far as video patterns, and there is no reason whatsoever to expect to see sawtooth waveforms in particular. The demodulated signal from FM will conform to the spectral changes just as the demodulated signal from an AM detector would conform to amplitude changes, and random noise would be considered "snow" in either case. Unless a transmitted signal with a frequency ramp (sometimes called "a chirp") is present, the video would have no sawtooth. A Doppler radar, for example, could generate such a waveform, since some radars create chirped / swept signals. The video scan rate(s) would additionally need to be in the range of the chirp rate to create the appearance of a sawtooth.

FM disturbances in the SHF band are likely to be man-made and not atmospheric, and thus only "viewable" if the "FM Video Receiver" you envision had a demodulator / discriminator whose bandwidth was tailored to a specific transmitted waveform, and even then only if sweep rates were suitable. Absent a man-made transmitter, the SHF environment is mostly thermal noise (both circuit and atmospheric) and only a radio telescope or other enormous aperture / antenna will see beyond the atmosphere.

The choice of using AM versus FM is really way more complicated than "AM for audio" or "FM for digital video". When designing communication systems of any type, the engineer is faced with balancing many issues, and the channel, media, noise environment, interference sources, power budget, multipath, complexity, and cost are only a few of the considerations involved. A highly reliable cable modem to transmit fast digital content may indeed by phase modulated with an amplitude trellis; a secure and interference resistant link may use spread-spectrum frequency hopping AM for digital signaling; and FM winds up being used heavily in many voice communication systems mostly because the capture effect reduces co-channel interference.

The closest I can suggest to what you might enjoy exploring would be a satellite dish and receiver designed for L band which will see and decode some broadcasting which is unprotected / unencrypted. It gets you into the range of SHF, has true TV signaling for public viewing, and is a hobbyist activity with others involved.

According to law, there should be NO analog-only TV's over 13" being sold at this time. All TV's over 13" diagonal measure are supposed to have digital (not necessarily HD) tuners as of March of this year. I don't know whether they're supposed to be able to use 480i/p, 720p or 1080p. I suspect the 480i/p.

No FM shf receiver is built for FM video, because there aren't any FM video broadcast stations. If there was such a receiver and you tuned it to a standard ntsc video carrier, you would probably see nothing (no sync, no video), because the limiter stages would saturate and there would be no AM output.

The Wal Mart store I go to about a mile and a half from me has some small and large CRT tv sets on the shelves and in the boxes right there along with the small and large thin screen tv sets on the shelves and in the boxes.There are about seven more Wal Mart stores in the Jackson metro area.I assume it is same same at those Wal Mart stores too.

Yep,analog small and large CRT tv sets.There is another Wal Mart store I sometimes go to about five miles West of me in Clinton,Mississippi.I was there about two weeks ago.I noticed that Wal Mart store also has some analog CRT tv sets on the shelves and in the boxes.I think the smallest analog CRT tv sets I saw in those Wal Mart stores are 13 inch screen tv sets.They are there.

There was a BBC Horizon programme all about lightning in which they had by a sheer fluke of filming managed to shed new light on why nearby objects get zapped too. The leader strike almost invisibly 'meanders' down from the cloud to the ground but stops just short.
Then a forest of lightning strokes rise from the ground to meet it, emanating from any good surface like a bloke with a golf club etc.
Amazingly they managed to get this on film, only one frame before the main discharge, and it was like white cobras leaping from the ground.
Once one of these touches the leader stroke the cloud is earthed and everything happens but apparently all the electrical damage to nearby objects has already been done by these preliminary strokes. Amazing stuff to actually see!

I've got one (or at least the demodulator part of it). It's called a 'Grundig Satellite Receiver GSR2'. It receives German TV. I use it to watch the German version of the Teletubbies. [Talented chaps, those Teletubbies, speaking German without a trace of an English accent.
However, 'Eh - Oh' in German is still 'Eh - Oh'].

I also sometimes watch that English 'dinner' programme which several German channels transmit on New Years' Eve.

Radio amateurs also often use FM to transmit TV signals. With a little ingenuity (and maybe some modifications), you can actually use satellite TV receivers to watch these transmissions.

>What would I see on >the TV? I am aware that no company uses FM video. Would I see sawtooth-
>like patterns on the screen due to frequency-modulated electric fields
>present in the environment?
No. If the signal is demodulated correctly, you see normal pictures, usually of very good quality (and in colour too, if you have a colour TV set), created by waveforms called 'video'. Potentially, on an AM TV set, you might be able to get some sort of poor quality picture if you could slope-detect the FM TV signal. However, the deviation of normal satellite signal is much too great, and I doubt if you would get anything usable (just a lot of squiggles on the screen, like you suggest).

>I'd really like buy a TV with a FM-video receiver; I want to find out

On a spectrum analyser, you see a wide FM signal, where the deviation is caused by the 'video disturbances'. This is normal.
>

>AM should be used for analog audio. FM should be used for digital >video.
It can be (eg where the instantaneous deviation or frequency corresponds to the value of a digit). However, for digital signals, the boffins have devised all sorts of clever systems of modulation. Some of these can be thought of simplistically as a mixture of AM and FM, but some are really complicated. These are designed to be much more efficient than 'simple' AM or FM.

AM or FM are used for analogue video.

QPSK, or higher order schemes like QAM16/64 are used for digital, with or without (C)OFDM.

I served during Vietnam, but only on US soil. I was scheduled to go, to work at an AFRTS TV station, but I ended up being sent to the station in Alaska, at he US Army cold weather test site. That didn't stop the idiots from screaming and cursing at me when I flew home in 1974.

A friend of mine is in the consumer electronics repair business and he bemoans the fact that Sony no longer provides repair parts for anything over 2-3 years old. "Sorry Mr. Customer, no parts available, just buy a new one". Too bad for all the 2010 owners out there. :-(

Extremely well said--couldn't have said it better myself. Although of all you mention in the paragraph above, I think the concern about the TVs is the -least- of our worries.

Dear All,

I have implemented AEC with and with out subbanding using NLMS algorithm and that code is working fine for all recorded audio files. But for real time audio files this algorithm is not effecting.

If any one know the reason behind this then please give me your valuable suggestions.

Thanks in advance.

I generally treat all questions as sincere unless they are conspicuously juvenile or inflammatory. I am not aware of the trolling reputation / history of this particular individual, but I fully accept the possibility that the inquiry was bogus. It is sometimes hard to separate sincere but poorly stated legitimate questions from those which are deliberately misguided and troll. Let's see how Radium replies, if at all.

I have several pond books and can say I learned MORE online than from the books. Our first pond was put in according to a Tetra Pond Book (a year before we got online) and the information was awful. We have to redo
the
berm on this first pond as we did the larger one this past summer.
There was little mention of soil types and how to stabilize the berm - and almost nothing about predators.

The pond

> 'world' doesn't need another poorly designed, poorly constructed pond.

Which you can make quite easily following the advice in some of the books out there. The pond world doesn't need any artificial ponds at all for that matter! LOL!!! :-) Ponds are fun, a hobby and certainly not necessary for the world to go on.

Some people are on tight budgets and that should be considered - not everyone has a 6 figure income.

"Here I sit in a tent next to a lake with my hands shaking and the coffee helping my nerves. What has this got to do with building a water garden you ask? Well, sit back and let me share the story of my "little water garden" that started a few months back.
Boy, these ponds sure look like a lot of fun to build and our neighbor
fred up the street said it was easy to install yourself.
So I started to dig a hole and everything was going great until I hit
"the Rock", which would later prove to be my demise. I thought I could dig around this rock by hand so I dug and dug and well you get the picture. I went through two wooden handled shovels trying to leverage
the rock out so I ordered a steel shaft shovel from biggertools.com
on the internet. Of course I paid the extra for the overnight delivery(I didn't want to slow my progress). It was delivered the next day by 8:30
AM.
By 9:30 AM I was rushed to the doctor's office by ambulance.....why you ask? Well the steel shafted shovel weighed in at 90 lbs. After digging for about an hour I felt a snap in my back which caused me in turn to drop the shovel on my big toe which would have been fine had been wearing boots...unfortunately I was wearing sandals which do not have steel reinforced straps!!!
I
After a few stitches to my toe, corrective shoes and 2 weeks of therapy
for my back and I was as good as well, well a forty year old.
Back to the rock....Well, I called explosives-r-us and they assured me they could handle this rock. Everything was going well until they pushed the button. The good news is my pond is going to be much bigger than originally thought. The bad news is it blew out all of my neighbors windows. I told him, look you will get much better ventilation this summer that way. He found no humor in the moment.....my insurance company assured me I was covered under the "idiot clause" in my insurance, of course less my deductible.

I hopped into my escort and sped off to the local pond store to get my 30 'x40' liner. With the help of the employees we dropped the liner into the trunk off by sliding it off of the forklift.
I didn't think the noise from my bumper dragging was all that bad..I just turned the 8 track up louder and I didn't notice the sparks from the bumper starting the prairie fire in the lot next to my house.
I pulled into the drive and my wife and I pulled the liner out after using several successful words I learned from my dad as a kid that always helped in situations like this. It was after I got the liner
out
that I noticed the smoke coming from the back yard....remember the sparks
from my bumper?
With a little help from the local volunteer fire dept. we had the fire out in a couple of hours. Man that smoke really does burn your eyes and the looks from my wife were pretty painful also.
The good news is the fire killed all the grass around my pond and now landscaping will be much easier I pointed out to my wife.
The rest of the pond construction was pretty uneventful except for
the new electrical panel we had to install to handle the 25,000 gph pump
I had to have and the fact that the city tracked the lowering of the local reservoir by two feet to me filling up our new pond.
I was able to stock my water garden with some great Koi...the bad news
is my mother-in-law found out I had hocked some of her jewelry to fund this purchase. She has decided not to press charges now and the police said
the ink will wear off of my fingertips in a few weeks.
Which brings me back to the tent and the coffee. My wife said I can move back in as soon as I pay her mother back for the fish and I can find someone to get this Koi tattoo(don't ask) off of my body.
I have had to take two other jobs to pay off the pond related expenses
as follows
2 wooden shovels @ $20.00 ea. $40.00
1 Steel shafted shovel @ $40.00 $40.00
1 Overnight delivery $60.00
Doctor's Office Visit $100.00

Physical Therapy $375.00
Explosives-R-Us $950.00
Insurance deductible $500.00
Pond Equipment & liner $1250.00
Repair Escort Bumper* $150.00
Have Ford Dealer repair bumper correctly $649.00
Donation to volunteer fire dept.
$500.00
New Electrical panel $700.00
City Fine for lowering reservoir
$275.00
Cruise to pay off mother in law $3700.00
Tatoo(From Vinnys Tatoo & Garage) $245.00 Second Honeymoon with wife to Save marriage $5000.00
Camping Gear $875.00
I am now back with my wife and the pond was worth every penny......the lesson, do lots of research, read books, magazines, go on tours and then dig in! Ponding is really very easy and will provide you with a lifetime of enjoyment. Phil Geusz

You said the magic or dreaded word "Koi". Research Koi ponds as they are typically deeper, include bottom drains, settling chambers, Skimmer, UV and filters that may include anything from vortex systems, bead filters, trickle towers, or combos of these items. I built my 16x14x4 with BD, setting pond, bead filter, Skimmer with UV and 45 EPDM liner for $4000. This includes $1000 for coping rocks, plus landscaping, also the cost of concrete block, cement, rebar, plumbing, plants, pump, ect.

In 6 years my Koi have grown to be between 6-8 lbs. They are huge poop makers, so plan accordingly to save headaches down the road.

Happy ponding.

.... nope, dont have to

http://weloveteaching.com/mypond/mypond.htm
.... my pond is made of 2x4 greenwood sides with greenwood plywood, carpet padding, permalon liner, the filter is 2x8 pine with 2x5 cedar front on the filter and around the front. I DO have a big ass air blower @ $400 but it isnt totally necessary. I have a pump for the water fall. Once a year I pull out the plants (to take em inside for winter) and suction out the crud in the filter with a wet vac. I do use a UV light but the filter really sucks the rest out. The pond has been up since 2000 and I can still see the stones knocked out of my lily pot and a couple wrinkles in the liner on the bottom and have never cleaned the bottom at all.
All summer I walk out, sit down, feed the fish. once a week or when I remember I squish the snails attached to the little wimp pump that feeds the UV. A couple times in the summer if I think the water is slowing I pull up the pump to clean off the grate that keeps junk outta the pump. A couple times a year I run 500 gallons or so out and replace. Other than that ..... I just enjoy it immensely. absolutely cheap and simplicity itself to take care of. Ingrid

I couldn't believe we had snow in town here in southern oregon (usa) (not at my house lower down though) just a few days ago. Man - we might have a real winter this year at last, you go ozone! With all of the garbage that was/is going on here in this newsgroup I had actually thought you were one bad dude roy! It's cool now that I see who the real perpetrator is you're all right
in my book roy, later! P.s. - my digital signature is above.

~ jan Jan this brings back a memory for me. One year winter came early and DH did not put the winter fertilizer down in the fall. So it sat in the shed. Then in like late February he put it out- on top of the snow. Yes- on top of the snow! So the snow melted- like 7 inches of it- and some of it ran in to my pond, and in March the water was so pea green thick you could cut it with a knife. The fish were gasping- we set the pumps out early and unbelievably they survived.
I don't think he will do that again. lol -- Koitoy

Yikes! How did he manage to spread it?

I got it put down Friday, course the drop spreader (a cheap plastic one that I brought 10 years ago) broke after just a few rows. The level that opens and closes the hopper broke clean off, so DS put a clamp on it and I just did the best I could with an open-continuously hopper. I put very little close to the ponds, and we got a little rain to wet it but not run-off, so I think I'm safe. :) ~ jan

Probally about the same thing that happens to those cameras filming the Space Shuttles big tank when they are going up.And that camera in the Bruce Willis movie, Armageddon.Bye Bye camera.

About three or four something years ago, I saw an interesting article on the internet about Ice Lightning, or maybe it was Lightning Ice.Something about (I think) Ice crystals have something to do with Lightning.It might have been at www.livescience.com where I read that article.

Our DMV will get you a voters registration card without proof of citizenship but to renew my driver license, I had to provide my original social security card.

Gah. Last time I renewed my driver's license, the DMV wouldn't let me use my SS# as my driver's license number, even though that was the number on my current license, unless I had some other way to prove the number. Your driver's license number isn't valid proof for your driver's license number. Instead they just make up a random number of the same number of digits, which is probably gonna be somebody else's SS#, just not yours. So I went to a stationary store in the same shopping center that made SS cards, and got one with my number on it (using my existing driver's license to prove the number to them) and then took that back to the DMV, and they accepted THAT as proof of my SS#. Sigh.

LG - And To Vote - All you have to do is walk up and read a Name off the Voters List and tell them you are that person. They are not allowed to check any ID -or- even ask for and ID when you Vote.

An Honest "UN" Approved Election that Jimmy Carter would Publicly Monitor would have Each Legal Voter :

Hello fellow Rochestarian. I'm not sure if you mean a national board, or a local AM board? Perhaps here:http://www.nab.org/AM/template.cfm?
section=Home will help.

AM is rather dull unless your tastes are vintage, big band, Christian or you are a republican. Here's a list of the locals (both AM and FM):
http://www.ontheradio.net/metro/Rochester_NY.aspx.

Some of them are rather weak, and you should pick up some that aren't even on the list (I've picked up a station all the way in Olean).

No, they don't. Sony is a $65 BILLION dollar a year company, and game consoles are a small part of that. It made a net profit of over $1 billion last year.

Sony will be around a long, long time.

That is because it is not "ROI."

ROI is "return on investment" or the payback on invested capital. ROI, simplified, is how much you make each year on each dollar invested. Often companies are measured in return on assets, as opposed to investment capital.

Sony's $1.5 billion profit vs. $66 billion in sales gives you the profit margin, which is just about 2%.

Supermarkets often have a margin below 1%. The profit is on volume. Other business may have margins of 20% to 25%, but these are usually service companies, not manufacturers. GE has a high margin, around 12%. Honda has a margin of 5%.

Wireless microphones have been around for a long time. You have to go back to the early day s of radio and electronics to find corded microphones. The ones you see on debates are dummy microphones, with the cords cut off for safety reasons. ;-)

You can't really be stupid enough to compare a car company, a supermarket chain, and an electronics manufacturer's ROI can you?

Honda is considered profitable at 5% because they have time between models to prepare for changes, and retooling costs between models is low when compared to the total operating costs.. 1% is barely holding on for dear life in any business other than a grocery store. The only costs they have control over are tightly controlled. Remember that, the next time you get a cart with a bad wheel, or you notice that the store hasn't been painted in ten years.

Sony probably has close to 1000 products on the market, or in design at any one time. That eats a hell of a lot of profit.

The electronics manufacturer I worked for dropped any product that was below 5% ROI, and some at higher levels. They dropped their C-band commercial satellite equipment when it dropped to a little over 10%, because they wanted to expand their core business that made a lower ROI, but sold for a lot more. The choice was another expansion, or drop a product line. They dropped the 1100 series equipment, which was fairly labor intensive, and retrained the best people to do telemetry work.

Consumer electronics is a cut throat business, and the Sony name has lost the shining recognition it once had. I know a lot of people who will never buy anything with the Sony brand name again, after being screwed several times. They were a pain in the ass as far as support for some of their broadcast video equipment, as well. Some equipment needed a pile of alignment fixtures that you couldn't buy, so you were forced to let Sony into your facility to tamper with the equipment.

Their U-matic and 1" VTRs didn't measure up to what they should have, for the price. The PC boards were low quality, and the solder work would have all been rejected by the QC I had to pass. Did you know that the first Sony U-matics sold to the US Military had a Tektronix/Sony nameplate? They wanted the tape machines, but being foreign made, the military couldn't buy them, so Sony sold them to Tektronix to get around that law. That made Tektronix responsible for the equipment for at least 10 years, even if Sony went out of business, or dropped that product line. The deal also allowed Sony to build some cheap portable scopes for tektronix, sold under the same Tektronix/Sony nameplate.

Is there anything to prevent a republic also being democratic?

As far as I know there are two definitions of, "Republic",
1. A state where supreme power is held by the people, or their elected representatives, or by an elected or nominated president.
2. Literally it means a society with equality between its members.

While a democracy is -
1. (a), a system of government by the whole population, usu. through elected representatives. (b), a state so governed. (c), any organization governed on democratic principles.
2. an egalitarian and tolerant form of society.

Can any USAsian really believe that they live in a Republic, (in the literal sense of the word)?

Can any USAsian really believe that they live in a "Democracy", (in the literal sense of the word)?

In effect both the USA and the UK are now, "Oligarchies"-

Oligarchy,
1 government by a small group of people.
2 a state governed in this way.
3 the members of such a government.

Just consider how Bush and Blair took our two countries into wars that the public, by the large, did not want and you will see that neither state is either democratic nor republican.

We elect these people as our servants to carry out our democratic wishes and they then become the masters and we the servants. It is long past time for the people of both democracies to reassert themselves and demand their appointed servants remain their servants rather than their leaders and/or masters.

Will I now have to beware of black 'copters at dawn?

A democratic republic - or as the decider is fond of saying a "democracy."

We are "bringing democracy to Iraq." Hear it over and over.

More like bringing hypocrisy, but they prefer to use "democracy."

Why??? It seems we think "democracy" is "one size fits all".

Are we too arrogant to at least consider that [fill in the country of your choice] maybe, just maybe, might want some form of government other than "democracy"?

Thanks. An older link at the side of your linked page has the system at 6.4 Mhz.

http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/technology/6129460.stm

I'm guessing the most useful resonant coupling distances are going to coincide with SW frequencies. Governments are likely to protect MW and VHF frequencies, but they'll care much less about SW interference. And this scheme is never going to be close to 100% efficient and is going to radiate like all hell.

Fortunately, the picture in the article you gave looks more like some Heinrich Hertz experiment than a demonstration of a practical application. Maybe this will be obselete before it's developed.

Those agre gross margins, not ROI. When you understand the difference between margins and ROI (hint... one is a P&L metric and the other is a balance sheet one) rejoin the conversation.

P.S. A huge part of Sony's income is not from consumer electronics.

I'm not going to repeat them. They're hurtful to me because they contained abuse that was directed against me by someone else at the time and which got picked up and thrown again in the trial. It is a matter of record but I won't repeat it here.

Why would "they" wish to assassinate your character?

Well, let's put it this way - just because this is the first time it's happened in this way, from these people, on this scale, doesn't mean that it hasn't happened before, on a lesser scale. At university there were people who quite overtly hated me and would have wished something nasty to happen to me. Because of where I went making the wrong sort of enemies is pretty deadly.

"They" would wish to assassinate my character because it had all been done before, and because they knew I would not be able to react in any other way than I'd reacted previously.

This was four, five years ago... sorry, I don't remember. I can remember individual incidents, words which were repeated by different people at different times in different locations.

Around the end of 1992 Private Eye rtan a front-cover with John and Norma Major, with the title "Major's support lowest ever" and John saying to Norma "Come back norma" on the front cover. What can you read in to that? Not a lot, seems like standard fare for PE. The first time I saw it I was in the pub with some people from work. One was expressing doubts to the other (let's call the first one Simon, shall we? and the second one Phil?) about whether what was going on was right. Phil's answer was that if Private Eye was doing it then it must be ok, "they're usually right".

A few days later, again near work, there were some students laughing in the street, "Were you COMING BACK later? But I thought you said you were COMING BACK ha ha ha?" Play on words, you see. Not very nice, either. I had start medication soon afterwards. Clever people, these chaps who think up PE titles. Just slightly lacking in any sense of morality.

What was the date of the broadcast ?
Out of 2 million plus listeners, why should you be the only one that Tarrant was allegedly referring to ?

Sometyime in spring 1994. I can't remember the date, I heard the broadcast in the car - I was going into the office from London that day and just happened to snap on the radio, and hey presto! Mr Tarrant gives us the benefit of his excellent understanding.

It's an alias. I'm not English by ethnic origin. If someone manages to pronounce

No. Never. Not directly.

>>> ##: Also, in summer 1992 I went on a trip abroad to Europe by coach,

What was the name of the coach company and your date of departure ?

It was a national express coach. At dover we boarded a ferry for Holland somewhere.
The company that organized the trip went out of business some time ago, so they won't have records of passengers - so we can't get any corroboration from anyone else that way. We tried all that last summer, ran into a brick wall.

The other thing is in summer 1992 I was visibly ill, so other people in the party might remember that more than anyone getting at me on the coach trip.

Why were you being painted as a "threat"; is this related to a "deep,dark, secret" ?

Aaaarrrrgh. I think I should make clear that that's their created justification rather than the real reason. They started harassing first and then came up with the reasons for it.

Yes, I'm afraid so. Sulpiride, 200mg a day. It's designed to stop people coming up with the sort of ideas you've heard here for the last few weeks. Give him a higher dose!!

In the long term it causes tardive dyskinesia, tardive dementia and general nasty stuff to your brain. So it's three years of sulpiride talking to you here.

Two issues:

How do you stop the neighbors from stealing your power? (or someone like me who would make a resonate trap to capture it and short it to ground)

If people are concerned enough not to purchase a house under powerlines, Broadcast & cellphone towers, how do they expect to get away with something with much higher power levels?

"Gee whiz" is right. The ghost of James Clerk Maxwell is rolling in his grave.

IMHO, it would have to operate as an Industrial/Scientific/Medical apparatus (in the US, under Part 18). Frequencies would then be
6.78 MHz +/- 15 kHz
13.56 MHz +/- 7 kHz
27.12 MHz +/- 163 kHz 10-4 good buddy.

No, they're not. And there's no such thing as an "AM carrier" or "FM carrier" to begin with. The carriers themselves are simply signals at a given frequency. "AM" or "FM" refers to the modulation IMPOSED on those carriers - in other words, how the information to be carried is used to modify some aspect of the carrier signal.

In TV, most systems employ a version of AM to carry the luminance
(Y) signal; the color (chroma) information is carried via a somwhat different version of AM, and the audio is most commonly FM.
The French SECAM system as originally implemented carried the chroma information on TWO frequency-modulated subcarriers.

Nonsense. The choices of AM and FM within the original analog standard definitions were made for some very, very good reasons.
Digital television is a completely different beast, and is presently broadcast using two very different modulation schemes - the U.S. standard (ATSC) using 8-VSB, while the rest of the world (mostly) will be using COFDM under the DVB-T standard.

They just are not ROI numbers. ROI is return on investment, meaning, fundamentally, if you spend capital, what is the rate of return on the capital. For example, if you buy some machinery, over the life of the asset, what additional profit will you make vs. the cost.

Profit margin is the percentage that is profit of gross sales. In the case of Sony, the margin is about 1.56%. In competitive fields, this is not an unusual margin. That is why the stock is trading around its 5 year high right now.

Smarty, big thanks for your detailed response. One big advantage [that I could imagine] to using FM -- instead of AM -- to carry the luminance (Y) signal, is that you can run on your treadmill without seeing those lines on the screen mask your favorite shows. The magnetic signals generated by the electronics in the treadmill causes blinding interference on AM video. FM video is be immune to such disruptions.

The reasons (primarily) behind using the AM visual and FM aural signals for television are:

Visual: Bandwidth. Visual uses what is called 'vestigial sideband'. This means that basically only one sideband carries the modulation, with only a vestige of the other sideband remaining, thereby reducing the bandwidth needed for the visual signal by a significant factor. If FM were used, the entire symmetrical waveform would have to be used, and would use a lot more bandwidth. (Analog satellite television does/did use FM modulation, on the order of 36 MHz IIRC, but bandwidth in the GHz ranges isn't at as much of a premium as on relatively crowded VHF and UHF frequencies

Aural: Coverage. The aural signal (which is sent separately from the visual) is only about 10% of the power of the visual signal.

Unless your treadmill is doing something very unusual, the interference you are seeing is unlikely to be coming in via the RF "front end" of the TV (where the video demodulation is taking place), and so switching to FM from AM wouldn't help. (It's more than likely either magnetic interference upsetting the deflection fields - assuming a CRT-type TV - or the effects of noise coming in on the AC wiring.)

FM for standard "analog" TV is virtually impossible due to the bandwidth requirements of typical FM itself. In the case of "digital" TV - well, for the moment, let's just say that the modulation system used is considerably different than anything we're talking about here, and leave it at that, OK?

See the previous post; it's basically a matter of the enormous bandwidth requirements of FM (note that the standard "deviation" in FM audio broadcast - a measure of how "wide" the overall signal will be - is +/- 75 kHz from the nominal carrier frequency, for a 15 kHz audio bandwidth.
The relationship between the transmitted signal bandwidth and the original signal bandwidth in FM is not a simple one, but let's just leave it at the point of noting that video signals are bandwidth hogs, and TV doesn't even use regular-old-AM as a result of that. (The luminance signal is actually sent via "vestigal sideband AM," one step removed from full suppressed-carrier SSB.)

The audio is FM both to avoid the problems of interference bothering the sound (just as in FM radio), AND to minimize the effects of the video portions of the signal possibly interfering with the audio. A TV channel, though, has relatively lots of room for audio.

FSK isn't exactly "the digital equivalent of FM" in the first place, and the short form answer is no. Digital video is carried in a completely difference manner, and there isn't exactly a readily-separable luminance "signal" as such in the transmitted signal, at least not as something you could identify on a scope as in analog TV - it's all just bits, and it's all packetized.

Catel made some FM return channel modulators and demodulators for CATV systems that fit into a standard 6 MHz channel spacing. They were pure shit. Murky video, at best, because of the reduced bandwidth.
Metrovision had them in their community loop in Greene Township, Ohio and were connected to the United Video Cablevision community loop in Delhi Township, Ohio (Cincinnati, Ohio suburbs) that used standard VSB equipment. To add insult to injury, the school system insisted that their control point be in the Metrovision side, and they used an Apple II computer to generate video to feed the FM modulator. It was absolutely unreadable on any TV screen after passing through the Catel junk. I was in charge of the United Video end of that interconnect project. I built the headend and interconnect point with three RCA Heterodyne Signal Processors.

Radium,

I understand how magnetic fields from your treadmill interfere with your reception. The answer is actually quite simple. You need to run the treadmill in reverse, namely, you provide the power and the treadmill acts as a generator. The benefits are 3-fold:

1. The electric bill in your house will be substantially reduced, since you, and not the motor in the treadmill, create the needed energy. Rather than draw power from the wall, you will create a power source.

2. Your personal energy level will rise, and your ability to perform heavy work will improve. The many contaminants which are now (apparently) clouding your thinking process will lift, allowing you to no longer have concerns about SHF, sawtooth waveforms, or other distractions from your basic circulating chi. Your ying and yang will be simultaneously improved as well.

3. Finally, your TV reception will vastly improve, since this force of treadmill magnetic flux will not only be removed, but you will generate a positive ion flux field which will augment both AM and FM reception.

It will take you some time to learn how to run backwards on your treadmill to achieve this generator action. Do not be disheartened......since the 3 benefits above are well worth the effort.

Always bear in mind that a small squirrel running in its' little cage can do what you are attempting to do. It will help you to repeat the words over and over again:

"I am a squirrel"

"I am a squirrel"

"I am a squirrel"

All of us on this newsgroup know you will be successful.

All of the Americas have been going to FM transmitters. In South America, shortwave is declining as FM transmitters fed by satellite uplinks have become increasingly commonplace. With the declining cost of FM/satellite transmitting, there is really no reason for governments and private groups to maintain shortwave transmitters and deal with such things as erratic solar weather and the thunderstorm activity that wipes out huge chunks of the tropical bands (widely used in SAm) for months at a time. Canadian domestic SW served much the same purpose, but FM relays are much more efficient.

US domestics have always been a joke, except in the first few years after legalization in the early 80s when bold ideas like WRNO were being tried. Those ideas fell away after failing to make any money, and US domestic SW was surrendered to loony religious groups, hate groups, and political conspiracy theorists, with the lines between them blurry and shifting. South American SW is becoming increasingly dominated by religious groups as well, although down there government rules prohibit pay for play radio, thus preventing the free for all seen in the US.

The only places that shortwave still lives is in Africa, where eternal chaos prevents the formation of FM networks, and Asia, where the population is often very diffuse and hard to cover with FM. The Middle East has been shifting to FM, but a severe deterioration in political stability, as is increasingly likely, could send it running back to SW. The Middle East also has seen huge popularity for satellite transmission.

Microwave linked national FM networks were common by the mid-70's, and actually began in the early 60's in countries like Colombia where CARACOL, TOdelar and RCN had extensive microwave networks to feed AM stations.

In the 70's, most audience moved to FM in Latin America, and the links were still microwave until well into the 80's, when satellites were in place to do big domestic feeds.

SW started declining nearly 40 years ago as Ams and then FMs were built in increasingly rural areas and with greater power and coverage.

FM as a link (88-107 MHz) was pretty much prohibited in Latin America by around 1970.

Domestic SW broadcasting is illegal. US SW stations may clandestinely serve the home audience, but are licensed to serve international audiences.

Actually, paid programming has been legal in nearly every country since the 60's or more. Hell, you could rent an entire station if you wanted to, in most places.

There are dpozens of FM networks all over Africa, even in places as remote as Burkina Faso.

Wrong again. Just takes more transmitters. Even Indonesia, which is spreead out and divided into many pesky islands has done it.

In most places, most listening has been on FM for a long, long time.

Surprisingly, I am sure you will find, broadcasting outside the US is often at a par or more advanced than it is here in America.

I'm guessing this scheme would have to be adaptive to be practical. So both the loading of the tuned circuits and the frequency of operation would be variable to maximize coupling under different conditions. If the system sensed excessive losses it would shift frequency.

Not everybody is concerned. Plenty of people live under powerlines and near broadcasters and cellphone towers. It seems like half the people have a cellphone permanently attached to their heads.

"Old outmoded government regulations" would be a bigger impediment to such "progress". Military and amateur frequencies would be protected, but the SW broadcast bands could be fair game.

You can see my original review of the RF Systems DX1 Pro in the equipment section of dxing.info below. This active antenna malfunctioned
after six years of outstanding operation and was returned to Holland for repair. It was received back and re-erected on June 1st 2007 and had been upgraded to the Mk II version.

My impressions of the Mk II is that it is even quieter and more sensitive than the original. It's suppression of suburban RFI is outstanding and I am able to receive clearly very weak and far distant DX with ease. I can compare it with my PAORDT Roelof mini-whip and Datong AD-270 active antenna's. It is substantially quieter and more sensitive than either of these, really in a different and much higher class of it's own.

A sampling of recent catches over the last few days:
10320 khz AFN Pearl Harbour, a 3 kw TX 18,600 km's away
1540 khz ZNSI Bahamas 12,100 km's distant 234 khz RTL Luxembourg 9,400 km's away.
Plus many other exotic catches.

I can highly recommend this active antenna to anyone who is unable to erect a decent wire antenna. It may be expensive, but it is the best and you will enjoy years of superb reception that will soften the shock of the high initial price you paid for it.

I finally got around to do some scanning.

Actually the large or color things were photographed with my new (for me, at least) Olympus SP-310 in raw mode, developed and cropped with RawTherapee and further edited in XnView and PSP4. (As a result, the tables aren't too pretty due to slightly uneven lighting by the built-in flash. Otherwise the cam is great for the ambitious user who wants a compact with extensive manual control, although it is a bit of a power hog even with current firmware and could use a faster card interface.)

The alignment stuff was scanned, which took me a while because my parents' computer was acting up and froze or rebooted like half a dozen times. (It's the caps I guess, either on the mo/bo which had been kinda flaky from the beginning, or in the PSU, Fortron or not.) The black and white level adjustment in XnView (newly discovered and strangely named) proved to be very handy for eliminating bleedthrough and beefing up the contrast.

The resulting images were then compressed with DjVu using DjVu Solo 3.1, which does a great job compressing scanned multicolor and monochrome stuff - PCB drawings in particular are extremely hard to handle with PNG (too large) or JPEG (by the time you've got the file size down, it also looks like poo in the important parts). (A browser plugin that also comes with a standalone viewer can be obtained at the Lizardtech website.) Given that viewing is pretty quick and multi-page documents are possible on top of that, it's a pretty neat format for the web.

Anyway, here's the result:
http://stephan.win31.de/yb400align_pcb.djvu (1071K)
I'll also upload it to the corresponding Yahoo Group.

Until recently, computers must have worked with toaster logic. A toaster also has 2 states after all, and this would explain the issues of heat generation and clock freq scalability (toast change times = c).

Thanks so much for your efforts; the aligment data is very helpful and is very legible. The photos of the component placement don't display well for me, however I took very good photos of both sides of the RF section and by registering my photos over the co-ordinate map in your scans I may be able to generate clear placement maps which I will also post when they are done. Together with the co-ordinate charts this will document the board properly for component call-outs.

At some point I also intend to capture the schematics to a CAD format.

Thanks much again!

Regards,

Michael

In Canada, it takes ONE tech to change a tube. I imagine that's quite a few less than it takes to do the job where you live.

Efficiency is everything.

Now it's my turn. How many US GIs does it take to rape a fourteen year old Iraqi girl and then kill her entire family?

Could you tell a little about the needed ground connection? I understood that this antenna does need a good ground.

initially I had interest in this antenna as I'm located on the top of a apartment building I don't have access to good ground, and I cant erect a wire antenna either. To top things off, we don't even have lightning rods I could use for ground or lightning protection...

Yesterday I lowered my PAORDT mini-whip by 1,5 meter (was about 4 meters high above the roof) and that made the signal MUCH cleaner.

Um, RHF...

I hope you DO realize that the rape/murder m II refers to was a real incident that actually happened in Iraq.

What is "troubling at best" is that you are worried about Mike reporting an actual fact rather than you being outraged by the incident itself... :-(

Glad to see that the good old "blame the messenger" mentality is still alive.

Your pal,
Tommy

P.S.

Seeing as you are in the "quiz" mode...

How many "hearts and minds" of the Iraqis do you think the rape/murder incident won us???

Bonus question:

How many extra "insurgents" did al Quaida recruit because of this incident???

Hi dspame. just a warning. I also travel the world over on my job. i keep an old, vary worn, RS DX390 in the luggage. it's third radio over the last 20 or 25 years. they seem to walk away somewhere between customs and the next port of call. Asia seems to be the worse. and, most of the time, carry-on doesn't help, they still walk off. so do yourself a favor, carry a cheap radio, or one you don't mind losing.

Good DX.

Which groups by market are you asking about. I'm not aware of an am radio board. There are several AM radio clubs, the oldest of which is likely the National Radio Club.

I'm not sure what listening entertainment you are looking for on the local AM band. Just tune around the AM dial and see if you find programming of interest. If you can't hear anything interesting I doubt a station schedule would improve things.

Tuning up and down the dial at night can result in a lot of interesting out of area stations.

If you travel through out SE Asia, you should be able to find one very cheap in Hong Kong or any major city.
One draw back however, some of the radios are NOT marked in english, so check it over before you buy.

Making Windows XP Start 60% Faster

Whenever you start your computer, you are faced with a few moments of thumb twiddling while Windows XP boots and prompts you to log on. Although you should expect to wait for a few moments, sometimes Windows XP seems to boot rather slowly. In fact, you may notice that over a period of time the PC that used to roar to life seems a bit sluggish instead. Fortunately, you can perform several techniques that help Windows XP get the bootup speed you want. This chapter explores how to put these techniques to work.

you maybe experimented with different types of earth and which would work best with this antenna.

I am anticipating an RP3000 price that is 1.5 to 2 times more than the RP2100. So the RP2100 is available for US $100 shipped, and I hope for a price below US $200 shipped for the RP3000. Besides the features you suggested, early photos of the RP3000 also showed controls for numeric frequency entry.

Hmmm, he said "wealth piling higher in the mansions of billionaires".

On June 10, the Associated Press wrote an article titled "CEO compensation flies through the roof".

It says "Compensation for America's top CEOs has skyrocketed into the stratospheric heights of pro athletes and movie stars: Half make more than $8.3 million a year and some make much, much more..."

American Insurgent, it looks like your crystal ball was working perfectly!

Since HF radio is electromagnetic propogation, there is no way that a "magnetic" energy transfer would not interfere. After all, you are not receiving electricity on your HF radio, but electromagnetic waves ("magnetic") which are turned into electricity by your receiver.

Thanks guys. Big help! My friend bought a really cheap Chinese one making a visa run into Burma I think. Paid $10 and it picks up the BBC throughout SE Asia quite well, though it's boxey. He says the BBC (if I understand him) switch the channel they operate on quite frequently though, so it's a bit of searching (or maybe he's referring to local countries that carry the program on different frequencies). But he's retired and has plenty of time. His radio is probably useless to pick up things like classical music from Europe though.

How are you going to get it to "stay near the coil" and still couple any energy into the other end? In fact, at that frequency it is impossible to get much efficiency, so that majority of the RF will be radiated. According to the article, the made id a whole six fet. To double that distance, they would have to put four times the energy into the system. There is enough inefficient crap on the market already. If that idiot can't remember to charge his cell phone, then he doesn't need it. If he's that absent minded, he shouldn't be allowed to drive, or maybe be allowed out of his house.

This smells of a MIT practical joke, to see how many idiots bite before someone blows the whistle, like:

Check out your local library. Look for radio related electronics textbooks, the Radio Engineer's Handbook, the Radiotron Designer's Handbook and similiar books. The ARRL handbooks cover this concept well without a huge amount of math.

Many SW radios -- especially portables -- will overload on strong signals. An SW radio overloaded by a nearby battery charge broadcaster would be blocked out. The effect would be the same as with some car radios which overload near broadcast towers.

Hello,

Have been seeing more and more lists with frequencies of various sorts tagged with being "ALE".

I understand that this signifies Automatic Link Establishment.

Questions:

a. Should I be able to hear these on a normal HF receiver ?

b. Are they AM as well as USB ? Or,...?

c. Are they digital ?
(sometimes or all the times ?)

Thanks.

They sound like short water-dropping like sounds. When you have a output on your receiver and hook that up to your sound in on your PC you can get an ID of the sender, and the ID for the intended target as well, making it more fun as you have an idea what you're listening too.

All the time!

ALE itself is nothing more then an automated way for a bunch of stations around the world to know what frequency between any two of them will give the best reception. They do so by sending out that watery tone to each other on a list of frequencies at regular timed intervals, the receiver then analyzes the signal and remembers which frequency is best at that time for that station.

Actual communications between users of those stations can then be anything. ALE is just a way to take away the trouble of finding correct frequencies, after that the stations can use voice, digital modes, encrypted or not, etc.

I'm not a die hard ALE listener, but I have been diving into it a little lately just to find out what it is. For me personally its prolly not something I will really dive into, as some people are, but at least I know a bit about what it is right now.

Its in use by a wide range of organizations and companies. USA army has a easy to catch ALE net, theres the XSS net which now seems to be identified as UK army, but also African railway companies use it, etc. etc.

Finally, theres PC-ALE for decoding the signal on the PC. Personally I had a hard time getting this one to work (to control my Kenwood R5000), the MARS-ALE version of PC-ALE worked for me however. You don't need to control your radio with it, but without control you can only listen to 1 frequency.

Hope this helped you a bit,

Try googling for Automatic Link Establishment. There are several excellent descriptions of how it works.

The other thing is that the evolution of TV transmission also had to be compatible with older sets. Hence for example the various ways of transmitting chrominance alongside luminance. Or stereo sound alongside mono.

Well, well that all is true, however I recently bought a Eton E5 portable, quite cheap on e-bay for about half of retail price.which has worked fine up till now. The other evening I tried to use SSB as I have done since I bought the unit, and it appears to be 'stuck' on all frequencies - when I tune in to normal LW, AM the unit appears to be stuck on a particular frequency as well even though I can change the frequency on the dial there is no change at all in stations.

At first I thought it was the 'hold' facility on the lock and so I have reset the e5, and also wiped the memory. The same issue! - No SSB, no AM, no LW, and no shortwave. The only thing that works is FM.

I'm none to pleased as I have only had this portable a month.

I'm still trying to find out what is wrong with it, I'm even tempted to open up the unit to investigate.

I will post a reply if I find a solution.
